

To Charlottetown from The Sunny Mediterranean

Capt. Nilsson, of the Swedish Steamer Convallaria, Arrives from Spain With a Cargo of Salt and Some Interesting Reminiscences.

Fifteen days out from the sunny Mediterranean from Torrevieja, on the Spanish coast—the Swedish steamer Convallaria (Capt. Nilsson) arrived in this port Sunday afternoon and yesterday began unloading her cargo, consisting of 2,000 tons of salt for Carvell Bros., at Pownall wharf. The unloading of such an immense cargo of salt proceeded steadily yesterday, three huge buckets, the size of ordinary coal buckets, being employed for this purpose. The job of unloading will probably occupy three days and the steamer expects to sail for Montreal on Thursday.

The Sunny Mediterranean

Romance and high adventure is not yet dead, according to Capt. Nilsson, whose experience in the Mediterranean and around the coast of Africa reads more like a chapter of Stevenson than actual 20th century life. The steamer he commands, though of large capacity and very powerful, is yet capable of navigating a shallow river, as only 14 feet draught is taken when fully loaded, and when empty only 9 feet. This enables Capt. Nilsson to traffic up many rivers whose waters would be inaccessible to deeper water craft.

In the Mediterranean today there is too much modern activity to allow any romantic ideas to intrude upon a casual visitor, said Capt. Nilsson in reply to a rather vague question from the reporter. Steamers and schooners of every type but particularly steamers of strength and speed, are to be seen daily coasting the Mediterranean ports. "Windjammers" are as obsolete on the old shores as they are in America. Where Christy walked two thousands years ago, ply today modern motor busses and the yet more modern Fords. From the banks of the ancient Nile visitors motor to the Egyptian pyramids and proceed, if they wish, across the desert by aeroplane, stopping a few hours where the children of Israel spent forty years. All is changing in outward appearance—all except the character of the inhabitants; for these are capable of change. Today, as in the days of Pharaoh, the Arab camel driver passes and at the appropriate hours takes from his pack his mat, whereon he kneels in worship of the god of his ancestors.

In The Heart of Africa.

But other experiences, of a more extraordinary character, have fallen to Capt. Nilsson. He has made many trips up the Gambia River, in Africa, loading cargoes of

Mr. A. R. MacInnis Is Highly Honored

Popular Young Bank Official Remembered on Eve of Departure by His Fellow Members of the Knights of Columbus.

At a special meeting of the Knights of Columbus, called special for the purpose, last night, Mr. A. R. MacInnis, who leaves tomorrow morning to join the Accounting Staff of the Royal Bank of Canada at Havana, Cuba, was presented with a beautiful gift and the following address:

To Mr. Arthur MacInnis, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Dear Brother:

On behalf of the Charlottetown Council of the Knights of Columbus I wish to convey to you in a few inadequate words the good wishes of your brother Knights for your success and happiness in that distant country where your fortune has hidden you go. We are proud and happy that your merit has been so signally recognized; but we grieve that you must depart from among us and that your good fortune must be our loss. One consolation is the hope that your promotion is but a temporary one; that your next promotion will come without delay and that it will bring you back to us soon again.

In the new life you are about to enter upon, you will form many new friendships, but we feel as if we were not to be parted from you so soon. The presentation was made by Alderman Wm. Moran, and many of the members spoke in the highest terms of the work of Mr. MacInnis for the welfare of the business and social community.

Mr. MacInnis suitably acknowledged the gift and the kind words spoken by the members.

(Special to The Guardian) LONDON, June 19.—Although Moscow at last officially admits Lenin's indisposition which it is declared is due to "Great Fatigue" as gravated by pneumonia, further announcements that his ultimate recovery is extremely probable yet reports published in Paris, this morning state that the great Russian Communist leader is paralysed and has lost all power of speech by and any hope of recovery. The Paris report, which claims to be the record of an official of the Moscow Government and an eye witness, states that Lenin is lying at the Great Kremlin Palace with every probability of blindness and deafness supervening while allowing for the inevitable distortion of all news, which reaches London and Paris out of Russia, it is accepted here, even the Russian Soviet. Headwaters that Lenin's recovery is most unlikely and speculation is arising with regard to his probable successor and the effect of his death or retirement on Russian affairs.

NEW TYPE OF FLYING BOATS

LONDON, June 19.—A new type of flying boat with seating capacity for six passengers and fitted with Rolls Royce 375 horsepower engines is being built for the Cherbourg Southampton passenger and mail air service which will be started in September to connect with trans-Atlantic steamers. It is claimed that flying boats passing over the sea need not attain the altitude necessary in overland or cross channel flying and that they possess additional advantages. A significant fact is that insurance premiums on the flying boats are only half those charged on air lines between London and Paris.

Prorogation on Thursday Regarded as Unlikely

Volume of Business Remaining Still Large. Railway Freight Rates and Wheat Board Yet Await Settlement.

(Special to The Guardian) PRESS GALLERY HOUSE OF COMMONS, OTTAWA, June 19.—While some optimists profess to see signs of the parliamentary session winding up at the end of this week the volume of matters still standing make the prospect rather remote. The one outstanding question is in regard to the freight rates. The special committee which at its initial meeting came to no agreement is having another trial at it today. If anything in the line of compromise can be effected the situation will be clarified but otherwise the outlook for speedy prorogation will not be so promising. In the rate issue, Eastern interests supplemented by British Columbia, come in conflict with those of the Prairie West. They regard the western attitude as smacking strongly of sectionalism and while equally insistent upon rate reductions on all basic commodities, argue that the leveling process should have no territorial limitations but that its resultant benefits should be available for the whole country. It sounds like a strong and persuasive Government. The Railway and Canadian National offer a reduction of twenty percent. The gap between this and the western de-

Americans Indicted For Shipping Guns To Ireland

(Special to The Guardian) TRENTON, N. J., June 19.—Charged with conspiracy to ship guns to Ireland, Colonel Marcelus H. Thompson, son in law of George Harvey, Ambassador to Great Britain, has been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury. It became known here today. Seven other men were indicted at the same time. The indictments were returned several months ago by the Grand Jury, which was in session from January to April and charge conspiracy to violate the neutrality laws by shipping machine guns on the steamer "East Side" for use by the Sinn Fein. They were kept secret while officers tried to locate some of the men named, Colonel Thompson, already has denied knowing how the guns alleged to have been manufactured by the Auto Ordnance Company, of which he is Vice-President, came to be aboard the steamer East Side, where they were discovered by Federal agents last June hidden in coal bunkers as the vessel lay at its pier in Hoboken.

Leading Shippers Object to Sale of Merchant Ships

(Special to The Guardian) OTTAWA, June 19.—Commenting on a resolution at Ottawa to sell 27 of the surplus vessels of the Canadian Government, Merchant Marine leading shipping men here strongly advise Canada to hold all her ships. The loss would be far greater next year than now, they say, as it is expected that ship building costs will soon revert to the pre-war rates. They regard it as important that the two state owned fleets, Canadian and American, be distributed without delay among permanent ship owners for they are at present costly white elephants for both countries.

Pro-Treaty Irish Party Have Good Majority

Republican Party Will Not Give Up the Struggle and Will Probably Attack the New Constitution. Some Echoes from the Election.

(Special to The Guardian)

DUBLIN, June 19.—Complete returns in South Ireland are not expected before Tuesday night at the earliest. Meanwhile, such inklings of the result as can be gleaned are taken by observers to corroborate the forecast that notwithstanding the pact between the Collins and De Valera forces, resulting in the nomination of a panel agreed upon candidates, the Republicans will suffer losses.

(Special to The Guardian)

LONDON, June 19.—Even though the Republicans have been beaten in the elections, to all appearances they are bitter enders, and there is no likelihood that they will drop the fight that they have carried on for the last six years, the direction of their attacks now will be toward the proposed free state constitution.

(Special to The Guardian)

Happily the British government is not deluded in the belief, expressed by one London newspaper today, that the Republicans as a negligible factor can be disregarded, the seizure of election ballots at the nation university was a fair indication of what can be expected of the Republicans. Such an act is almost sure to be followed by incidents even more serious. The republican soldiers have maneuvered themselves into a position where they will have much to say on every point of Irish policy. At the election in Donaghmore, Queen's county, the presiding officer, Nulty, a former member of the Royal Irish Constabulary was ordered from the premises by an armed party. The polling at Monasterevan, county Kildare, was delayed until Saturday by the presence at the polling booths of armed men, who represented the irregular forces.

(Special to The Guardian)

In parts of Sligo the agents of the Independent candidates were kidnapped. Arthur Griffith saw to it that such action would validate the election. In the same area an intimidatory notice to protestant electors stated: "We expect the Unionists kindly to stay at home Friday as in the 1918 election. If they do not it will mean some night work for next week. Please convey instructions to your neighbors."

(Special to The Guardian)

The Statesman points out that the constitution does not mean that their problem or even the problem of South Ireland alone, is not finally settled, but it does mean that there is no longer any possibility of misunderstanding regarding the terms of the settlement as between the British Government on one side and the provisional free state government on the other, the British offer is now definite and concrete. The leaders of the treaty party in Ireland have accepted it. Nothing

One other boy, eleven years of age, would have been saved had it not been for his own heroism and bravery, and he died in a magnificent effort to help save his younger brothers. This one, Frederick, had made his escape from the house, but on learning that his father, grandmother and brothers were still in the burning building, the little hero rushed back in an effort to save them and perished in flames. In the meantime the mother was frantically trying to get back into the house by the way of the window through which she had escaped, but it was above her reach, and there was no one to assist her.
