Latin American Dinners Are Late And Leisurely

In Latin America, dinner is served late and enjoyed at leisure. It includes lovely embroidered linen on flower-decked tables. Foods are gaily garnished with red fruits, pimientos, hard-cooked egg, tomato and colored candies.

Measurements are level; recipes for 4 to 6.

Our recipe for Colombian Hallacas is a facsimile of the famous Latin-American dish. They shape it on banana leaves that have previously been covered with a paste made from soaked ground dried corn kernels. It is then steamed instead of baked.

Columbian Hallacas: Prepare 1 recipe cornmeal pie pastry by sifting together 1 c. enriched yellow cornmeal, 3 c. pre-sifted enriched flour and 1/2 tsp. salt. Chop in 1/2 c. shortening with a pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse crumbs.

Gradually add 6 tbsp. cold water. Toss with fork until pastry holds together.

Place on waxed paper. Press gently into ball. Let stand 15 min. at room temperature. Cut in halves.

Transfer to lightly floured surface. Roll each piece a scant 1/4" thick and cut into 4" squares.

Filling: Fine-chop and mix together 1-lb. cooked pork loin, 2-oz. lean salt pork, a cooked potato, 1 c. drained, canned garbanzo beans (chick peas), 1/4 c. minced onion and 1 minced, peeled section garlic (optional).

Mix and saute in 2 tsp. fat. Add 1 tsp. paprika, 1 tsp. salt and 1/4 tsp. pepper, or according to taste. Stir in 2 chopped hard-cooked eggs. If over-dry add 2 to 3 tsp. beef broth.

Cover and refrigerate 2 hrs.

To Assemble: On one half of each 4" square cornmeal pastry, put 1 tsp. of filling. Top with halved pitted olive.

Fold over pastry; press edges together with tines of fork. Brush with milk.

Bake 25-30 min. in a mod. oven, 375 degrees F. Serve hot.

Pan-American Orange Custard: Combine 1 tsp. grated orange peel, 1 tsp. grated lemon peel and 1/2 c. orange juice.

Cover and let stand 20 min. to flavor. Strain.

Beat 5 eggs. Gradually add 3/4 c. sugar; beat until fluffy. Slowly beat in orange juice.

Ladle into buttered custard cups and set them in pan; surround with hot water to half pan depth.

Bake 30-35 min. in a mod. oven, 350 degrees F., or until firm in center when tested with wooden pick. Chill.

Unmold in dessert dishes. Garnish with chunks of fresh California orange and quartered red and green maraschino cherries.

TRICK OF THE CHEF
Add 1/4 tsp. fine crushed cummin seed to not-sweet French dressing for tossed salads.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Sparrows', Starlings' Calls Exquisite Sounds Of Spring

By this afternoon Rob was home again-back to the care of his farming. And in a happy consequence all was well with the family once more. In his absence Dame Fortune had smiled on his helpers. And as it happened also on the little truck's load of young livestock which came to add their number to his herd.

"Ellen," James judged us to wakefulness this morning, "And isn't it a shame to waken you?" he offered with a little chuckle "and you sleeping so soundly! But I was afraid you would miss this-something I've been hearing. It woke me. I believe perhaps I've been listening for it late for to me it's one of the nicest sounds of the Spring. Listen! there it is again," he said almost reverently.

And what was that sound we heard so happily there on our pillows in our old, wooden bed with the day bright and new at the windows? A train's whistle on a wind of the north? The pleasant beat of a plane perhaps, following strange trails of the sky? The rise and fall of the traffic on the Highway south, which comes in to us at Alderlea more or less emphasized by weather and season? The rumble of a machine toiling up the road-hill? The musical drop of water at the spillways on the dam below?

It was none of these. No hand of man in this but instead Mother Nature's winsome touch. We listened again, breaths bated, James expression expectant, pleased. And into the exquisite newness of the day, threaded in engagingly among sparrows' twitters and starlings' calls, like a golden thread amid more sober weaving on the loom, came the broken run of a fobin from branch or lawn without.

"That," James smiled, "is worth waiting through a Winter to hear!" "It's a dream when snowstorms blow, isn't it?" we said "a far-away dream. You sometimes wonder in the bleak days if you've ever heard it, so foreign-then it seems."

How sweet it was! It was warrant that the resting earth was again stirring, warrant too of every loveliness to come. "This is all very nice, Ellen," James commented easing himself up to meet his day, "but it won't get us ready for the cropping, now will it?"

"It keeps cool," a visiting farmer said by way of "passing the time of day," with us in the yard, "though it is more summer-like today."

"We heard a robin's song this morning," we said.

"I guess," he smiled "though the old saying was of swallows—but it must be going to take more than one robin's song to make a Summer! After all," he said, "we haven't had 'the poor man's maunent' - the last snowfall yet, have we?"

But we had a more summery afternoon. Lads angled along the stream. A company of robins gleaned worms in the sunny front meadow. Papa Starling flew up to the garage roof, a straw in his "mouth" a twinkle in his eye.

How busy and promising and good are these fast-flying April days!

Until tomorrow — Diary 1 Good-night.

MR. AND MRS. VANCE HARRIS

Harris-Morrison Vows Exchanged In Summerside

Baskets of multi-colored Easter flowers created the setting for a pretty wedding in Summerside Presbyterian Church on Saturday, March 28, at 2 o'clock, when Barbara Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theron D. MARY HAYWORTH

Unmarried Mother Wishes To Reclaim Her Child

Dear Mary Haworth: Before I was married I had a child, and immediately gave her up for adoption, as I could see no other solution. I was 17 at the time.

My parents were separated and my mother had to work to support us (herself and me); and although she wanted me to keep the baby, I didn't want to add to her burdens.

A year later I married the baby's father; and now, after seven years' marriage, we are still childless, and regret having given our daughter away. We've inquired about getting her back but she has been adopted since she was three months old; and is well, and a fine girl. That's all we could learn.

STILL STUMBLING BLOCK
I have thought of fighting for her; but I wouldn't want to hurt her adopting parents. Right now I am under psychiatric care and very depressed — mostly due to not having children. Both my husband and I have had medical tests, and it seems Bob needs some corrective help, after which we may still have children—but it will take time.

We have talked of adopting; and my doctor advises it, but Bob hesitates as he isn't a church goer, and says if they can't endorse him as is, he fears he will walk away from it all. He believes in God and knows his Bible; it is just that he doesn't go to church (through he says if we have a child, he'll go then).

After six months' psychiatric care I feel no better; and don't know where to turn. Should I go ahead and try to get my little girl or leave things as they are for her sake; as well as her parents? I would appreciate your suggestions; and hope you can answer soon. — R.P.

PRACTISED PAIR
Dear R.P.: It seems that you and your husband make a habit of sidestepping parental responsibilities, by thinking mostly of might-have-beens and could-bees. You just don't get down to busi-

Art Exhibition Held By Summerside Association

An interesting and thought-provoking art exhibition comprised of approximately ninety paintings was displayed following the meeting of the Home and School Association on Wednesday, April 22, in the Summerside Civic Auditorium.

This showing contained work done by members of the P.E.I. Art Society, and art students of Summerside, under the direction of Mrs. J.A. Brophy. It was composed of realism and expressionist styles and the media used were oil and tempera.

Mr. W.A. Rayner, Principal of Summerside High School, asked Mrs. Brophy to introduce the speaker, Mr. Barry Bugden, of the P.E.I. Art Society.

Mr. Bugden mentioned the purposes and objectives of the Art Society, and explained the purpose of art and its relation to the individual viewer, pointing out that the effect of any given work of art, particularly cubism, and so called modernist paintings, may appear pleasant to a few and annoying or uninteresting to a great many. However, such works, because of their color, tones, and workmanship, may be rated highly in the field of art because of the ability of the painter.

He went on to outline the value of art to the younger generation: "Experience in visual art stimulates children to grow towards a full adult life by giving them confidence in their own individual personalities, and individual awareness."

Art contributes greatly to the growth of all their feelings and faculties, developing the creative instinct, their sense of freedom, self-confidence and self-respect. Children love the feeling of having made and composed something on their own. Encourage art in your child whenever and wherever possible.

Remember, art, like music, has the supreme educational quality of being a universal language with a wonderful possibility of exerting influence upon the life of society as a whole.

In closing, Mr. Bugden expressed the willingness of the P.E.I. Art Society to co-operate in help-
