ELLEN'S DIARY

White - Sailed Schooners Pass By The Old Home

And what shall we ourself be remembering from the Fair? So much will come to mind. One of the most heart - warming will be the memory of having paused briefly behind the others with whom we have come there some morning, to hear James, after it may have been a night's absence or longer from home, inquire, "Didn't your mother (or grandmother) come?" and then catching sight of us, "Oh, there you are, Ellen!" he will smile.

The clamor and excitement will come back to us. And although some one will be bound to remark, "There's nothing to the fairs of nowadays — they're not much like those we used to know," we will be reflecting that those were enhanced by the spirit of youth.

We shall recall the busy-ness on the part of the herdsmen — see again, in mind, scenes of the brushing and trimming of the animals and those last expert touches being given them, before the call to the showring; we shall remember too the seemingly casual air of the experienced showman, whose eye "never falters", or hand never misses a move on the part of the animal he shows.. and the obvious relief of every last girl and lad and man concerned at the completion of their classes when at length the showing is done. All this we shall remember. And the good fellowship, the will to be of assistance to each other, which pevailed among the herdsmen in the stables.

"This is the best place to meet one's old friends' a summer - visitor smiled happily one evening at the Fair. "Yes, it's a great time of year to come to the Island!"

To meet the old friends and new — to see those smile over a placing in the building where the arts and crafts were to be admired — the art of cookery, the craft which takes in the sewing and rug - making and such handwork. To hear, "My cake won first place!" how thrilling, or "My quilt. . . or "rug!" how good!

"Why, I can hardly believe it's you!" we overheard a woman exclaim, clasping the hand of another. "It must be all of thirty years since I've laid eyes on you! You're home from away? I'm so glad—so glad."

We shall think too of the pretty lady, vacationing together with her husband from their now adopted Province of Ontario, we met there one evening, we had not seen in years. She is the baby in a large family of our girlhood community, which now has many a gap in that once complete and happy circle. Because of circumstances of the farming, which gave its sons to other callings, the farm too like many another Island farm and for the same reason, has passed from the name...The Strait and the shore in their varying changes were always within close sight of that pleasant old home. Old-time steamers and interesting white-sailed schooners passed there. Even that mysterious barge, "The burning ship" brightly outlined against the night, the older folks and children of that and other shore - farms knew... We must, we promise ourself, make a pilgrimage to "The Rocks" — projecting ledges of the cliff there, whereon, in those young years, many a lass and lad left initials carved together, to see if any remain!

"Ellen, are you there?" James calls, come in now to the kitchen from the rainy night.

We chuckle and sigh. Bodily we are here in this study of ours, but in mind we have been away, excursioning back into that ever-lovely girlhood land.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good—night. . . .

MARY HAWORTH

Foreign Service Needs More Than Brilliance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In the July issue of Esquire magazine there is a story by Irwin Shaw titled "Goldilocks at the Graveside" which I recommend as must reading for the mother and daughter who are disputing over daughter's major (as yet unchosen) and her possible future career.

Mother is pressing daughter to become a state - side teacher, while daughter is pining for a Foreign Service assignment, as she finds teaching dull (she does tutoring at present to help with expenses).

Mother says it takes brilliance to survive and get on in the Foreign Service and she doubts that daughter is qualified. And so forth.

Well, daughter had better face it: the monsters in Shaw's story aren't at all uncommon in the Foreign Service. Nor is the absolutely ruthless manner in which a person may be bumped if someone doesn't like him, or her. McCarthy is dead but the throat - slitting goes on.

For my spouse and me, our Foreign Service assignment was an interesting interlude, while it lasted. But thank God we got out before we drowned in the cocktails and gossip. Sincerely, L.R.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy, 14, keeping up with your exchange of views about teenagers making-out at parties, with the lights off.

I was surprised by the harshness of one girl's letter, who says today's teenagers aren't as bad as painted, that the sins of the few don't apply to the many, and who seems quite hostile towards adults as being critical, indifferent and lacking understanding.

Though her attitude seems unnecessarily angry, yet her basic theme makes sense.

When teenagers turn on TV, what do they see first and most often? A pair of adults kissing; in other words, a sex symbol that seems to obsess TV producers, even in their commercial scripts. The teenager takes this in, and thinks it is the grownup thing to do.

Therefore, much of the wrongness in teenage behavior today is due to the wrong example of grownups. In the final analysis, it is up to the individual, of course, as to whether he takes the high road or the low road in life. But adults aren't much help to youth in the present moral crises. That's my view E.P.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH- I must be terribly immature, as I live in fear of something happening to my parents — not just because I love them, but because I feel I couldn't survive without their devotion and encouragement.

I am 30, married 10 years, and have three well adjusted children. I have been praised as likeable, pretty, competent, etc., compliments that sustain me for a while. But soon I am on the defensive again, convinced that the world looks down on me, and justifiably.

I simply freeze up in company. Most social events find me in tears, either in the powder room or later in my pillow. Then I am depressed and irritable for days. I don't know how my husband puts up with me...

Have you ever heard of such a problem? Is there any solution?

DEAR C.C.: Read Dr. E. M. Abrahamson's and A. W. Pezet's book "Body, Mind and Sugar" (Holt, publishers), paying particular attention to Chapter 8 (page 176) titled "Hyperinsulinism — Key to Many Doors." Here you may come upon light, pointing the way to solving your erstwhile baffling problem. E.H.

MR. AND MRS. C. R. PURCELL

Bride's Father Performs Double Ring Ceremony

Anne Margaret Picketts, RN, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Willard C. Picketts of Toronto, and Carl Roland Purcell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland D. Purcell of Halifax, were married in St Andrew's United Church, Halifax, on Saturday, August 15th when the double ring ceremony was performed by the bride's father assisted by Rev. David MacNaughton, assistant minister of the church.

Tall gladioli standards on the steps of the chancel provided a lovely setting for the bridal party.

"The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte, before the ceremony, and "O Perfect Love", during the signing of the register were sung by Austin Gough of Halifax, accompanied on the organ by Peter MacDonald also of Halifax who played the wedding music throughout the ceremony.

Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus" ushered Miss Picketts, who was given in marriage by her brother, Jack N. Picketts, into the church. Her floor length gown of bridal white peau de soie was fashioned in front with bell skirt and scoop neckline of French lace applique. In the back tiny self buttons from the lowered neckline ended at the waistline where roses of peau de soie and appliqued lace held the full chapel-length train. Her veil of tiered silk illusion was caught up in a small crown of pleated tulle with French lace applique and seed pearls. Her only jewellry was a gold engraved locket, the gift of the groom. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, baby's breath and tiny ivy leaves.

The three bridal attendants wore similar floor - length gowns of ice - blue peau de soie with bell skirts and matching jackets of French lace. Their headpieces were pleated peau de soie with appliqued roses of lace and seed pearls.

Marilyn Prat of Bridgetown, Nova Scotia, a classmate of the bride, was maid of honour and she carried a nosegay of shasta daisies, baby breath and pink roses.

Mrs. Scott Woodside of Margate, P.E.I., cousin of the bride, and Joan Power of Musquodoboit Harbour, another classmate, carried similar nosegays of white shasta daisies, yellow roses and baby's breath.

Wayne Purcell was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Darrell K. Picketts of Toronto, brother of the bride and Kendall Purcell, Purcell's Cove, cousin of the groom.

Pine Hill Residence, overlooking the North-West Arm was the setting for the reception following the ceremony when Rev. and Mrs. Picketts entertained for relatives and friends.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. J. Milton Fraser, Halifax, who had baptized her when her father was minister of the Murray Harbour, P.E.I. charge. The groom responded.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a cluster of white roses centered with pink rosebuds.

Mrs. G.B. Frizzell, RN, of Sydney, N.S., aunt of the bride and Mrs. Jack W. Picketts, sister - in - law of the bride poured. Little Anne Thompson assisted by her sister Heather attended the guest book.

Mrs. W. C. Picketts chose for her daughter's wedding a sheath gown of tiered rose beige lace with matching accessories and feathered hat of dark brown.? She wore a corsage of pink sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Purcell, mother of the groom, wore a deep pink sheath of crepe-back satin, with feathered hat of beige and brown, and matching accessories. Her corsage was white carnations and baby's breath.

The young couple left on a honeymoon trip to Cape Breton and P.E.I. The bride travelled in a two piece suit of pale yellow wool with beige accessories and brimmed hat of beige tulle accented with deep brown velvet. Her corsage was of yellow roses and baby's breath.

The young couple will reside in Halifax, where the groom, a graduate of the Provincial Normal College, Truro, will enter his fourth year at Dalhousie University in the faculty of science. The bride is on the staff of the Victoria General Hospital.

The bride and her parents are natives of Prince Edward Island.

Guests attended the wedding from Toronto, Saint John, Truro Bridgetown and Sydney. Those attending the wedding from P.E.I. included Mr. and Mrs. D. H. MacKenzie and Allan MacKenzie of Charlottetown; Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Montgomery, Mrs. G. B. Frizzell and Mrs. Wilbur Stavert of Bedeque;

Mr.and Mrs. Waldron Davison of Kensington; Mr. and Mrs Justin Woodside and Mr.and Mrs. Scott Woodside of Margate; Mrs. Crawford Picketts of Kelvin Grove and Mrs. John Scott of Summerside.

"Prayer Groups" Speaker's Topic

Mrs. Roberts, wife of Rev. Bruce Roberts, Nashwaaksis, N.B., was guest speaker at the August general meeting of the Kensington UCW. Her address dealt with prayer groups and UCW unias, as they are conducted in the Nashwaakksis charge. She said there are three different prayer groups, and those who attend usually fit into the group that suits them best. Timid people are initiated with sentence prayers. Mrs. Roberts told the meeting that their UCW units were formed for convenience, which is in contrast with the Kensington UCW, where the units are formed according to zones. She said it wasn't considered insulting for a person to shift to another unit if more suitable. Those who didn't care for bazzars and other time consuming projects, joined the voluntary unit. She pointed out that it is more important to attend a general meeting than a meeting of the unit.

The president, Mrs. Harold Palmer, presided at the meeting held in the assembly room of the church. Devotions were led by Mrs. Alexander MacKay who also read letters of acknowledgement from Mrs. F.L. Orr and Catherine Millar. A motion was passed that the cost of shipping drugs, which had been collected and packaged and forwarded with Dr. Strangeway, be paid.

The next meeting was announced for the second Monday in September.

Elsie Mayne on behalf of the members of the Summerfield UCW who were guests at this meeting, thanked the Kensington UCW members for their hospitality.
