Plans Being Reviewed

There appeared to be some doubt here yesterday as to whether construction of the new ferry for the Wood Islands-Charlottetown route would be proceeded with in full view to the new cut back in government spending, developing from the austerity program announced Sunday by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Tenders for the 300-foot ferry were called by Northumberland Ferries Limited on June 15 and they close on August 1.

Company President, Capt. Claude S. Hunter was in Montreal yesterday where he could not be reached for comment. At his home in Victoria he has no indication of what may happen but he said he would be in the city to review the tender before the treasury board.

Mr. Macquarrie has no idea what priority is given transport construction work, though he suggests it should be high.

At the time he is making available a construction subsidy of 40 per cent of the something less than $500,000 the ferry is expected to cost, and hope was expressed here that the ferry would be dropped, particularly as the Ottawa government is paying less than half to review by the treasury board.

At the west end market, grade A hogs sold at 31.75 and sows 31.25. At the east-end market, grade A hogs were 31.50 with most at 31 plus 50 cents each and sows were 21.50 with most at 21 plus 50 cents each.

the cost, but nothing could be learned definitely.

Mr. Macquarrie did say, though, that the major construction project at Wood Islands where "hundreds of thousands of dollars are to be spent on the east breakwater," will go ahead as the contract has been awarded to Norman MacLennan, Murray River.

He is unsure, though, of what may happen to a $40,000 retaining wall at Rustico or a breakwater job at Tracadie.

Rusk Completes Lisbon Visit

LISBON (AP) — U.S. State Department Dean Rusk went home Thursday after a 22-hour visit to Portugal which ranked among the most difficult stops of his 10-day, five-nation tour of Europe.

Rusk called his meeting with Premier Salazar "very friendly," and said he was pleased at his series of conferences with Foreign Minister Nogueira. But he emerged from the construction of two wooden bridges in the province.

A highways department official said the bridge work is part of a normal replacement scheme. The official said that the Departments Are Studying Fate of Projects For P.E.I.

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN

OTTAWA - Government spokesmen here are being very cautious in making any statements about possible projects as the result of the austerity program announced by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The departments of transport and public works, which are chiefly involved in the project of special interest to Prince Edward Island, both say that all plans are now being carefully reviewed.

Top officials of both departments have been meeting for the last few days to go over every project and to make decisions whether they will proceed or be shelved until later date. There are indications that it may be 10 days or two weeks before any definite announcements are made on specific projects.

Basically, the spokesmen say that there will be no changes in any project which has already started, where contracts have been let or tenders called. But there may be cut-backs on all other projects which are still in the planning stage.

However, where other levels of government or agencies are involved in joint projects with the federal government there is less likely to be any withdrawal of federal financial aid.

No word can be obtained as yet on the proposed new Wood

Islands Ferry. The department of transport says the matter is in the hands of the Canadian Maritime Commission. The commission, in turn says it is really a decision that the government will probably have to make. As far as is known, there have not been any discussions yet about the fate of this project by the government or the commission.

The decision prior to accommodate the Confederation is in a more doubtful category as no contract has yet been let. But as it may be considered essential to accommodate the new ferry, it may be among those projects which survive when final decisions are handed down.

another attempt to solve the deadlock. Meetings between the college council and the cabinet Friday, Saturday and Monday were unsuccessful.

NURSES WORRIED
A group of registered nurses, reflecting the anxiety felt by numerous Saskatchewan residents as the deadline for the plan approaches, left Melville to drive 100 miles to Regina. Picking up other nurses en route, they were to attempt to meet with Premier Lloyd to discuss their position under the plan.

A spokesman said the nurses were concerned that the plan drawn up by the doctors to provide only emergency care, just 20 of the 120 hospitals in the province will have doctors.

The spokesman said nurses were concerned that, under the plan drawn up by the doctors to provide only emergency care, just 20 of the 120 hospitals in the province will have doctors.

Meetings of district medical societies were planned throughout the province.

The college said it may bring time on Saskatchewan's 13 radio stations to answer a non-broadcast call by Mr. Lloyd. Mr. Lloyd criticized the doctors for not allowing one or more independent observers or a court reporter to attend closed sessions between the cabinet and college governing council last weekend.

The spokesman said nurses were receiving many individual and group messages and petitions supporting its action.

The regulations announced Thursday, in addition to allowing a doctor to practise outside the Medical Care Insurance Act, allow him to make direct charges against a person receiving service.

Under the new regulations physicians and specialists choose whether their names will be on the list of those entitled to receive payment through the medical care commission.

The decision on what constitutes an emergency will be up to the doctor at the hospital, Dr. Landis said.

Dr. Landis is head of what has been called the central emergency services committee. The province has been divided into 16 districts, each with an area coordinator.

Meanwhile, a representative of the Canadian Medical Association has set up an office at college headquarters to help relocate doctors who will leave the province.
