The Telephone Company
OF
P. E. ISLAND.
PARTIES using the Telephone would find it interesting to observe the following facts:—
1st. Speak with the mouth about four inches from the transmitter.
2nd. Speak in a moderate tone of voice, not too loud, and distinctly.
3rd. Place the telephone so as to cover the ear, just as if you wished to shut out all other sounds. Do not press too hard on the ear.
4th. Stand two or three feet from the transmitter, if you speak too loudly, but it is not a pleasant mode of conversation, is entirely unnecessary, and is a needless waste of wind and lungs, besides being very annoying to all within range of your voice.
ROB ANGUS, Manager.

Margaret.
[Finnyson.]
O sweet pale Margaret,
O rare pale Margaret,
What lit your eyes with tearful power,
Like moonlight on a falling shower;
Who lent you, love, your mortal dole,
Of pensive thought and aspect pale,
Your melancholy sweet and frail
As perfume of the cuckoo flower?
From the westward winding flood,
From the evening lighted wood,
From all things outward you have won
A tearful grace, as 'thou' stood
Between the rainbow and the sun.
The very smile before you speak
That dimples your transparent cheek,
Encircles all the heart and feedeth
The senses with a still delight
Of dainty sorrow without sound,
Like the tender amber round,
Which the moon above her spreadeth,
Moving through a fleecy night.

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER.
THE CRUSOES OF PERCE.

[Concluded.]
This was glad tidings. All that day and the next passed in a fever of anticipation. On the third day a messenger arrived with a letter in a mourning envelope. It was long before Captain Briston could find courage to open it. When he did his worst fears were realized. These were the contents:
DUNFORTH, Tuesday.
"Dear friend, I boarded schooner Elora the moment she arrived, and asked for the boys. The skipper, a sinister old scoundrel, refused to let me see them unless I would pay him salvage and passage money, all of which I promised. Then he sung out 'send them stowaways aft!' when two ill-looking, ragged loafers of the wharf sat upon a mourning envelope. It was long before Captain Briston could find courage to open it. When he did his worst fears were realized. These were the contents:
