

Shocking Tragedy in Brooklyn.

A shocking tragedy recently occurred in Brooklyn. Rev. James Kemlo, late pastor of the Reformed Church in Mountville, N. J., near Newark, first cut his wife's throat, and then severing his own jugular vein, leaped from a fourth story window. Both of them died within an hour. Mr Kemlo had suffered from malaria for three months, his head being especially affected, and it is considered certain, that he was insane when he committed the double crime. The scene of the tragedy was the apartments on the fourth floor of the Atlantic State Bank Building, Nos. 49 and 51 Fulton Street. The rooms are occupied by Gideon Kemlo, a compositor in the office of the Evening Post, and his wife the parents of Mr. Kemlo. The latter and his wife came to visit their parents, leaving their children aged three years and three months, respectively, with friends. Shortly after noon, Mrs Kemlo, Sr., left her son and his wife sitting quietly in the front room which she occupied and went out to do some marketing. In a few minutes, there was a commotion in the room, and a cry of fire was raised. A clerk in the bank ran up stairs to see where the fire was. He heard screams in Kemlo's rooms, and hastened to open the doors, when he was confronted by the sight of Mr. Kemlo drawing a carving knife across his throat and the blood spurting forth. He rushed down stairs for aid, and had just reached the street and was calling to a policeman on the opposite side, when he was appalled by seeing the suicide's body falling from the fourth story window to the pavement below. The policeman and others had, meanwhile, hastened to the room whence the suicide had precipitated himself, and found that he had murdered his wife before killing himself. The room bore evidence of a terrible struggle.

Not a Soldier's Widow.

AN ENOCH ARDEN OF THE PLAINS WHO WAS NOT KILLED BY THE INDIANS.

A decree of divorce was granted by Judge Clement, in the Brooklyn City Court, in the suit of Edward Featherstone vs. Bertha, his wife, on the ground that her first husband, Edward S. Wilcox, is still alive. Defendant was married to Wilcox in 1875, when she was eighteen years of age, and had one child by him. In 1878 Mr. Wilcox enlisted in the United States army and the following year he was reported killed in a fight with the Sioux Indians as the Yellowstone. Believing her husband dead, she was married to Featherstone at the Norfolk Street Methodist Church, Brooklyn, in January, 1880. About a month ago Mrs. Wilcox received a letter, which had been written nearly a year before by her soldier husband, who is still alive. It appeared that her change of residence led to other letters being mislaid. He wrote to her, looking forward to an early reunion, being unconscious of the real condition of affairs at home. He had not been killed; but had been taken prisoner by the Indians, from whom he made good his escape, and had rejoined his comrades. The husband also wrote that he was in New Mexico. The woman, who was almost distracted upon receipt of the startling information communicated the facts to Mr. Featherstone, who applied for a decree of divorce with the result set forth. A child, the issue of the second union, adds to the complications.

Tomatoes may be kept almost any length of time, and come out as fresh as when first picked, by preserving in fresh vinegar diluted with water—one gill of vinegar, and two of water. Pick when ripe, but not very soft, leave the stems on, but do not break the skin. Put into wood or stone, and put the liquid on them when cold. After you get through putting them in, place something on them to keep them under the liquid, and take out as you may wish to use them. Can use them as you would tomatoes from the vine. This will not fail if your vinegar is pure and diluted according to directions. It is highly probable that cucumbers might be preserved in the same way, selecting those of medium size and leaving on the stems.
