THE DAILY EXAMINER

JUNE 3, 1899.

P. E. ISLAND HOSPITAL.

It will be remembered that when the idea of a second hospital was projected THE EXAMINER opposed it. We hoped that all sections of this Christian community would have been able to unite and co-operate in the high Christian duty of caring for the sick and maimed, and so show that as to one thing, at least, we are followers of Him who exhorted His disciples to unity. But incompatibility of methods, and not a little prejudice, prevented a consummation so devoutly to be wished. In respect to hospital work, as in respect to other religious and charitable efforts, the two main sections of our Christian community have been constrained to go on each in its own way. The results, so far, have been more favorable than we deemed to be possible in this small and not over-rich community. While the Roman Catholics have erected and maintained a fine hospital at the west end of the island, the Protestants have risen to the occasion and supported a similar excellent institution in the east. Many Protestants have put forth noble efforts on behalf of the P. E. Island Hospital, and it has been a refuge and means of relief for those who were in poverty as well as for those who were well to do. We can commend these efforts, and wish God to those who are now taking advantage of Dr. Brecken's handsome gift, and actively interesting themselves in the erection of a new hospital at Kensington. Money has already been supplied for the erection of the building, which is now well under way; but its completion, with all the modern conveniences required in a hospital, necessitates the subscription and payment of about five thousand dollars more. We are not without hope that, sooner or later, some one in this community, some one who has but few family claims and has been blessed with a goodly store of wealth, will endow the Prince Edward Island Hospital with a sufficient amount to relieve to some extent the burden of the Protestant community in respect to it. But, in the meantime, it is clearly the duty, and it ought to be the pride, of well-to-do Protestants throughout the Province to provide abundantly the means for its completion. All men and women are liable to disaster and disease; and it is pleasing to know that Protestants in the Province over, have now an opportunity to obtain an interest in, and a claim upon, an institution designed and equipped for the special purpose of enabling them and their poorer neighbors, and those who may come after them, to obtain in their extremity the relief which the highest medical skill, supplemented by the care of trained nurses, can supply. In this there is a strong, though somewhat selfish, motive to generous action. A higher and nobler motive—one that is essentially Christian—is to be found in the full fruition of the blessed words, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

The Legislature of Massachusetts has voted more than three to one against the abolition of the death penalty in that state. The Mail and Empire points out that when we have paid $1,000,000 for the Drummond railway and have agreed to pay $140,000 a year more to the Grand Trunk for the right to reach the Drummond, we shall have a complete Government route from Montreal to St. John, 726 miles long, competing against the C. P. R. line between the same points—481 miles.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A journey around the world by established lines of travel can be made at present in sixty-six days. Starting from New York, the traveller across the Atlantic, proceeds by rail from Southampton to Erindisi, and then by way of the Suez Canal to Japan. This consumes 5 1/2 days. The Pacific is crossed in ten days, and Canada in six days. When the Siberian railroad is completed the trip will be cut down to thirty-three days.

Agitation against the excessive use of liquor, which already has made such headway in France and Belgium, is extending throughout Western Europe. This work in Alsace-Lorraine is carried on under the auspices of the Blue Cross League, which devotes its attention to relieving misery caused by alcoholic indulgence, and, as its principal activity—to preventive work among the workmen.

The Huntington-Giesner (clean Liberal) speaks as follows in the course of a discussion of the proposed gerrymander: "The inference is obvious, that the distribution has not been based on population, but upon the political complexion of the constituencies—that Conservative counties have been allotted fewer members than they are entitled to, while Liberal counties have been unduly favoured. While it is probable the judges would effect a more equitable division of a county into ridings than Parliament, the price the county would pay in making the bench partisan far outweigh the advantage. When the country has had time to fully consider the bill, we are inclined to think the balance of public opinion will be against dragging the judges into the political arena. If the bill brought in on Friday passes the Liberals will have a much better prospect of success in Ontario than they otherwise would. The constitutional point, whether the House is competent to pass a redistribution bill except after the census, is a formidable one, and if referred to the Supreme Court the decision would probably be against the Government."

Discussing in The New York Post the Venezuelan affair and its effect upon Britain's foreign policy. Mr. W. J. Great—the American who for years was still in London—correspondent of The London Times, says following précis of the attitude of British people towards the war:—

"The position of Lord Salisbury was one of the greatest difficulty. To suppose that the English Government feared a war with the United States from purely military reasons is not to know the country and its resources, or our own as the Spanish-American war developed them, but a war between England and America could be carried on only by devastating our coasts, destroying our commerce and preventing our farmers from exporting their grain, at the same time strengthening the defences of Canada. The bombardment and destruction of our coast cities and suppression of our trade were, in fact, the only measure which the military position permitted, and they have been, therefore, imperative. But there is a large and influential element of the English people resolutely opposed to the aggravation of difficulties between their country and ours, not from fear of the results, because they consider the establishment of permanent amicable relations between the two countries necessary for the progress of civilization, and comparable to what between them and the United States. Lord Salisbury, who formed an important part of his support to consider; through the jingo element in England would probably have met the defiance in the manner the whole nation would meet a similar attitude on the part of any European power the horrors of an internecine war and the revivification of the antipathies of the generations gone by was heavier than the indignation at the childish and inconsistent provocations of the United States."

A Paris despatch to the World says that it is learned on unimpeachable authority that Ignace Paderewski, the great pianist, was secretly married last December to Mme. Ellena Gorski, the divorced wife of Ludasia Gorski, a well-known violinist, formerly a member of the Lamoureux Orchestra.

DIVINE HEALERS

One Patient a Maniac and Another Dies of Apoplexy.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 1.—H. C. Blandford and W. S. Gilbert, of London, Eng., who called themselves divine healers and who have been here a week practicing healing by faith and laying on of hands, started to-day for Paris, Ky., after one of their patients, F. B. Mann, died, another, Miss Lettie Baker, had become a maniac. More than 500 people were treated by the healers and they stated that they collected over $600 here. Mann, who was 70 years old, has been suffering from the effect of the grip. He went to the healers last week and again on Sunday. He allowed him to treat him and was so elated over the hopes they held out to him that he became much excited and yesterday afternoon he told friends what difficult things the healers would do for him. At seven o'clock this morning he was dead from apoplexy.

Miss Baker became a lunatic last night, and wanted to collect money for the healers. She waked the street bare-headed in imitation of the healers and to-day went into saloons and hotels asking for money for them. She believed they were called of God, and that they were assisted by divinity.
