Thoughts For Our Time

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan (Copyright)

JUDGING NEIGHBORS A DANGEROUS HABIT

We realize quite readily how much damage we can do to our neighbor's reputation by critical remarks. We know that we have an obligation to repair, as far as we can, a person's reputation if we have lessened it unfairly. What is harder to realize is the damage we do to ourselves when we criticize others unfairly, even if it is only within our own mind.

Usually, when we pull someone down in our thoughts, it is in order to lift ourselves up in our own estimation. Now we cannot help trying to justify ourselves to ourselves. Quite often this is all right. If we are too hard on ourselves, and withhold our approval from even our best efforts to attain a worthwhile standard of conduct we can drive ourselves to despair.

Too often, however, we are not humble enough merely to approve our honest efforts and then to admit their shortcomings, disturbing as they are to our opinion of ourselves. It is much easier on us if we look around at our neighbors and console ourselves with the thought that we have not fallen down as much as some of them.

The danger in this second attitude is that we are tempted to look at our neighbors not as they really are, but as we want to see them; that is, with their defects magnified so as to block out or at least belittle their good qualities. In place of the feeling of inadequacy that we often experience when we candidly admit the good qualities of another, there is a certain comfort in bringing others down to our own level or beneath it. However, habitual indulgence in this kind of self-complacency is likely to warp our whole personality.

By F. H. MacArthur The most valuable animal in a zoo is the Indian rhinoceros, worth $3,000 each. The gorilla comes next in order of value, while an elephant is worth $1,200, the European bison about $1,000.

The first chimpanzee baby born in the London Zoo came into the world on February 8, 1935. The baby was named Jubilee. "Boo Boo," its mother, was most fond of it and loved to carry it about in her arms. We are told that "it had a lusty cry, and if Boo Boo left it for a few minutes, as she sometimes did, to go for food, and it happened to feel lonely, it soon cried out, and she rushed and picked it up at once, very much like a human mother." Jubilee and her mother were attended day and night and strange but true, the mother was attended during and after her confinement by a well-known British physician.

On Jubilee's first birthday the mailman dropped an armful of letters, birthday cards and parcels at the zoo, all addressed to Miss Jubilee. The parcels contained such things as toys, fruit and sweets, and one silver spoon. Telegrams also arrived, one of which read as follows: "Best wishes for birthday. Love to Daddy and Boo Boo." Later in the day 60 children attended Jubilee's birthday party and needless to say all of them had a gala time.

"Boo Boo and Jubilee were almost so human in their behavior that one little girl was heard to remark, "But why don't they talk?" To keep flies from tormenting patients in some small Japanese hospitals, potatoes spiked all over with sticks of toothpicks are set up over the sick bed. When the toothpicks are covered with trapping flies, a new potato is hung up. The markings of Zebras proves that wise old mother nature seldom makes a mistake. The stripes are beautifully arranged, but curiously enough, you will never find two Zebras, even of the same kind, with exactly the same markings.

The only place where the Alaska fur seal herd ever comes ashore is on the Pribilof Islands. The luminous torch fish is one of the wonders of the sea. Attached to its nose is a small organ which gives out light. This amazing creature has the power to switch the light on and off at will. Attracted by this lantern under the sea, certain small fish swim right into torch fish open mouths and are promptly devoured.

"It is conceivable," he said, "that increasing operations at the navy base might reach the point where defence department officials might have to say to civilian carriers: 'We don't want you here any more.'" CONSIDER KELLY LAKE The city is ironing out financial arrangements with the federal government for a field at nearby Kelly lake, designated as a fog-free district. Shearwater is not and flight delays there are frequent.

Mr. McGregor, here to attend the Canadian Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting, said in an interview that turbo-prop Viscounts will probably be in operation on major TCA lines by next spring. This will release North Stars for use in the Maritimes. Sydney and Moncton now handle considerable overseas traffic.

Children love the fresh SUNSHINE flavor of AYLMER Tomato Catsup "Set a hamburger and French Fries before a youngster, bring on Aylmer Catsup, and watch him dig in!" says Mr. Sunshine, the Aylmer Hired Man. "Children love the sunshine flavor I put into Aylmer prize-quality tomatoes all through the summer. Then, within a few hours of picking, Aylmer captures all their goodness and delicious flavor for you to enjoy. So try Aylmer Catsup for sunshine flavor."
