WORLD SPOTLIGHT

Communist Propaganda Activity Active in Algeria

ALGERIANS (AP)—In a downtown Algiers bookstore, a window exhibit shows a grinning, top-batted American capitalist, squatting comfortably on the body of an African worker.

In the Korean War, the government of North Korea's "victorious struggle for freedom" is illustrated in Korea. Smiling girls, folk-dancing in the north, police breaking up a students' demonstration in the south.

These are all part of a propaganda campaign drummed day and night into the Algerian population through the government-controlled press, radio and other means.

FEAR TAKEOVER

It irritates Western diplomats, without, however, making them fear an outright Communist takeover or a great spread of Communist influence in Algeria.

President Ahmed Ben Bella says his anti-capitalist "socialist revolution" is a purely Algerian product and will never succumb to Soviet domination.

Mohamed Harbi, editor of the Algerian Communist weekly revolution, writes some of Ben Bella's speeches and has been a vocal leader of the government propaganda machine.

Communist sympathizers control all the news available to the Algerian public through press or radio.

PRAGUE (AP)—A "big heat" contest for amateur jazz bands is under way in Communist Prague's park of culture. Hundreds of teen-agers throng sneezing powder, lure down curians and three chairs around the hall.

When police were called, the teen-agers scattered and later roamed the streets, tearing down flags and assaulting pedestrians.

In the Black Sea resort of Varna, teen-age Bulgarian call girls, some wearing holiday makers and "sleep with them for a pair of nylon," a Sofia newspaper reported.

In Poland, gangs of teen-age toughs molest pedestrians and make it dangerous for them to walk the public parks after dark.

Communist East Europe has much the same problem with unruly teen-agers as do Western nations, the agency says.

The majority of teen-agers under communism are laid back and study diligently, but there is one major shortcoming for Communist world workers. They cannot work up about Communist ideals.

BORED WITH POLITICS

It's a 17-year-old Westerner studying in Budapest put it this way: "I know lots of teen-agers. They are just bored with politics. It's not that they want some other sort of political system, like capitalism. They don't know any other. It's just that they want jazz and parties and travel and a good time." For many years—especially in Communist days—the Communist regimes used brutal tactics to curb youthful zest and creativity about Western life.

Many who affected Western clothes were beaten up, jailed, deported or put on forced labor.

Now the regime's have changed, with the exception of Bulgaria where mild pressure still is being used. The attitude of most Communist leaders is: "If you can't beat them, join them."

East European shoe shops of pointed toes and American-type loafers. There are frequent public law sessions and rowdy troupers in the state stores.

Hungarian officials claim that because of the new tide of juvenile delinquency has diminished.

SINGAPORE (AP)—Singapore's Premier Lee Kuan Yew is facing a tough political battle, it is feared that could be the biggest fight of his career.

At stake is his rule over this island city, the commercial center of young Malaysia. It has long been a hotbed of leftist agitation and a prime target for South Asia's Communists.

Elected by a landslide in 1959, Lee has beaten back opposition from the extreme left and is now leading a pro-Communist political campaign while pushing a modestly socialist program aimed at stabilizing Singapore.

This time, Lee says, the threat comes from the far left.

He blames Malay "extremists" for the recent savage racial clashes between Malays and Chinese, and warns this may be just the beginning.

Lee has accused ultra-nationalist Malays in Kuala Lumpur, the federal capital, of out-doing hostile Indonesians in efforts to "set Malay against Malay" on the basis of race.

Without naming names, Lee has said he plans to mean the United Malay National Organisation (UMNO). This is the federal Malay prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman's ruling Alliance party. UMNO officials charge that Lee's government with discriminating against Singapore's Malay minority.

A showdown on the race issue between Lee and Rahman was reported.

The Chinese complain they are being forced into the role of second-class citizens by special guarantees and privileges for Malays in government, education and business.

On the other hand, they are obviously fearful of eventual domination by the hard-line, orthodox Chinese symbolized by 40-year-old Lee and his militant People's Action Party.

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The military staff committee, a unique group in the UN, held its 50th meeting the other day. The committee has met every two weeks for 18 years, but even considered any matter of substance since 1947. The meetings are all secret.

This group is the only body in the world where generals and admirals of the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and Nationalist China sit together at regular intervals.

It is the only military organ specifically provided for in the UN charter, but it has never had any part in directing UN military operations.

Despite the fact that it does nothing, there has never been a proposal from any of its five members or from UN officials that the session be dropped.

The committee was set up in 1946 in accordance with article

TRIED TO AGREE

46 of the charter, which called for the creation of such a group to establish an international military force and to assist the security council in military matters.
