BEYOND THE CITY
AN IDYL OF THE SUBURBS
BY A. CONAN DOYLE

CONTINUED.

"I don't like those new fangled ideas, ma'am. I tell you honestly that I don't like discipline, and I think every one is the better for it. Women have got a great deal which they had not in the days of our fathers. They have universities all for them. I am told, and there are women doctors, I hear. Surely they should rest contented. What more can they want?"

"You are a sailor, and sailors are always chivalrous. If you could see how things really are you would change your opinion. What are the poor things to do? There are so many of them and so few things to which they can turn their hands. Governesses? But there are hardly any situations. Music and drawing? There is not one in fifty who has any special talent in that direction. Medicine? It is still surrounded with difficulties for women, and it takes many years and a small fortune to qualify. Nursing? It is hard work all told, and none but the strongest can stand it. What would you have them do then, admiral? Sit down and starve?"

"Tut, tut! It is not so bad as that."

"The pressure is terrible. Advertisements for a lady companion at 10 shillings a week, which is less than a cook's wage, and see how many answers you get. There is no hope, no outlook, for these struggling thousands. Life is a dull, sordid struggle, leading down to a cheerless old age. Yet when we try to bring some little ray of hope, some chance, however distant, of something better we are told by chivalrous gentlemen that it is against their principles to help."

"The admiral winced, but shook his head in dissent.

"Thinking, the law, veterinary surgery, government offices, the civil service, all these at least should be thrown freely open to women if they have brains enough to compete successfully for them. Then if woman were unsuccessful it would be her own fault, and the majority of the population of this country could no longer complain that they live under a different law from the minority, and that they are held down in poverty and serfdom, with every road to independence sealed to them."

"What would you propose to do, ma'am?"

"To set the more obvious injustices right, and so to pave the way for reform. Now, look at that man digging in the field. I know him. He can neither read nor write, he is steeped in whisky, and he has as much intelligence as the potatoes that he is digging. Yet the man has a vote, can possibly turn the scale of an election and may help to decide the policy of this empire. Now, to take the nearest example, here am I, a woman who has had some education, who has travelled, and who has seen and studied the institutions of many countries. I hold considerable property, and I pay more in imperial taxes than that man spends in whisky, which is saying a great deal, and yet I have no more direct influence upon the disposal of the money which I pay than that fly which creeps along the wall. Is that right? Is it fair?"

"The admiral moved uneasily in his chair. "You're in an exceptional case," said he.

"But no woman has a voice. Consider that the women are a majority in the nation. Yet if there was a question of legislation upon which all the women were upon one side and all the men upon the other, it would appear that the matter was settled unanimously when more than half the population were opposed to it. Is that right?"

"Again the admiral wriggled. It was very awkward for the giant seaman to have a handsome woman opposite to him bombarding him with questions to none of which he could find an answer. "Couldn't even get the tampions out of his girth," as he explained the matter to the doctor that evening.

"Now, those are really the points that we shall lay stress upon at the meeting. The free and complete opening of the professions, the final abolition of the woman's franchise, and the franchise for all women who pay queen's taxes above a certain sum. Surely there is nothing unreasonable in that—that nothing which could offend your principles. We shall have medicine, law and the church, all rallying that night for the protection of woman. Is the navy to be the one profession absent?"

"The admiral jumped out of his chair with an evil word in his throat. "There, there, ma'am," he cried. "Drop it for a time. I have heard enough. You've turned me a point or two. I won't deny that. But let it stand at that. I will think it over."

"Certainly, admiral. We would not hurry you in your decision. But we still hope to see you on our platform." She rose and moved about in her lounging masculine fashion from one picture to another, for the walls were thickly covered with reminiscences of the admiral's voyages.

"Hullo!" said she. "Surely this ship would have furred all her lower canvas and reefed her topsails if she found herself on a lee shore with the wind on her quarter."

"Of course she would. The artist was never past Gravesend, I swear. It's the Penelope as she was on the 14th of June, 1857, in the throat of the straits of Banca, with the island of Banca on the starboard bow and Sumatra on the port. He painted from description, but of course, as you very sensibly say, it was sung below, and she carried storm sails and double reefed topsails, for it was blowing a cyclone from the south-east. I compliment you, ma'am, I do indeed!"

"Oh, I have done a little sailing myself—as much as a woman can aspire to, you know. This is the bay of Funchal. What a lovely frigate!"

"Lovely, you say? Ah, she was lovely! That is the Andromeda. I was a mate aboard of her—subalternant they call it now, though I like the old name best."

"What a lovely rake her masterly have, and what a curve to her bows! She must have been a clipper."

"The old sailor rubbed his hands, and his eyes glistened. His old ships bordered close upon his wife and his son in his affection."

"I know Funchal," said the lady carelessly. "A couple of years ago I had a 7-ton cutter rigged yacht, the Banshee, and we ran over to Madeira from Falmouth."

"You, ma'am, in a 7-tonner?"

"With a couple of Cornish lads for a crew. Oh, it was glorious! A fortnight right out in the open, with no worries, no letters, no callers, no petty thoughts, nothing but the grand works of God, the tossing sea and the great silent sky. They talk of riding—indeed I am fond of horses, too—but what is there to compare with the sweep of a little craft as she pitches down the long steep side of a wave, and then the quiver and spring as she is tossed upward again? Oh, if our souls could transigrate I'd be a seaman above all birds that fly! But I keep you, admiral, I do indeed!"

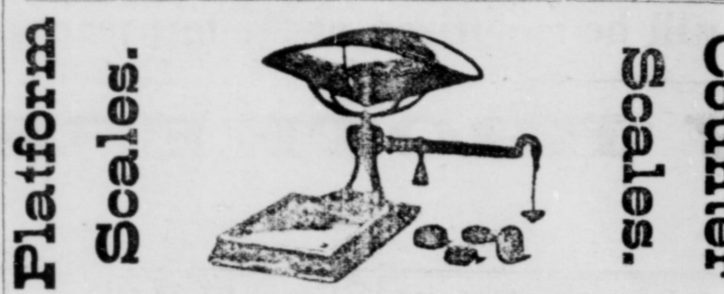

The old sailor was too transported with

"THE GROVE."

A Noted Educational Institution.

A HOME AND SCHOOL COMBINED

Mr. Sparham Sheldrake, Principal and Proprietor.

He Speaks in Glowing Terms of a Medicine That Has Cured Thousands.

Lakefield, in the county of Peterboro E. L., is one of the prettiest towns in the province of Ontario. It is beautifully situated on the Grand Trunk Railway, and can boast of advantages which more pretentious towns cannot lay claim to. The people of Lakefield are enterprising; its business men keep abreast with the times, and heartily co-operate in every undertaking calculated to advance commercial interests and the general welfare of the town.

Amid the bustle of business, manufacturing enterprises and general municipal matters, the subject of education and the proper training of the young is not forgotten. The good people of Lakefield recognize the great importance of educational institutions, and have much reason for self-congratulation on their success in this direction.

The cause of education in Lakefield has received a great impetus since the establishment of Mr. Sparham Sheldrake's "Preparatory School for Boys." No other school in the province can better qualify boys for the higher branches and a regular university course.

"The Grove" combines all the advantages of a high-class school and a refined and Christian home. Its reputation stands so high to-day that many of the best families in Canada and the United States send their boys to this ably conducted school.

Mr. Sparham Sheldrake, the able and accomplished principal of "The Grove," is assisted by an efficient staff of teachers; his great aim is to make his boys what they should be, from a moral and educational point of view.

In the work of directing and teaching, Mr. Sheldrake has been eminently successful. Like many other men he has overworked and overtaxed his physical powers. The strongest systems must suffer when this is done. Ordinary human strength cannot hope to accomplish herculean labor incessantly. Mr. Sheldrake soon felt the effects of continued overwork; there naturally came an impression of weakness and vigor, a falling of appetite, inability to rest properly, and a general lowering of the nervous system.

At this serious and critical time, Mr. Sheldrake at once recognized the necessity of prompt treatment with a reliable and honest medicine. He had a knowledge of what Paine's Celery Compound had done for the sick and suffering in Canada, and he wisely decided to use this medicine that had cured, strengthened and given a new life to thousands of others.

The results in this case are too well known to require details. Mr. Sheldrake's success with Paine's Celery Compound is a fact known to scores of people in Lakefield and elsewhere. He was so impressed with the marvelous healing powers of the great medicine, that he felt his duty to strongly recommend it to others who suffered.

No other medicine of this century has ever received such a hearty endorsement from our best people. Such men as Mr. Sheldrake do not tolerate or countenance the ordinary and useless advertised medicines of the day. Men and women who have the courage to do as they are represented as "just as good." If Paine's Celery Compound was sold at double its present price, all the wiles, schemes and artifices of dealers would not prevent or curtail the present tremendous demand for nature's true life-giver.

Mr. Sheldrake, for the encouragement of the sick and suffering, writes as follows:—

"I have used Paine's Celery Compound for several years with unvarying beneficial results; in fact, I seldom use any other. As a nerve tonic, and in cases of overwork or depression, I firmly believe it to be unequalled; it is also a splendid appetizer. I have constantly recommended it to my friends, and shall continue to do so as long as it contains its present excellence."

Surely this testimony is sufficiently strong and assuring for all who stand in need of medicine to drive out disease. Paine's Celery Compound is guaranteed to do for the weak, broken-down, rheumatic, dyspeptic, nervous and sleepless, a work that no other medicine can accomplish; it drives the disease out, restores the seat of trouble. Reader, if you are afflicted with Paine's Celery Compound is what you need for your case, do not for one moment be influenced to use any other, no matter how strongly recommended by dealers.

WATER, PLEASANT RELIEF AFTER MANY DAYS.

How a Queens County Man Found Permanent Relief.
His Own Experience With This and Freely some Truths which are Readers of this Paper Should Know.

Here and there, in almost every town of our province, are "chronic" cases over which doctors disagree; cases that become worse year after year. It is to reach such that the gentleman to whom these lines refer, and whose portrait is here given, has written the story of his case.

Mr. Branscomb's home is in Chipman, Queens Co., N. B. It was there that a representative of the Groder company called upon him, Sept 1st, of the present year. His greeting was most cordial. He gladly acknowledged his thanks, giving expression to the following statement:

"It is five years since I became afflicted with a form of indigestion. Last winter it became more severe, compelling me into chronic diarrhoea. I can tell you how much I suffered for six long weeks, and how, as though I had been cured, I found you well advertised. I told you of my case, and you asked your advice. I sent you a bottle of Groder's Syrup. You told me that the medicine was a laxative and might not meet my needs. I delayed buying for a few hours until I began to hope that it would help me. Even my clothes seemed a burden because of bloating of stomach. It was with difficulty that I kept about sufficiently to attend to my business. But I am a well man now from the use of your remedy. In three days after I bought GRODER'S SYRUP the terrible pain and distress across my stomach were removed. My bowels rapidly assumed a natural, healthy condition. Now I eat and drink as well as I ever could. I have gained constantly in flesh since March last. I am perfectly cured. It seems a duty for me to state my case fully, that others who suffer as I did may know where to find a cure."

Truly yours,
E. A. BRANSCOMB,
