like a potato into sets. I have never used them in this way but must try them out this year...

The Fuchsias are growing since they came from their winter quarters in the cellar and when danger from frost is over will be placed outdoors...

Fuchsias are staging a comeback in the garden picture. Those "garden belles" as they are called, have made a new debut...

The fuchsia was named for the great German botanist, Leonard Fuchs, of the sixteenth century. Most of our garden forms have come from Fuchsia magellanica...

To every real gardener, many plants have a special significance. The fuchsia growing on our west terrace and in our northwest window boxes were a veritable part of my childhood...

Fuchsias lend color and enchantment to the partially shaded terrace when grown in hanging baskets or in pots to accent the corners or steps...

This summer. They were enjoyed by all who passed by his lovely garden

The gardens of Victoria, British Columbia have distinctive year-round beauty. There is a quality about the gardens that catches the eye of many visitors.

There are several factors that contribute to the character of these gardens. Victoria is favored by climatic conditions (in common with the coastal parts of Oregon, Washington, and southern British Columbia) that are conducive to good gardening and the use of a wide range of plant material...

Gardening is a genuine interest of most of the people of Victoria. Home-owners who are not only amateur gardeners, but genuine plantmen, exhibit a skillful blending of a wide range of plant material. This material includes not only the usual run of evergreens (chiefly conifers, in limited range of variety, size, shape, and color) whose use has been so greatly overdone, but herbaceous flowers, and many fine dwarf trees and shrubs—both deciduous and evergreen.

It is somewhat difficult to indicate the general character of these gardens in a single paragraph, but there is no real off season in these that attract the most admiration. If Nature has produced an undulating, rocky homestead, gardens usually carry on from where Nature left off, supplementing the natural beauty rather than replacing it with something else.

The value of dwarf shrubs in the evergreens, and true conifers in particular, for rocky sites, is not generally appreciated. Their annual growth is so slow that once a site is designed and planted, its appearance can be depended upon to be preserved for many years in much of its original form.

In the Spring the Rhododendrons, Azaleas, Flowering Cherries, Hawthorns, Crabapples, and the Japanese Apricot hold sway with Forget-me-nots (Myosotis) spring bulbs, Wallflowers, and Pansies, and to a lesser extent Panicle and Stocks. These are at their peak during the Spring Garden Festival the first week in May.

Through careful basal planting around the house, these trees, shrubs, and flowers blend the house and the garden into one harmonious unit. Harmony and design in the garden may not always be up to the standard of the professional landscape man, but the material used reflects to a large degree the character and preference of the owners.

Albert Lister Peace, British musical composer who died in 1912, was a church organist at nine.

IN MEMORIAM

ALICE ROSE MATHESON

It was with sorrow many relatives and friends learned of the passing at her home in Oyster Bed Bridge, after a short illness, one of the community's oldest and most loved residents, Alice Rose Matheson, widow of the late William Matheson.

The late Mrs. Matheson although advanced in years had retained a keen interest in the home, the neighborhood and Church especially in home and foreign Missions. Those who were privileged to be acquainted with the late Mrs. Matheson realize the earth is poorer because of the home-going of this christian mother who could be justly called "one of the great mothers in Israel."

Few of God's Saints have exemplified the new life in Christ by producing the unmistakable fruits of the spirit as did the late Mrs. Matheson. One could not be in her presence for long before being made fully aware of her love for the Saviour, and her great Missionary zeal, that the Jews, God's ancient people, as she would say, and Gentiles to the ends of the earth might come to know personally her true friend, her constant companion, her loving Saviour.

Death for the late Mrs. Matheson was not shrouded with unsolvable mystery and its issues with uncertainty, but with her to be absent from the body would be present with the Lord.

The deceased was born at Cardigan P. E. Island, 1863, and was the 11th child of a family of 13. The parents, Donald Matheson and his wife Barbara (MacLellan) Matheson were of the early Scotch pioneer settlers in that Community, only one sister survives namely, Mrs. W. M. Galbraith of Prince Albert, Sask.

The late Mrs. Matheson was married 63 years ago to William Matheson. Coming to this Community as a young woman she endeared herself to many, not only in the Community but in outlying districts, the Church and especially the home, where her family rise up and call her blessed. The late Mrs. Matheson was a valued member of the Glasgow Road Presbyterian Church.

The late Mrs. Matheson leaves to mourn her passing besides many friends one son, Hugh John of Mass., U. S. A. and four daughters, (May) Mrs. Brodie, Norway, Saskatchewan; (Barbara) Mrs. Roderick MacPherson in the old home; (Susie) Mrs. A. C. MacDonald, Bradabane, P. E. Island; (Beatrice) Mrs. Ewen MacDonald, Oshawa, Ont. Her husband predeceased her in 1941, also a daughter Elsie and one infant. Also surviving are 10 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

The funeral which was largely attended was held at the home, and was conducted by her Pastor Rev. Lawrence Blake assisted by Rev. Lawrence Blake assisted by A. E. Piercey, Rev. Mr. Nicholson sang as a solo a favourite selection of the deceased "The Stranger of Galilee."
