Details Are Announced For All-Weather Road

All-weather highway construction will get underway in the province this fall. Details of the program were given yesterday by the department of highways.

Beginning at Borden and leading toward Charlottetown 22 miles of highway will be resurfaced, and some places widened to initiate the all-weather roadbuilding plan.

The proposal calls for paving of shoulders and the addition of a third traffic lane on hills, so that automobiles will be able to pass slow-moving trucks. On most of the 22-mile stretch a four-inch layer of new pavement will be laid.

On some sections of the present highway, pavement to a depth of six inches and eight inches will be laid for experimental purposes. As a further experiment, a layer of soil cement stabilization material will be laid on the existing pavement, and this will be covered with four inches of new pavement.

MORE LANES PLANNED

Later plans call for the construction of acceleration and deceration lanes. These lanes would enable vehicles wanting to get on or off the highway an opportunity to change speed to that of traffic on the main highway, or slow down to leave the highway.

Highways officials said that next spring, no weight restrictions will be placed on the Borden-Charlottetown highway. This will give engineers a chance to study the effects of heavy traffic on new and old sections of pavement.

Engineers will use the Benkleman Beam, a device for measuring the bending of pavement under traffic, to see how both sections of the highway stand up under heavy spring traffic.

Highways officials said that a "creep lane" will be provided on hills so that slow-moving trucks can pull to the right to enable faster traffic to go by. The normal width of the highway is 22 feet, but where the creep lanes are installed, the total width will be 33 feet. When the shoulders are paved, the highway will have additional width. Engineers say that paving the shoulders will add to the strength of the main pavement.

The all-weather project is being carried out under the federal - provincial Trans-Canada Highway agreement.

YEAR-ROUND TRAFFIC

Highways officials said they have been faced for some time with the problem of making roads sturdy enough to bear year-round traffic without imposing weight restrictions. A number of experiments with soil cement stabilization have been carried out in the province, and when the go-ahead was given to design an all-weather road, the advice of soil experts and road strengthening experts from all parts of Canada was sought.

As a result of the advice and its own experiments, the department drew up a proposal for this year which involves the Trans-Canada Highway from Borden to Bonshaw.

According to the highways department, if this year's experiment is successful, the entire Trans-Canada Highway in the province will eventually be made into an all-weather road.

Two Receive Jail Terms

Jail sentences were meted out to two accused in Queen's County Magistrate's Court yesterday. Magistrate James B. Johnston QC presided.

James Boulter, Victoria, was fined $20 and costs or 10 days for assaulting Rita Marion Keough by "grabbing her by the hair of the head and swinging her around."

Daniel Maurice Shreenan, Pt. DesRoches, charged under the excise act, was remanded to Aug 21 for sentence with bail to stand.

City Section Hit By Power Failure

An electrical power failure, lasting about an hour, occurred in the south end section of the city yesterday morning. The blackout was caused by a falling tree branch which severed a power line on lower Richmond Street.

Most of the city south west of Queen Street was effected by the break, Maritime Electric officials said. Homes north of Euston had a two-minute stoppage of electricity when the company was forced to change circuits.

The blackout caused no inconvenience at the Charlottetown Hospital where an emergency generator is kicked on automatically in the event of a power failure.
