U. S. ELECTORS
ministration can do to halt the Red ideology.

On this note, Truman today got in a last election lick when he assured the nation that the free countries inevitably will prevail against Communism's "continuing menace to world peace." The President spoke from Independence, Mo., his home town where tomorrow he will vote.

Democrats Worried
The Democrats are openly worried about the political effect of Chinese Red intervention in the Korean war. They fear that the unexpected turn may favor their opponents.

With no presidential voting, much of the international interest in the election - apart from the question of which party will control Congress for the next two years - centres on races usually subsidiary in leap-year balloting. One of these is New York where Dewey is opposed by representative Walter A. Lynch.

Dewey is favored to win. But that he is not certain may be indicated in his 18-hour television radio marathon in New York City today when he spoke every hour on the hour and in between answering questions received by telephone from mobile TV units touring city streets.

His first question, at 6 a.m.: "How does it feel to get up so early?" The reply: "I'm used to it. At my Pawling farm I often rise early to help with the milking." A rundown of some other important or interesting election contests:

Arizona: Mrs. Ana Frohmler, 59, and for 24 years state auditor, is running for governor under the Democratic ticket. She is opposed by Howard Pyle, Phoenix radio executive. Should she be elected, she would be the third woman elected governor in the United States.

Mrs. Nellie Ross once governed Wyoming and Mrs. James (Ma) Ferguson succeeded her husband as governor of Texas.

California: Republican Governor Earl Warren, 59, seeks a third term. He is opposed by Democrat James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Michigan: G. Mennen Williams, shaving-cream millionaire and Democratic governor, is running against former Governor Harry Kelly, a Republican who came out of voluntary political retirement.

Herbert H. Lehman, former governor and former head of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, is trying to hold his Senate seat for the Democrat-Liberal faction against Joe Hanley, Republican state lieutenant-governor and author of the famed "Hanley Letter." The 74-year-old Hanley wrote in a letter that he could pay his debts if he ran for senator instead of for governor. The Democrats charge a political "payoff" by which Hanley left the field open for Dewey—who once said he wouldn't run.—who.

Ontario: Republican Senator Robert A. Taft, co-author of the restrictive Taft-Hartley labor law which rules out the closed shop in industry, has organized labor almost solidly against him. No. 1 spokesman for the Republican Party, he twice has bid for the presidential nomination. Joseph (Jumping Joe) Ferguson, Democrat, is given little chance by election observers against Taft.

New York City: Vito Marcantonio, left-wing American Labor Party congressman and only member of his party in the House, is fighting for re-election in "Spanish Harlem," the drab, overcrowded Puerto Rican district of Manhattan where last week's presidential assassination plot was spawned. The Republican, Liberal and Democratic Parties have united against Marcantonio with James G. Donovan.

Canadian Exporters May Have To Ration Goods To Customers

By FORBES RHUDE (Canadian Press Business Editor)
OTTAWA, Nov. 6 (CP)—Canadian exporters, worried a few months ago about where they would find markets, met today with the prospect that they may have to ration goods to customers.

That was about the way that M. W. MacKenzie, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, described the situation in an address at the annual convention of the Canadian Exporters' Association.

The reports of both Brig. James A. Roberts of Hamilton, president, and of John A. Marsh, general manager, spoke of the frustrations of the last year when the export trade of many companies was wiped out because of currency and other trade restrictions.

But of the present and prospective situation Brig. Roberts said: "Domestic business is good. Export business from a standpoint of volume and value is also good. Viewed from almost any angle, we can truthfully say that Canada has a booming economy and an astounding standard of living for a youthful nation of 14,000,000 people."

And Mr. Marsh commented: "The happenings of the past few months, which must be construed in the light of the general recovery of the European nations from war on the one hand, and the stepping-up of defence programs on the other, have resulted in a booming Canadian economy.

"Projected into this picture, or as a result of it, we find constructive steps in trade have been taken by many nations including those of our own government."

Trade With Britain
F. J. Stratton, member of the United Kingdom Dollar Export Board offered hope that United Kingdom restrictions on Canadian sales to the sterling area, may be lessened in the light of the sterling area's increased supply of dollars.

Emphasizing that Britain will continue her drive to sell in dollar areas, Mr. Stratton added: "Our main aim . . . is to try to earn dollars from you so that we can restore a high level of imports from Canada to the United Kingdom."

"In trying to earn dollars, we are not taking dollars away from any one else, because we are counting on the huge expansion of the Canadian economy which is one of the major economic phenomena of our times . . ."

Of the flow of Canadian goods to Britain he said: "Arrangements have been made for the purchase of 100,000 tons of newsprint and 850,000 tons of iron ore between now and 1951, thus reversing the 1948 suspension of a facilities of importing these products into the United Kingdom. Canned salmon, softwood and pulp are also among the products which will be taken in increased quantities."

Membership in the Association fell from 537 firms to 424, with various firms, in the words of Mr. Marsh, "yielding to the blandishments of the domestic market and forsaking their export markets."

Both Brig. Roberts and Mr. Marsh urged that Canadians keep on going after markets no matter what the difficulties.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 6 (CP)—Two convicts escaped from the prison farm at Kingston Penitentiary Saturday night. The men, not named until the farm gang was broken up, are Jean Bernard, 24, Sudbury, Ont., serving a sentence of two years, six months for breaking and entering and theft, and Allan Francis, 25, Toronto, serving four years for car theft.

Defence Minister Claxton, standing in the midst of the rush to get it ready, said today the Canadian gift equipment for an infantry division will be in Netherlands hands by the end of the year.

With undisguised pleasure, Netherlands War Secretary Fockema-Andree said he would report the first shipment will leave Montreal Nov. 15, the last a month later.

The announcement was made at the Longue Pointe ordnance depot, biggest in the country. There a small arm is greater, modifying and packing the 350,000,000 gift of arms and equipment which comprises one of Canada's major efforts under the North Atlantic Pact.

It includes some 70 self-propelled 17-pounder anti-tank guns or tank destroyers mounted on Sherman tank chassis.

It is no secret that Western Europe's equipment situation is such that the gift is of considerable significance. The destination of a gift of equipment for a second European division will not be disclosed until Canada has arranged to replace the first largely through orders in the United States.

Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands all are seeking it.

Mr. Claxton and Mr. Fockema-Andree toured the ordnance depot with Defence Minister Shipway of Britain and sides as part of a day's program which showed them a Canadian fighter—the F86 Sabre jet—flashing through

POULTRY

Loading heavy fowl, chicken, capon. FRIDAY, NOV. 10, 8.30 A.M. TO 2 P.M. MR. FARMER:—

Regular, large volume, expertly handled, quickly assembled truck poultry loadings, in conjunction with carefully planned steady, every hour of the working day labor at the other end by the poultry-processors is resulting in high poultry prices.

Study this advertisement. If you think this attempt to iron out poultry marketing wrinkles is good, give us a boost.

By the way if the good wife and yourself have made out your 1951 chick order. I could sure use it to advantage.

Britain Concerned Chinese Reds In North Korea

LONDON, Nov. 6 (AP)—A Government spokesman told Parliament today Britain's continued recognition of Communist China hinges on that country's actions toward Korea and Tibet.

Foreign Undersecretary Ernest Davies, replying to questions in the House of Commons, expressed Britain's concern over the reports of Red troops in North Korea and of their invasion of Tibet.

"Quite clearly," said Davies, "the Chinese take an action like this it will influence our attitude towards them."

Qualified informants reported earlier in the day the Government is thinking seriously of withdrawing the recognition it granted the Chinese Red regime last January.

Foreign Secretary Bevin, who pushed through the recognition, is expected to make an important statement on British-Chinese relations in Commons — probably Tuesday.

Britain's efforts to bring about an agreement on the exchange of diplomatic representatives with Peking have been totally frustrated.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6 (CP)—Quentin J. Gwyn of Montreal today was chosen president of the Canadian Exporters' Association.

He succeeds Brigadier James A. Roberts of Hamilton, president for the last year.

Vice-presidents and honorary treasurer will be chosen later.

Mr. Gwyn and Brig. Roberts are members of the Association's directorate, elected today at the annual convention. Officers are chosen by the directorate.

Mr. Gwyn, a native of Norwich, England, is assistant director of export for the House of Seagram.

"I WAS A MALE WAR BRIDE" AT CAPITOL SUMMERSIDE

Remember the slogan, "Gable's back and Greer's got him?" Think nothing of it—Because Grant is back in a marvelous comedy at the Capitol Theatre and Sheridan takes him for the maddest moments of laughter and romance that have been seen since it took only the urge to get married pronto.

Director Howard Hawks has crammed "I Was a Male War Bride" full of fun and frolic and kept it going at a mad-can pace from start to finish. There's never a dull moment and the script writers have written such hilarious lines that music is restricted to introduction and finale. And a good thing, too. No sense missing a word of this genuinely entertaining movie that will pack a theatre as solidly as it is packed with laughs.

Skipping, jumping, leaping and falling through Germany, a WAC lieutenant (Ann Sheridan) and a captain in the French Economic Commission (Cary Grant) are pushed by military fortune into each other's arms. The second half of the fun begins when, in order to marry, they must get military consent. Those who know Army red-tape can guess what happens. After that, all they have to do is to get married three times.

Then, they face the problem of consummating the marriage. A simple matter that is only interrupted by immediate separation orders for Ann to report for embarkation to the States. By the fact that Cary must go as a "War Bride" and by the unfortunate fact that the Brides' WAC disguises is discovered.

Both Brig. Roberts and Mr. Marsh urged that Canadians keep on going after markets no matter what the difficulties.
