The Hon. Robert Parker, Chief Justice of New Brunswick, died at St. John, N. B., on Friday last. This will create an important vacancy on the Bench, which Mr. Attorney General Smith will hardly overlook; and then we shall probably hear of a total upset of the Government of New Brunswick.

FLAX.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir:—

I have much pleasure in submitting for insertion, in your issue of to-day, a further communication from my correspondent in London, referring more especially to certain queries, sought for by the several meetings held on the subject. As advised by my correspondent, I shall be prepared to open a register for the insertion of the names of persons purposing the cultivation of Flax, and to receive orders for Seed.

Yours truly,
JOHN ALDOUS.

Land Office, 27th Nov., 1865.

London, Nov. 10th, 1865.

Dear Sir;

We were duly favoured with yours of the 9th ult., and would have replied last mail, but a pressure of other matters prevented us. We thank you for the newspapers and trade returns, and would premise that it was foreign to our intention to have our former communication published; at the same time, it was the most speedy course to obtain the general feeling of the farmers on the subject, and cannot be productive of any harm. Since we last wrote, we had the pleasure of an interview with His Excellency the Governor, and it would be wanting on our part were we not to record the frank, open and courteous manner in which he responded to our call for information as to Prince Edward Island, and the very great trouble he took, and the warm and hearty interest he evinced, in all matters in reference to the development of the resources of the agricultural interests, and for the prosperity and improvement, in a pecuniary point of view, of the inhabitants of the Island.

With these preliminary remarks, we will now briefly reply to your public and private correspondents, confining our observations to the main commercial points. And first, we would notice that our views—in consequence of your severe winter, scarcity of labour, and practical details connected with manufacturing—are somewhat modified, and therefore we will pass over the growth of Sugar Beet, and Hops, for the present; at the same time, we wish you distinctly to understand that we are perfectly satisfied you can produce both in perfection. And after well considering local circumstances, and important commercial questions, we would advise your farmers to apply their energies to the cultivation of flax, rape seed, and hemp, as they require the least manual labor, and will yield the greatest money return per acre. Our notion of their money importance to the farmer is in the order stated. Your soil and climate are admirably adapted for the growth of flax, while its cultivation is not new to the farmers; but at the same time, many important facts connected with its culture have been brought to light of late years by European cultivators; and in order to place P. E. Island farmers on a footing with those districts where it has attained greatest perfection, we will prepare and send you such information on a future occasion for their guidance.

In reference to rape, there are two kinds, one requires to be sown in autumn, and the other in spring. The former is believed to produce a more abundant crop of seed than the latter. The plant grows three and four feet high, with pretty much the appearance of cabbage, when allowed to run to seed. It is the seed that is the valuable part. It is sown on clean land in good heart, either broad cast or in drills, the latter is the better mode. When sown in autumn, it ripens in July or August following. Although the spring rape does not yield such a large return as the other, still it might be well if a number of your farmers were to try it in the spring on a small scale, say an acre each, and test the fact practically for themselves. It would initiate them into the cultivation for the winter rape, and give them an opportunity of comparing the produce of both without loss of time.

In regard to hemp, it is cultivated similar to flax. It does not exhaust the soil, and flax grows well after hemp, but hemp does not do after flax till the lapse of some years.

In reply to the questions as to the condition in which we would purchase the crops, we have to inform you and your correspondents that we would buy the entire crop, including the seed, as it leaves the ground, after being thoroughly air-dried, the same as oats before stacking, at so much per ton, according to its condition, delivered at Charlottetown. And we will undertake to purchase all that is grown, and give the farmers the highest cash price possible. All we want is only a fair return on the capital absorbed in the business, factory and machinery, in working up the raw materials into a marketable form. But in order to guide us in reference to the extent of the premises, factory and machinery required to work up the supply, it will be necessary, indeed absolutely essential, for those who intend embarking in the cultivation of either, or all of the crops, to communicate with you without delay, and for you to open up a register of their names, and the extent of land they propose putting under crop next year. Perhaps you would kindly consent to take that trouble, as the matter is so intimately connected with your own department.

The next important question is seed, and we would, by all means, advise your farmers to procure well matured, sound genuine seed, although the cost may be a little more at first, for the increased produce will far more than compensate them for the extra outlay. The best flax seed is the Russian and Dutch. The former is used on light friable soil—the latter on heavy soil, but frequently indiscriminately. As to rape seed, the best is produced in England; and for hemp, the Dutch is looked on as very good. If it will in any way facilitate matters, and if your farmers wish it, we will undertake to procure sound, genuine seed, and send out to you for distribution in the Spring; but to enable this to be done, it will be necessary for them to register with you, the quantity each wants, at the same time you record the land. And for your guidance, about 3 bushels of flax or hemp are necessary for an acre, and a much smaller quantity of Rape.

Ultimately, mills may be erected in other localities, but as so much work must be done to defray the ordinary expenses of the staff, and if the raw material should not be grown in quantity, at the spot selected, to enable work to be done, it would only be a source of loss: and, therefore, it is proposed, in the first instance, to erect the factory at Charlottetown.

Yours faithfully,
* * * * *

The Hon. John Aldous,
P. E. Island.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir:—

I address you, as a public journalist and liege subject of our Queen, bound by your obligation of fealty to succour, maintain and defend Imperial rule in this Colony; and, sir, I have satisfaction, with the many, in according to you a talented and patriotic adhesion to that rule, both in and out of your able journal. Imbued with these sentiments, I come, soliciting, nay, sir, requesting, permission to enquire through the Examiner, if there be truth in the rumour that Mr. Edward Rielly of the Herald recently visited the United States in friendly connection with the Fenians of that country?

LOYALIST.

The papers publish a story that Wirz's wife, at one of their interviews, in person, endeavored to give Wirz poison, (strychnine done up in a small case). The story is that when she kissed him she had it in her mouth, and thus gave it to him, and that the sharp officer present detected it. Wirz's counsel spoils the sensation story by declaring it to be false.

In the late murder trial in Halifax, Dowcey, the cook, and Douglas, the mate of the Zero, were found guilty of the murder of the Captain, Colin C. Benson, of Grand Manan. It will be recollected that the Captain was murdered in his berth, and the crew took his clothes and other valuables, and, after attempting to sink the vessel, escaped to the Nova Scotia shore.

A COUNT IN FIFTH AVENUE.

TRAVELS OF AN ALLEGED PRUSSIAN PRETENDER THROUGH THE UNITED STATES—HIS DOINGS AT THE EVERETT HOUSE AND FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL—INTRIGUES, CONFIDENCE OPERATIONS AND OTHER FRAUDS—HE IS A DESERTER FROM THE UNITED STATES ARMY, AND IS ARRESTED.

One of the most extraordinary confidence operators, according to the evidence thus far developed, that has ever visited this city, was arrested at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on Saturday by detectives Coyle and Bennett. The history of this pretender to baronial honors in a foreign land is full of significance to the giddy-headed young girls and paterfamilias into whose confidence he had managed to ingratiate himself, for the purpose, as is alleged, of abusing that confidence at last if his personal aggrandizement required it. The real name of this person is Francis Stabenow, alias Adolf Danforth, alias F. F. Manson, alias Herr Arnold, alias Adolf Graf zo Dohna-Schlodien (the Count Dohna)—names and titles enough to have ruined a much smarter man than Stabenow, and which have finally brought him to grief.

Stabenow arrived in New York on the 15th of June, 1864, by the Inman steamer of London, and proceeded at once to Boston. There he put up at an expensive hotel, representing himself as Count Dohna, Premier Lieutenant Corps de Garde Cuirassiers, of Berlin, Prussia. The reason assigned for his coming to this country was, that a brother officer of the Garde had endeavored to alienate from him the affections of his betrothed, which so far incensed him that he challenged his rival, and killed him in the fight. For this he was compelled to leave home for a short time until the affair could be satisfactorily adjusted. The credulous people of the tri-mountain city swallowed the story, and kindly advanced moneys to Stabenow in expectation of the princely remittances, which never came to hand. Hotel proprietors, livery stable keepers, tailors and tradesmen generally lost patience at last, and, borrowing having ceased to be a virtue, the adventurer left the city, and started for St. Louis. There he pursued a similar course of life, making friends as before, and winning the affections and the favors of some of the most respectable ladies of the place. His course in St. Louis was very short, and he suddenly conceived the idea of entering the Union army. Thereupon he pawned his clothes in St. Louis, and managed to borrow one hundred dollars in addition, and came to this city, where he took apartments at the Everett House. He had letters of introduction from parties in St. Louis, endorsing him in unmeasured terms, and through these letters he made the acquaintance of several highly respectable families living at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. From these he contrived to borrow small sums, stating that his remittances, which usually came through the house of Duncan, Sherman & Co., who he alleged were his bankers, were over due, but would certainly arrive very soon. Upon the sums of money borrowed in this way, and which ranged from ten dollars to three thousand dollars, he lived in a style of great elegance. His lunches and Cliquot wine at the Everett House were pronounced superb, and the gentlemen who attended these reunions thought he must be a prince, inasmuch as he lived in a princely style. The reason given by him for wishing to enter the Union army was that he was afraid the Prussian government would demand his extradition to answer for the crime of slaying his fellow officer, and he thought they could not so recall him if he was an officer in the regular army of the United States. He was recommended, as an initiatory step to obtain a commission, to enlist in the service, which he did, and was attached as a corporal, and subsequently promoted to a sergeantcy in Company H, 14th United States infantry.

Shortly after this he obtained leave of absence, and again appeared at the Everett House and Fifth Avenue Hotel in the garb of a civilian. His bounty was soon run out, and he was compelled again to borrow. His story now was that he had been in the recruiting service, was heavily in arrears to the government, and unless he could raise a few thousand dollars, he would be ruined. No one seemed disposed to aid him, and becoming desperate, he approached some of the ladies whose acquaintance he had made at the hotel, and from whom he had received trifling invitation notes, and threatened them with exposure if they did not go to their dear papas, mammas, or other friends, and procure him the money. To some of these parties he exhibited letters which he charged them with having written, and which he told them would show criminal intimacy to have existed between himself and them; but as these ladies never wrote any such letters, they must have been forgeries concocted by this Prussian pretender, who, with his other accomplishments, has that of being one of the most skilful of penmen, possessing the power of imitating handwriting so perfectly as to defy detection. These threats showed his character in its true light. Information regarding him was lodged with Chief John S. Young, of the detective force, who placed detectives Coyle and Bennett on his track. These officers ascertained that Stabenow had obtained leave of absence for the purpose of appearing before the Examining Board at Annapolis regarding his qualifications for a commission. He was pronounced incompetent, and ordered back to his regiment. Instead of joining his command, however, he re-appeared at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. This made him a deserter, and as such he was placed under arrest. He was taken to the Central office and searched. Several packages amounting in all to about two hundred letters, were found on his person, together with photographs of all his young lady friends in Boston, St Louis and New York, and the little notes that accompanied them, some of which were worded in the most endearing language. For obvious reasons, the names of the authors of these notes are omitted. It may be interesting to the young ladies who contributed to the album of "Dear Adolf" to know that the volume is now quietly resposing on the shelves of the pawnbroker.

A copper-plate card plate, engraved with the name, "Adolf Graf zu Dohna-Schlodien," and surmounted with the Imperial arms of the Dohna family, was also found on him, together with a large number of cards printed from the same. His linen was stamped with this coat of arms, and his music bore the same stamp and the inscription of "Count Dohna."

It is well known that about a year and a half ago the real Count Dohna was robbed of a large sum of money and all his personal effects by three parties known to have belonged to Berlin, Prussia. These parties were apprehended, tried and found guilty. Two of them are now serving out their term of service in the Berlin prison. The third made his escape, having in his possession the copper card plate stolen from the Count Dohna and a complete undress suit of a premier lieutenant in the corps de Garde Cuirassiers, which also belonged to the Count Dohna. By a singular coincidence Stabenow has with him a copper card plate of the same kind and an address suit of the Corps de Garde. The Prussian Government will undoubtedly demand Stabenow's return to his home. Count Dohna will be pleased to get a personal view of a man who has figured so extensively on his honored name.

The prisoner confesses to Chief Young that his real name is Francis Stabenow, and that certain telegrams and notes addressed to himself, and signed "Your Father," "From Papa," &c, were written by himself for the purpose of aiding him in the perpetration of his various frauds. Stabenow is as yet a mere boy. He gave his age as nineteen years, but is probably twenty-one or two. He is about six feet in height, has very long arms and legs, and is rather lazy in his manner. He has light hair and a smooth red face, a very light and small moustache, teeth in excellent repair, large grey eyes, and a very narrow chin. He is a person of good address, speaks English fluently, plays the piano brilliantly, and writes elegantly. In this regard no pretender of modern times has equalled him. His powers of imitation are great. He will be held at the Centre office for a short time until he can be identified by parties from other cities, and until further instructions can be had regarding him.

Glasgow, Nov. 4, 1865.

Dear Sir,—Will you be kind enough to insert the accompanying notice in the next issue of your widely circulated journal, for the benefit of all concerned, and you will oblige the passengers of the Barque 'Empress.'

Yours, * ****

Temendous Gales at Sea.—The Barque 'Empress,' John Gillis, Commander, owned by Welsh & Owen, of Charlottetown, P. E. Island, for Glasgow, arrived at her destination on Saturday, the 4th inst. During her passage she experienced two violent storms. The first commenced on Thursday, the 26th of October, when in lat. 48.36, long. 23.30, with the wind from W. N. W. It was found necessary to throw over the deck load in order to save the ship and the rest of the cargo. During the gale, she shipped heavy seas, and started her weather stanchions from the main chains forward. On the following Monday, in lat. 50.55, long. 10.30, she encountered another gale, more terrible than the preceding, with wind from N. N. W. During the gale, the ship was in a perilous condition. A spar and hawser were got over, to keep her head to wind, but in a short time the hawser parted close to the hawse. On the following day the gale abated. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the Capt. and officers for the cool and skilful manner in which they acted during the gale, for to their skilful management, as well as to the obedience and activity of the sailors, are owing, in a great measure, the safety of the ship, and the lives of the passengers and crew.

The Steamer Island City left this Port for Boston yesterday morning, with a cargo of Oats, Potatoes, fish, &c. We understand the Island City will not return again this fall. The steamer Commerce left here for Boston on Monday last, with a cargo of Fish. It is expected she will make one more trip before the closing of the navigation.—Isl.

The Steamer Heather Belle left Charlottetown for Brule, with the English Mail from this Island, and for the English Mail for this Island, at an early hour on Thursday morning last, and made the run, to and fro, in the short space of six hours.—Ib.

The Hon. W. H. Pope, Colonial Secretary of this Island, left Charlottetown for Great Britain yesterday morning,—he went by the way of Brule, and would take the Steamer Persia, for Liverpool, which vessel was to leave Halifax the same evening. The Colonial Secretary will probably be absent from the Island some four or five months.—Ib
