SURPRISE MAY BE NIGHTMARE

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A surprise may have turned into a costly nightmare for 85-year-old Joseph Costello. When Mr. Costello, a retired real estate man, went into hospital last month his relatives decided to surprise him by turning his home into a boarding house so he could earn some extra money.
The conversion cost Mr. Costello $200, but his relatives had forgotten to get a building permit, so he was fined $50.
Now the city has told Mr. Costello that the house does not conform to zoning regulations and has ordered him not to rent any of the rooms until the matter has been studied.

Pilot Returns To Seal Hunt

Jacques Cachon, 27-year-old pilot who spent a night on Gulf of St. Lawrence ice after his small aircraft was forced down some 50 miles from the Magdalen Islands said last night he was misquoted in a story in the Guardian yesterday. He said he did not express a wish to return to Quebec City. Instead, he went Tuesday to Gaspe and yesterday was back in the Magdalen Islands taking part in the seal hunt.
He said his aircraft forced down Monday, was still on the ice. He was hopeful an attempt would be made today to recover it, possibly by flying it off the ice.

PARKING TAGS TOUGH ON PENS

TORONTO (CP) — How can Metropolitan Toronto's policemen catch so thousands of parking tags in the city? George Ben asked Tuesday night as Metro studied its annual budget.
"We issued 817,000 parking tags last year but we marked 800,000," said Metro's chief of police, George Ben. Let's Dine Out At The Charlottetown

It was understood the trustees, and not union members, paid for the edition emphasizing the dismissal of Hal C. Banks as president of the union Wednesday and publicizing his replacement, Charles Turner.
The edition was not edited by the former president, but by the editor of the Canadian Sailor.
The edition says Mr. Turner, former editor of the Canadian School of Railway and Steamship Clerks, is a marine engineer by trade. However, he has not worked on ships since his arrival in Canada 17 years ago, a trustee spokesman said.
The special issue said Charles Millard, one of three members of the board of maritime trustees, was the former president of the United Steelworkers of Canada, has job stabilization as his aim and has racked up an enviable record in Canadian labor in the past few years.
Mr. Millard will administer the union from his offices in SUI headquarters in Montreal.
The special issue said in an editorial union functionaries "have complained over the years of having too small a voice in the conduct of your union affairs. No one ever died or went crazy from lack of tobacco," says the author... and he gives you practical hints that really work. Get your Reader's Digest today.
