MONEYBAGS AND SON.

(Concluded.)

It must come at last, and then the shock seems to me to be quite as great as when you seek to prepare the mind to receive it, which I think but prolongs the agony. Perhaps the mode of proceeding should be adapted to different dispositions and natures.

In the present case I acted as I have usually done. I endeavoured to palliate the effects of what I knew would prove a dreadful shock to the father's feelings. I cannot congratulate myself upon my success.

'I must go to her immediately. Perhaps you will be so kind as to accompany me.'

'Certainly sir; but I would suggest that you wait a little while until you recover yourself. Your daughter has been well cared for, and wants for nothing now.'

He looked at me inquiringly, as if he would have asked for further explanation, but dared not hear it. I could not summon the resolution to tell him the whole truth at once.

In a few minutes he rose from the chair, and staggering to the sideboard, took out two decanters of wine. He made a sign to me to help myself. Pouring a tumbler of port for himself, he swallowed it at a draught.

'I am ready to go with you now,' he said.

Then ringing the bell, when the servant answered it, he requested her to inform her mistress that he was going out with the gentleman who had called, and that he would be back as soon as possible.

Upon reaching the street he took my arm, and we proceeded together slowly along.

'We have been in the greatest distress about my daughter. Her absence was wholly unaccountable. Perhaps you will favor me by telling what you know about her.

I thought this a good opportunity to break the sad truth to him, so I minutely described all I had witnessed on that eventful evening:—the scene in the Park between his daughter and young Moneybags, her sudden illness, my conveying her to the hospital, the discovery that she had taken poison, my rencontre with young Moneybags, his accident, and admission into the same hospital as contained his victim.

'It seems like a dream,' he said, and then made me repeat the whole story over again.

Still I could not summon up the courage to tell him his daughter was dead, although I gave him no hopes of seeing her again alive. But he clung to the idea of her possible recovery so tenaciously, that I could not be guilty of the cruelty of destroying his hopes.

But I did not want him to go to the hospital at that unseemly hour. I doubt even if he would have been admitted. I explained this to him, and so far prevailed as to induce him to defer his visit until the morning. He promised compliance, upon condition that I would make inquiries at the hospital as to the state his daughter was in. I knew such inquiry was useless, although I pretended to make it. When I returned to him I said his daughter was in a deep sleep, from which she could not be disturbed.

'And did you inquire how the villian Moneybags was?'

'I did not. I do not think his injuries very serious.'

But they were more serious than I had imagined; in falling upon the broken glass he had divided an artery, and well nigh bled to death.

'It is too late for you to go home to-night, go and take a bed at my house, and we will come again to the hospital the first thing in the morning.'

I saw no objection to this, so I complied, and accepted his invitation.

The servants had all gone to bed when we returned, but he let himself in, and soon placed before me a good supper of cold sirloin and pickles.

By this time he had somewhat recovered his equanimity, and could converse calmly on general topics. He was very curious to learn if I knew any thing about young Moneybags.

I did not consider it advisable to communicate all I knew of that gentleman's proceedings, so I contented myself with remarking that I thought he was giving himself up to dissipation.

'A rich man's son, sir, and like all such, spoilt—irretrievably ruined. He has never known the pleasure and satisfaction of working for money, and considers only how he can spend it. He has talents. Had he been a poor man's son he would have made his way up to a good position in society; as it is, he is but a drone in the hive, no good to himself nor to others, abandoned to sensuality and indolence. I never approved of my daughter's attachment to him; although I did not wish to oppose her inclinations I gave her my unbiassed opinion of the man of her choice, so that she made it with her eyes open.'

Next morning, after an early breakfast, we proceeded again to the hospital—he to recover his lost child, I to bring away her corpse.

I sought the head nurse to explain to her my dilemma, and to consult to her as to what should be done about the deceased young lady, provided her father persisted in seeing her.

The good woman smiled while I was speaking. When I had concluded, she said.—

'Lor' bless you, sir, She's not dead.'

'What do you say—not dead? Do you know who I mean.'

'Certainly I do. The young lady you brought in last night poisoned?'

'Exactly. Why, I saw her dead, myself, last night.'

'You thought you did; so did we all. She was very low, and we thought she was gone; but she only swooned, and this morning she is nicely and comfortable like.'

'Well, you do surprise me. I am quite rejoiced, I assure you.'

Leaving the father to the enjoyment of his interview with his daughter, I proceeded to ascertain the condition of young Moneybags.

He was in a much worse condition than his victim. Completely prostrated by loss of blood, together with his constitution shattered by dissipation, it would be a long time before he could leave his bed. He was safe for a few weeks at least.

I had yet a duty to perform to my client, old Moneybags, as I could now venture to give him an account of his son. I bent my steps during the morning down to Broad Street. Upon arriving at the warehouse, I was surprised to find it closed.

Knocking at the door at a venture, without any expectation of its being opened, it was answered by Mr. Barton.

'How is this, Mr. Barton? No business to-day.'

'No sir. The old gentleman died this morning.'

'Old Moneybags dead.'

'Dead, sir, and we cannot find his hopeful son anywhere.'

'You can find him any day for the next month at the City Hospital.'

Thus ended my mission with Moneybags and Son. I learned quite accidentally some months afterwards, that the son, now become the principal in consequence of his father's death, had reformed, and was married to Henrietta. He may prove an exemplary husband. I hope he may for her sake.

The British Regatta at Paris.—The following is the programme of the regatta arranged by the English to come off at Paris. The British regatta in Paris, which is under the patronage of the Emperor of the French, the Prince of Wales, and the Duke of Edinburgh, and is open to the whole world, will take place on the Seine on the 9th of July and the four following days, when the following prizes and others that may be added will be competed for:—Class A—Amateurs.—(The prizes in this class will be cups, with silver medal for each man in the boat winning the first prize.)—Eight-oared boats (entrance £5): Cup, value £120. Four oars (entrance £3): Cup, £60. Pair oars (entrance £2): First Cup, £50; second Cup, £25. Sculls (entrance £1): First Cup, £40; Second Cup, £20; third cup, £15, Canoes (entrance 10s.): First cup, £20; second cup, £15; third cup, £10; fourth cup, £5. Class B—Watermen.—Four Oars: First, a purse of £100; second, £50: Pair oars: First purse, £50; second, 25; third 15. Class C—Man-of-War's Men.—First division: First, a purse of £30; second, £20; third, 15. 2d division: First purse, £30; second, £20, third, £15. Class D—Yatchsmen: 1st division: First, a purse of £30: second, £20; third, £15. 2d division: First purse, £30; second, £20; third, £15. Entries must be made between May 15 and Saturday, June 15, inclusive, by letter addressed to the secretary of the committee, Mr. Charles Wylde, Paris Exhibition, South Kensington Museum, London. The committee undertake to convey, from a depot in or near London, to Paris and back again to London, any boat duly entered for a race, and to provide a suitable place for its custody and protection during the regatta. An ocean race for yachts will be hereafter announced.

United States Debt.—Secretary McCulloch's last statemen of the public debt of the United States shows a considerable reduction during the month of March. After deducting the amount in the Treasury, the debt on March and April 1st, stood as follows:—

March 1st	$2,580,763,880.80
April 1st	2,524,428,070.44
Decrease for the month,	$7,335,810.36

There has been a large decrease of the "seven thirties" and compound interest notes, and a large increase of the "five twenties" an indication that the Secretary of the Treasury is pursuing with success his policy of redeeming the short date securities by the issue of bonds which have no longer to run.

The following figures show the progress made in the reduction of the debt since it reached its highest point of eighteen months since:—

Decrease in debt for 6 months ending April,	$19,897,104.18
" in debt for the year ending April 1,	182,218,446.00
" in debt since Sept. 1, 1865, the highest point of the National Debt,	234,261,501.00

The decrease during the last quarter is not nearly so rapid as it was previously; but it is still tolerably rapid.

Mary Queen of Scots.—Scarce ever a sovereign entered upon a rule with so many attributes of popularity. The blood of an ancient and beloved line of monarchs ran in her veins. She was the descendant of the heroic Bruce—the liberator of the land. With this illustrious blood she united that of the heroic Lorraine, with whose deeds Europe was ringing. She herself, by her marvellous beauty, her accomplishments and her wit, had even widened the renown of her country, known as it was so well over Christendom. She dazzled the commonalty with new court glories to which sombre Scotland was unaccustomed; and her regal pageants were no chaotic displays of barbaric splendour, but were brought under the rule of a thoroughly refined taste. The splendours of her court were not invidious to the people, since they came not from the national exchequer, but were decorated by the jewellery and supplied from the dowry of a queen dowager of France. The old warlike and chivalrous feeling of the people found more to stir it to this delicate woman than in many a hero. She had often shown her beautiful face under the helmet, mounted on her charger at the head of her troops. In more peaceful days the peasantry of the borders and the Highlands were familiar with the airy form sweeping past on a milk-white steed, at the stag-hunt or the hawking followed by all the chivalry of her court. Such scenes were not confined to the exclusive precincts of parks or royal forests; they were not secluded from a suspected population by a jealous retinue of guards. They were seen by her people at large; and there were few corners of the land so remote, but some were there who could tell of having seen them. Hence the Queen naturally, from year to year, acquired a strength in her own popularity, which must have weighed formidably against her opponents, and might have served in good stead had not those things taken place before which no popularity could stand."—Burton's History of Scotland.

The Lash in the Army.—Those humanitarians who desire to see the abolition of corporal punishment in the army in time of peace are not to have their desire gratified as soon as they may have expected from the debate which recently took place in the House of Commons. It will be remembered that a motion was carried in favor of the abolition of flogging by a majority of one. A few days after that vote, Sir J. Packington, Secretary of War, stated in the House that, considering the importance of the subject and the extent to which it effected military discipline, the government, without intending any disrespect to the House, could not regard a majority of one in a House of 215 as the deliberate expression of the opinion of the House. It was therefore the intention of the government, he said, to insert the usual clause in the mutiny bill giving the ordinary limited power of flogging in the army in certain cases. This will cause another struggle between the supporters of the lash and its opponents, and the close vote on the last occasion makes it extremely doubtful whether, after all, the soldier is in future to be free from the polite but unpleasant attentions of the drum-major.

We observe an account of a meeting in the Amherst Gazette, at which it is said Mr. Howe was nominated as a candidate for Ottawa, and Messrs. Amos Purdy, of Wentworth, and Daniel Pugsley, of Napan, for the local legislature.

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Dependupon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourself, and

RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS

We have put up and sold this article for over thirty years and can say with confidence and truth of it, which we have never been able to say of any other medicine—never has it failed, in a single instance, to effect a cure, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after thirty years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfilment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most experienced and skilful nurses in New England, and has been used with never failing success in

THOUSANDS OF CASES.

It not only relieves the child from pain but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied end in death. We believe it the best and surest remedy in the world, in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhœa in children, whether it arises from teething, or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the forgoing complaints—do not let your prejudices, nor the prejudices of others, stand between your suffering child and the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

GRIPING IN THE BOWELS, AND WIND COLIC

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

ALL CURES MADE EASY

BY

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

Bad Legs, Ulcerous Sores, Bad Breasts, and Old Wounds.

No description of wound, sore or ulcer can resist the healing properties of this excellent Ointment. The worst case readily assume a healthy appearance whenever this medical antis applied; sound flesh springs up from the bottom of the wound, inflammation of the surrounding skin is arrested and a complete and permanent cure quickly follow the use of the ointment.

Piles, Fistulas, and Internal Inflammation

These distressing and weakening diseases may with constainty be cured by the sufferers themselves, if they will use Holloway's Ointment, and closely attend to the printed instructions. It should be well rubbed upon the neighboring parts, when all obnoxious matter will be removed. A poultice of bread and water may sometimes be applied at bed time with advantage; the most scrupulous cleanliness must be observed. If those who read this paragraph will bring it under the notice of such of their acquaintances whom it may concern, they will render a service that will never be forgotten, as a cure is certain.

Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia.

Nothing has the power of reducing inflammation and subduing pain in these complaints in the same degree as Holloway's cooling Ointment and purifying Pills. When used simultaneously they drive all inflammation and depravities from the system, subdue and remove all enlargement of the joints, and leave the sinews and muscles lax and uncontracted. A cure may always be effected, even under the worst circumstance, if the use of these medicines be persevered in Eruptions, Scald Head, Ringworm, and other Skin Diseases.

After fomentation with warm water, the utmost relief and speediest cure can be readily obtained in all complaints affecting the skin and joints, by the simultaneous use of the Ointment and Pills. But it must be remembered that nearly all skin diseases indicate the depravity of the blood and derangement of the liver and stomach, consequently, in many cases, time is required to purify the blood, which will be effected by a judicious use of the Pills. The general health will readily be improved, although the eruption may be driven out more freely than before, and which should be promoted; perseverance is necessary.

Sore Throats, Diptheria, Quinsey, Mumps and all other Derangements of the Throat.

On the appearance of any of these maladies the Ointment should be well rubbed at least three times a day upon the neck and upper part of the chest, so as to penetrate to the glands, as salt is forced into meat: this course will at once remove inflammation and ulceration. The worst cases will yield to this treatment by following the printed directions.

Scrofula or King's Evil and Swelling of the Glands.

This class of cases may be cured by Holloway's purifying Pills and Ointment, as their double action of purifying the blood and strengthening the system renders them more affable than any other remedy for all complaints of a scrofulous nature. As the blood is impure, liver, stomach and bowels being much deranged, require purifying medicin to bring about a cure.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:—

Bad Legs	Chilblains	Fistulas	Skin-diseases
Bad Breasts	Chiego-foot	Gout	Sore-nipples
Burns	Chapped Hands	Glandular	Sore-throats
Bunions	Corns (Softs)	swellings	Scurvy
Bites of Moschetoes and Sand-flies	Cancers	Lumbago	Sore-heds
	Contracted and Stiff Joints	Piles	Tumors
		Rheumatism	Ulcers
Coco-bay	Elephantiasis	Scalds Yaws	Wounds

Sold at the Establishment of Professor Holloway, 224 Strand, (near Temple Bar,) London; and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the civilised world, at the ollowing prices:—1s 1½., 2s. 9., 4s. 6., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Pot.
