ELLEN'S DIARY

Bread, Rising In The Pans Also Notes Mild Weather

The sparrows were tidy today, plumage neatly moulded to their small forms, for a distinct change of weather, a mildness after days of continued frost, was on the glass.

A pleasant day it has been for all. Even the dough mixed and set to rise in our granite bread-pan seemed to have an alertness to it, we sometimes find missing when more wintry days are about. . . "I'd venture to say, Ellen, you owe yourself a new bread-pan one of these days. Dear me, I believe that one dates back to the first of your farming," one of near kin suggested with a chuckle one day last summer, when we turned its dough to the bread-board for that final portioning and light folding which puts it then to the bake-pans.

And Granddaughter looked at us with some expectancy. Then she laughed. "I think," she offered, "Nanna would as soon think of swappin' Gran'daddy as of changing that bread-pan for a new one! But it's not actually old," she added, "not like the tin tea-cannister she uses, or some of the china. In her day here in this house, my great-grandmother too used those." So today favored our bread-making, with sunshine and warmth in the kitchen, and James himself bringing in the choicest sticks from the woodshed to maintain the required heat for the baking.

"Your fire's not burning well, is it, Ellen?" we recall now an old lady of our girlhood remark, when the hearthfire we had been left to tend was inclined to sulk. "It must be," she would smile teasingly, "that your beau is cross now! Fetch in a bit of that birchbark and a kindling-stick or two from the porch, and we'll see if we can't coax back a smile to his face."

Jamie and Gage came by in the afternoon by team and farm-sleigh, choosing that route which, skirting our woodlands, leads along the fields between. Heads, one darker than the other, were innocent of cap or hat.

"Come and sit by the fire," we invited.

"Yes, do!" James said. "Now there," he nodded to them," is a fashion of the times I don't approve of-that of going bare-headed through the cold of the winter. In summer, well, that's different. . .And what is your Dad busy at today?" he questioned.

"Busy at!" one echoed with a chuckle. "He took himself off with some other farmers on a trip to the Mainland this morning."

"This morning! And when do they plan to be back?"

"By a late boat, it's likely."

"Well. . .well. And he paid no heed to the weather forecasts? There's a storm brewing they say. And if it should storm. . ."

"We'll throw the things a bite-keep them alive until he returns," Gage offered with a happy grin.

"Which reminds me," Jamie said, "we'd better get off home to it now!" Despite their casual words, James knew that in their Dad's absence, the farming was fairly safe in their hands.

All in all, this has been a nice day. And a stilly night we have, which seems to be waiting for . . .Would it be a spot of falling weather?

Until tomorrow — — Diary—Good-night. . .

MARY HAWORTH

Woman Shocked At Idea Of Social Drinking Deacon

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Dear Mary Haworth: I was shocked at your answer to the deacon who drinks a little, over his wife's objection. You and he both should read 2 Corinthians 6:17—"Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean things; and I will receive you. . ."

My husband is a deacon and if he indulged in drink I would advise him to resign from the board. If he didn't, I would go to the board and have him dismissed.

I am trying to raise our children as Christians and they wouldn't have a chance in a church whose governing body consisted of party-goers and drinkers. Sin is sin, great or small; one sip of liquor is as bad as a gallon.

If that deacon's heart were right he would know his life is wrong and he would do something about it.

In this day of sin and turmoil, our children should have the best guidance, because they will be the leaders of tomorrow. If our pastor drank, the deacons and lay members of the church would run him out of town. . . E.S.

Dear Mary Haworth: Your reply to S.M. was fine as far as it went but it didn't get to the crux of the matter.

He is a deacon; but his question—"Is it a sin to drink a little?"—shows he isn't much of a Bible reader. Else how could he have missed 3 Timothy 8:—"Likewise must the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine—."

Galatians 6:7, 8 also answers his question:—"Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

Is a man who drinks (even occasionally) in night clubs and at cocktail parties sowing to the Spirit? Obviously not. Such habits cause both body and spirit to deteriorate. The standard of Christianity is high; but oh, how the world needs to have this standard lived up to by those who profess Christianity.—R.R.

Dear Correspondents: As I get the story, from my Bible reading, our Lord was gravely concerned about self-righteous people. He signified that these people stand a far slimmer chance of saving their souls than do drunks, prostitutes, thieves and the like.

Jesus also exhorted His disciples to beware the risk of passing judgment on fellow sinners, because "with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged," when you arrive at God's judgment seat. You are writing your sentence for eternity now, in terms of how you think of, speak of, and behave towards your weaker brethren.

And don't think you aren't sinners, one way or another. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God," says the apostle John, who further declares: If you think this doesn't mean you, you deceive yourself; you are a liar and the truth isn't in you.

As for the deacon's drinking, one can find various passages in Scriptures to suggest that temperate drinking is not of itself a sin against the Spirit.

For instance Matthew 15:10—"Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man, but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man." (Matthew refers to the quality of your thinking about your neighbor.)

Or see 1 Corinthians 23: "All things are lawful to me," says St. Paul, "but all things are not expedient. . .Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink. . do all to the glory of God. Give none offense. . . ."

Or consider the Biblical account of our Lord's own example: He changed water into wine at the wedding feast at Cana, in response to His mother's solicitude for the embarrassed household. And at the Last Supper, He shared bread and wine with His apostles, pledging them: "I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine until that day I drink it new in the Kingdom of God." (Mark 14:22-25). M.H.

New Beauty Aids Let Hostess Appear Unruffled, Relaxed

Want to look like the hostess who never goes near the kitchen, much less peeks into an oven at a roasting gourmet's delight?

Heed this advice and use up-to-the-minute aids and techniques just as you do jet-age push buttons and electronic ovens.

While the tussle with the menu is still in the planning stage, have your hair and nails done. When you go into the kitchen to begin work, go in with your hair-do wrapped in a loose airy turban, your face clean and creamed (and lightly blotted), your hands creamed up to your rolled-up sleeves, if that is, you can cook in rubber gloves. If you can't, have a tube of hand cream over the kitchen sink ready for renewing softness to hands as fast as pot-washing spirits off the oil.

When your dinner is well under way — pots gently simmering and goodies quietly cooking in the oven — sneak out for a beauty rest. Take it even if you have to lie down with one eye on the clock. Prop hips up with pillows to elevate your feet and send the blood coursing to your face. Add more cream to your face, and you'll get up feeling refreshed and looking beautiful.

Get everything ready in the kitchen for a full hour's freedom just before your guests arrive. Use that hour to put on your prettiest make-up, one that will be made lovelier by a rosy-with-heat and a cream-suppled skin. To enhance this beauty, wear a beige-toned make-up foundation with opacity without thickness, apply eye-shadow (in a beguiling blue or green to complement a rosy skin), a waterproof eye-liner, and apply mascara with a wand.

Take with you to the kitchen a compact powder for touch-ups in the mirror over the sink and a radiant shade of lipstick—depending upon the color of your dress — for use just before guests arrive.

Linda Kines, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. James G. Kines, Slemon Park, is one of the two Girl Guides chosen from the Prince County Division to attend the 1962 Girl Scout Round-Up in Button Bay State Park, Vermont from July 18 to 31. Linda has received her All Round Cord and is a member of the Slemon Park Guides, whose Captain is Mrs. Earl Young. She will be accompanied by a Senior Guider. She is attending High School in Miscouche. At this Camp will be ten thousand Girl Scouts from the United States and other countries. It is the Fiftieth Anniversary of Scouting in the United States.

New Leather Soled Shoes Are Comfortable And Pretty

Fashion stands on a smart new base this Spring—and a leather sole's at the bottom of it all.

Women's shoes on display at the recent Spring preview staged by shoe fashion service of the leather industries divided out into two trends: the dainty, "feminine" shoe, and the tailored "brogue-y" shoe. In both currents, the leather sole sounded the fashion note.

The "feminine look" at ground level is seen in a hundred different styles, shapes and colors, but it is always set on a light-weight leather sole trimmed close to the contour of the shoe. Frequently, the sole is colored at the edge to merge with the shade of the upper leather—and underscore the foot-flattering slimness of the shoe.

In tailored shoes, the leather sole sets the basic pattern. Extended an eighth inch beyond the basic shoe silhouette, the leather sole adds a sturdiness to its appearance. Teamed with a mid-heel and a smooth or suede leather upper, it walks easily along city streets. On country paths or suburban pavements you're more apt to meet it in company with low, stacked heels and a grained or textured leather upper.

Regardless of style, newly-developed leather soles hold their shape—and the shape of the shoe—for as long as you wear them. Flexible and rugged, the newest leather soles do not ravel, fray or bulge at the edge. This keeps all-leather shoes handsome and comfortable long after they are purchased.

Leather soles add fashion interest in another way this season. Many of the pointed, crescent or square toe shoes feature soles extended in front of the toe to "frame" its graceful lines. The "frame" also protects the toe from scuffing when you walk.

Combining foot health and comfort with fashion interest, leather soles cushion the foot against pavement walking and sidewalk shock. Also, the tiny pores in the leather let air enter the shoe at each step—keeping a constant flow of dry air surrounding the foot. As the weather warms up, we'll all be grateful for an added bit of comfort.

CGIT Group Holds Meeting

The members of the York CGIT met at the home of their leader, Mrs. Frank Vessey on Wednesday evening. The president, Miss Marilyn Lewis, chaired the meeting. In the absence of the secretary, Miss Dianne MacDonald, the minutes were taken by Miss Gayle Cooper.

Salmon Curry Is Favorite Lenten Dish

An expertly seasoned sauce can enhance a food and often make it a gourmet's delight. This is especially true when the food is fish. Put together a smooth curry sauce and some fine Canadian canned salmon, serve over fluffy hot rice, and you have an unqualified meal-time success, in this country as well as in the Orient. The home economists of Canada's Department of Fisheries have developed the following recipe for a delicious Creamy Salmon Curry. Though quick to make, the blend of flavours is superb.

CREAMY SALMON CURRY

1 can (7¾ ounces) salmon
2 tablespoons butter or other fat
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon curry powder
½ teaspoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon ground ginger
2 tablespoons minced onion
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup liquid (salmon liquid plus milk)
½ cup light cream
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 cups cooked rice

Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Break salmon into bite-size chunks. Heat butter; blend in flour, curry powder, sugar, ginger, minced onion, and salt. Slowly add mixed salmon liquid and milk, followed by cream. Cook and stir over low heat until sauce is smooth and thickened. Do not allow sauce to boil. Add salmon and lemon rind; heat. Serve over hot cooked rice. Makes 4 servings.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.
