No Statement Issued Following Union Meet

The regional director of the National Union of Public Employees, John F. MacMillan, Saint John, N.B., accompanied by union fieldworker M. A. Hughes attended a meeting last night with locals 806 and 826 representing non-professional workers at two hospitals in Charlottetown.

The purpose was to discuss Welfare and Labor Minister Henry Wedge's interpretation of "employees essential to the maintenance of an institution" as set out in the Industrial Regulations Act.

The act states that essential workers are not permitted to strike. The workers have been looking for an increase in wages for two years but the hospitals cannot grant it as they say the budget is controlled by the Hospital Services Commission which in turn has to look to the government fr its funds.

No statement was made last night after the meeting but it is believed that Mr. Wedge's interpretation was that the workers were essential thus preventing a strike.

Sherwood Sewer Connection May Get Approval

The village of Sherwood's proposal to link its sewer line to the city storm sewer is again under review, it was announced earlier in the week by E. Arsenault, chairman of the water and sewer liaison committee. This time there is a good chance that the proposal may be accepted.

The Sherwood request was refused last year because the city was having a considerable amount of trouble with that line as it often flooded causing annoyance to property owners in the neighborhood of Churchill Avenue.

City engineer Norman Stewart has stated that he has been testing a new type of control on the outfall at the start of the Victoria Park Roadway and it is felt that it has been a complete success.

Because of this, it is believed knowledgable officials are prepared to agree to the request on the basis that it has now become feasible as the flow from the addition of the Sherwood line would be only slight and cause no trouble for city residents.
