Tweedsmuir Sees Hope For Youth In Scouts Movement

Governor-General Praises its Discipline—Classless Character of Training and Outlook Found Worthy Influence Upon Present-Day Generation.

In an age which is "a difficult time for the timid, a horrible time for the dogmatist, but a wonderful time for youth..."

before. It has become a great school of national training for every class, and especially for the classes who do not as a matter of course follow the ordinary routine of school and college.

Stating his belief that today's young people had got over the "war-weariness" and moral slackness which had affected youth in the early 1920's...

Text of Lord Tweedsmuir's address follows: I am delighted to be present here tonight, and I need not tell you I am deeply honored to be Chief Scout for Canada.

GROWTH OF MEMBERSHIP

This is a wonderful gathering, for we have here Provincial Presidents from every part of Canada.

GIVES CODE OF LIFE

Most important of all, it gives them a code of life, something to live up to. In these days when there is a good deal of the high-velocity value that our youth should have something firm to hold to.

Scouting gets the full value out of youth by training it without creating a set life for it. You remember Dr. Israel's famous saying, "It is a great thing to be young to be young and to be wise is irrefragable."

tion was not immune to the dangers of war, tumult, dry-rot and leanness, and that too great protection for youth was to be desired.

Other speakers were Mr. Lafamme, Chaplain of the Catholic Scouts of Quebec, and Brigadier Rufus T. Hooper, of the Salvation Army, both of whom were glad that their organizations had joined the wider Scouting movement.

The Boy Scouts brass band (Vickers) led by Lennox Burn, played during dinner, and a piper from the Black Watch Canada piped His Excellency and the other guests into the dining room.

At the head table were the Governor-General, Sir Edward Beatty, Mgr. Lafamme, Mayor Houde, Bishop Farthing, Col. J. H. Woods, J. P. M. Stewart, His Honor, Col. Murray MacLaren, Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick, Brigadier Spooner, W. J. Gair, Toronto; P. B. McMichael, Toronto; P. A. E. Morgan, St. Charles W. Lindsay, Brig-Gen. O. H. SEES DIFFICULTIES AGAINST SPUD PLAN
FREDERICTON, May 3.—(C.P.)—"Anything reasonable is worth a trial if it will serve to stabilize the potato industry," said Senator B. Frank Smith, proponent of potato growers and Florencoche, speaking with reference to a plan suggested by Guy G. Porter of Andover, who advocates utilization of the surplus New Brunswick call potato crop in manufacturing alcohol for motor fuel.

Many difficulties, non-existent in the European countries visited by Mr. Porter, might arise in this province, Senator Smith believes. The price of 50 cents a barrel mentioned by the Andover potato shipper after his study of the industry in Germany, would not be very attractive to New Brunswick farmers, the Senator said.

Now that potato prices were making a comeback 50 cents seemed low, he remarked, predicting that the price would rise to $3 per barrel this year. His opinion was based on the fact that the price of potatoes has been very long and he feared the farmers would overplant their crops this year.

"If the farmers could be kept from planting too many potatoes—if it were possible to regulate and control the acreages—we would always get a fair price for our potatoes," Senator Smith stated.

Spruce Sawfly Outbreak in 1935

So far as the information may be interested to foresters and wood managers, the Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has issued a report on the outbreaks of the European Spruce sawfly and of the beetle in Eastern Canada in 1935.

This information has been obtained by the officers of the Forest Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture at the Dominion Forest Laboratory at Fredericton, N.B. Investigations have been carried out at the head of the Gaspé Peninsula, at the Parke Reserve of the Quebec Forest Service in Kamourague county, P.Q., and near Fredericton, N.B. A general survey has been undertaken, in which cooperation has been received from the Quebec Forest Service and the officials of many of the pulp and paper companies, including the Quebec Forest Industries Association Limited. Particular acknowledgment is made to those companies which have obtained samples of cocoon and assisted in parasite liberation work. No sound reasons have as yet appeared for expecting anything but a continuation and gradual extension of the outbreak. The sawfly appears to be adapted to maintaining itself in destructive numbers throughout the range of the spruce forests. In Gaspé it confines itself to one generation, the largest part of which successfully reaches the hibernation stage before snow. In New Brunswick there are two successful generations to fit in with the longer season, and further south there are probably three.

For the past three years the Dominion Entomological Branch has been engaged in the introduction, rearing and liberation of parasites of the sawfly from Europe. These parasites are collected in co-operation with the Farmham Royal Laboratory (England) of the Imperial Institute of Entomology, and are forwarded to the Dominion Parasite Laboratory where pure cultures of the adults are reared for liberation in Canada. These parasites are insects which live only on other insects. In their larval stage they feed in or upon the sawfly larvae, finally killing it and emerging from the sawfly cocoon as adult winged parasites which lay their eggs in more sawfly larvae. In the liberation of these parasites in the affected areas, financial and other assistance has been given by the Quebec government and by companies owning lands in the Gaspé peninsula through the Quebec Forest Industries Association. The full benefit of parasitizing the sawfly cannot be appreciated for some time to come. Three species of parasites have already become established and the addition of these to the forest fauna promises to be of permanent value.

The only direct method of controlling the sawfly pest is by the application of a poison dust from aeroplanes. Owing to the cost, and to the fact that re-infestation will take place from neighbouring forests and from dormant larvae on the ground, this method can be

TORONTO, May 5.—(C.P.)—Marriage has nothing whatever to do with women's entry into political life," stated Alderman Agnes Sharp of Hamilton, speaking to the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation women's joint committee.

The woman C. C. F. alderman was emphatic that any person whose convictions were sincere would make time to work for the good for the country, cause and times.

"Canada's two bachelor political leaders are no criterion that politics take; all one's time," she said. "Anyone can find the time to do what actually interests them and it is merely an old home of contentment theorists to spout that women's place is in the home. But knowledge of outside affairs means she will conduct it more efficiently, more to the interests of those she holds dear."

TEACHERS MARVEL AT INDIANS' ART (By The Canadian Press) WINNIPEG, May 5.—Union Jack branch, Junior Red Cross, located Berens River, Man., sent a display of work to Red Cross headquarters, shown at the recent teachers' convention, which proved that one section of Manitoba at least was retaining a knowledge of its Indian handicrafts and arts.

John James Berens, son of Chief William Berens, and president of the branch, explained in a letter the origin of his branch, and the nature of their work. He enclosed miniature snowshoes, made by himself; beaded moccasins, buskins, picture-frames embroidered in rose, mauve, blue and green.

Slow in Gotham Londoner Finds

(By The Canadian Press) MONTREAL, May 5.—Belief that the woman university graduate in England often did not receive the salary she should receive, was voiced by Miss Janet Harris, of London. She was one of the first women to graduate in engineering in London University, and has been spending a short time in Montreal.

Commenting on various places she had visited in the United States and Canada, Miss Harris observed that the "traffic in New York is terrible!" She added: "It's dreadfully slow compared with London. Neither did she think the safety zones were very safe. Our islands in England are nice refuges," she said.

Miss Harris believed not many women in England received high salaries, but she thought that a girl, able to do secretarial work, need never be without a job that brought a moderate wage. She was inclined to agree that the young woman who could successfully turn her hand to a number of jobs, had, on the whole, a better chance of constant employment at a moderate wage, than the woman who had specialized in one line, to the exclusion of others. She added: "The more you specialize, the duller it gets."

Miss Harris thought that the newly-created position of personal director, to act as intermediary between the general manager and the foreman, in industries largely employing women, was well paid. This type of position was open to a university graduate, and while she admitted that a university degree was of assistance to the woman desiring to make headway, she added, humorously: "When you apply for a position, and you haven't got a university degree, the employer demands it, and when you have, they don't seem to care much about it."

Miss Harris thought that to live comfortably at all in London, a woman must earn $25 a week, and that "doesn't seem to leave anything over for travelling. A decent room cost as a week. She believed that professional and business women in Canada and the United States seemed to be able to travel more on their salaries than women in England.

Miss Harris is convener of the hospitality committee of the British Federation of Business and Professional Women. Although not more than two years old, this organization has a membership of between 10,000 and 12,000. A great many of the members are civil servants.

Just after the War I confess I was a little nervous about our young people at home. Those who were at school in the years before the Armistice seemed to suffer from war-weariness more than those who had fought at the front. They seemed to want only the soft option, and to be interested only in the short game, to seek a secure niche where they could be comfortable, and amuse themselves. That period did not last long. For many years I have had a good deal to do with British youth in the school and the colleges, and I do not believe that the young energy were ever better than they are today. Their point of view seems to be that we live in a critical time, and that there must be no difficulty or danger which they are unable to face up to. They realize that the very foundations of society have been shaken in these days, and that it is their business to make them solid again. Therefore, both physically and mentally they are adventurous. In their holidays they do not want to go to the ordinary seaside resort, and potter about with tennis racket or golf club. They prefer something much more enterprising such as looking after a batch of young Welsh miners on the land, or going as deck hands on a trawler to the Arctic. And another fine trait about them is that they seem to have lost all foolish class feeling. They will make friends with anybody and meet everyone on the basis of a common humanity. No gentlemen, there is nothing wrong with our youth today.

Therefore it seems to me that the Boy Scout movement has an importance which it has never had
