A Swim For Life

By Thornton W. Burgess

Until he has to it is true. She had a surprise. She was moving through the water. She had a funny feeling. There was only her head above water, but she was moving through it. The faster she made her legs go, the faster she moved through the water. But she soon found that she grew tired just as she would have done had she been running hard on land. Indeed, she grew tired a little quicker than she had been running. She stopped paddling so fast. She found that she kept afloat just as easily and it was not so tiresome. Johnny Chuck waited for her.

"Where are we going?" panted Polly Chuck.

"To the nearest place where we can get out of the water," said Johnny.

"How far is that?" Polly wanted to know.

"I don't know," said Johnny. "We'll just keep going. That is all we can do."

Now the water had spread so far over the Green Meadows that the nearest shore was a long way off. It was a good thing that the two Chucks could not lift their heads high enough to see how far the shore was. They just kept swimming. It was the only thing they could do. And they were not the only swimmers, although they didn't know this. Many little people who lived on the Green Meadows were swimming for their lives. It is always so when there is a flood.

"Everybody can swim," said Johnny. "Folks only think they can't. He swam this over his shoulder, for he was already swimming."

Polly Chuck started to wade in, then backed out. The water was rising. It was already pouring down into her home and she was standing ankle-deep in it. Johnny was moving away and he was swimming very nicely.

"Wait for me!" squealed Polly Chuck.

Johnny didn't wait. He knew that the quickest way of getting Polly Chuck to swim was to keep right on swimming himself. Polly plunged into the water. She began to kick with her four legs just as if she were trying to run.

Why We Succeed Or Fail

"After years of observing human nature I've concluded two qualities make the difference between a man who's an outstanding success and a man who's almost a failure."

Opening lead—six of diamonds.
The Summer National Championships, conducted annually by the American Contract Bridge League, will be held this year in New York, starting this Saturday, July 28th. During the next twelve days, some 3,000 contestants from every state in the union will be battling it out, session after session, for the various national championships at stake.

Among the banner events will be the Masters' Team of Four. The winning team will represent America in a match next January against the country that wins the European championship. Defending their laurels won last year in Chicago will be the team of Lee Hazen, Sam Stayman, Myron Hazen, Dick Kahn, all of New York, and Charles Solomon, of Philadelphia. The hand shown today was played last summer in the Team of Four by Charles Solomon (North) and Lee Hazen (South).

The final contract was far from a laydown. Possible losers were three hearts, two clubs and a spade. Only in diamonds could declarer relax. The insecure contract was manipulated by Hazen, New York attorney, in his usual flawless style.

The ace of diamonds took the opening lead and a club toward dummy's king was played. West won the ace and led another diamond. After winning the king of diamonds the club was cashed, and dummy's last diamond trumped.

Many Fear That Elections Would Bring Back Juan Peron

By ALFONSO MAURI
BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—The recent counter-revolutionary coup in Argentina was drastically crushed, but the rift which provoked it persists. It is the rift which separates those who want "democracy without Peron" and those who are ready to accept "qualified democracy."

The former, represented by the government, contend that the country must be re-educated before it is called to the polls. This view is supported by all political parties with the exception of Communists and Peronists.

Both government and political leaders feel that elections now could mean the return of the ousted President Juan Peron.

PARTY STRENGTH
The new president, Gen. Pedro Eugenio Aramburu, as well as his vice-president, Rear Admiral Isaac Rojas—reputed to be the power behind the president—want the non-Peronista parties to be strengthened before they face an electoral contest. Their slogan is: "We shall call elections as soon as possible."

What "possible" in this context exactly means, no one knows. It may be 18 months, two years or perhaps even longer. "The 'Unqualified democracy' movement wants immediate elections, at any price and at any risk. What politicians and the government term 're-education' their opponents call 'indoctrination.'"

Now a new factor has come into play: The counter-revolution and the ensuing repression. In the latest abortive coup more people died before firing squads afterward than died in the actual fighting. Argentines are touchy about the death penalty, and no political executions had taken place since the 1890s.

The man in the street regards the suppression of the death penalty as the hallmark of a higher civilization. When someone points out that liberals occasionally died in prison cells under torture during the Peronista regime, the average Argentine will retort: "Yes, but he saved his face. Peron never passed a death sentence."

It is still much too early to assess how this new factor will turn the balance of Argentine politics, but one thing is clear. Political parties which are supporting the Aramburu government are anxious to save their own responsibility in the face of public opinion.

Naval Doctors
New Appointments

OTTAWA (CP)—Naval headquarters today announced new appointments for two senior medical officers.

Surgeon Cmdr. Walter J. Elliot, 42, of Parkville, B.C., and Halifax, will become principal medical officer of the new aircraft carrier Bonaventure when she is commissioned at Belfast, later this year.

Cmdr. Richard A. G. Lane, 41, of Toronto, now principal medical officer of the aircraft carrier Magnificent, will succeed Cmdr. Elliot as principal medical officer at the navy's barracks and hospital at Halifax, N.S.

The Duke of Kent wore a pair of checked pants with a morning coat when he attended a wedding here Saturday. Several others at the wedding of Teresa Crossley and Alain Camu, of Belgium, wore checked trousers instead of the usual striped greeks. Member of the wedding party explained: "It's a new style."
