

The Great Imposter Lives In Monastery

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
WIEN, Mo. (AP)—Ferdinand Waldo Demara, widely known as the Great Imposter, has been living in a monastery in this tiny northern Missouri hamlet since Thanksgiving Day in November.

"I advised Father Joseph Stramann, the founder, of my background and that this would happen," Demara said of his discovery.

He is known in the monastery as Brother Frederick. The monastery was founded in 1964 as an interfaith community known as the Brotherhood of Christian Unity.

Other members include Father Stramann, a Roman Catholic priest; Brother Joseph Bona, a Roman Catholic layman; Father John Michael, formerly Rev. Robert Bolman, an Episcopal (Anglican) clergyman; and Brother Dismas, a Roman Catholic layman. Rev. William Francis Forbes, a married Syrian Orthodox priest, was evicted Monday by Father Stramann for not making "any substantial contribution to the community."

Demara, 43, became the subject of a book and a movie called The Great Imposter through exploits as a Trappist monk, a surgeon in the Royal Canadian Navy during the Korean War, a warden in a Texas penitentiary, a college professor, a school master and a sheriff.

COULD HELP PEOPLE

"In 1958, I suddenly realized I had a particular talent to help people—to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ," Demara said.

"People have the idea that I went through life thumping my nose at officialdom. That's not so.

"My life really has been a series of tragedies. I have been described as a working imposter, but that isn't so either. I have found needs and have tried to fulfil them."

Demara was spotted by a photographer for the Brookfield, Mo., Daily News, David McBrayer, earlier this week while addressing a parent-teachers association meeting in Brookfield, 15 miles away.

"I have come here to dedicate my life to Christian unity, to work and prayer. This is the only interfaith monastic community in the world."

Demara, a six-foot-footer who weighs 250 pounds, met reporters in a small sitting room in

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

led a diamond. East took the ace and returned a spade. West ruffed and South had to go down one—though he should have made the contract with the aid of an unusual play.

At issue is the principle that underlies safety plays. When declarer sees dummy he should realize that the chief danger of defeat lies in the possibility of a spade ruff. Once this register on him, he should start looking for all possible ways and means of protecting against the ruff.

This reaction is typical of many hands. Declarer asks himself what combination of cards can defeat him. He then takes the appropriate steps, if available, to overcome that combination.

In this deal, in view of East's opening spade bid, there is certainly a possibility of West's having a singleton spade. Ordinary measures will not avert defeat if this is the case.

Declarer should therefore win the spade lead in dummy, with the king and cross the ace of hearts. On the heart ace he discards the ace of spades!

From then on nothing is smooth. Dummy leads a diamond, which East takes with the ace. Declarer ruffs the spade return and West cannot overruff. South then draws trumps, concedes the ace of clubs, and thus makes five. The safety play pays off.

The bidding:
Opening lead—nine of spades. The many forms a safety play can take may well stagger the imagination. The most common ones are well known and are easy enough to learn either through experience or in textbooks devoted to the play of the cards.

The trouble comes when an unusual situation develops that really belongs in the safety play family and the declarer is unable to relate it to a previous experience. Unaware that safety measures are applicable, he plunges ahead without taking precautions against an obvious danger. As a result, he often misses his objective.

Take this hand where South was in five diamonds. He won the spade lead with the ace and

U.S. Steel Firms Show Expansion

CLEVELAND (AP)—The United States steel industry, which boosted capital spending to a $1,800,000 clip last year, could set a record by investing more than $2,300,000,000 in new facilities and equipment this year, Steel magazine reports.

Over the last six years, the metalworking weekly says, capital spending by steelmakers has totalled $7,852,000,000 while profits for the same period totalled $4,838,000,000.

Biggest spender is U.S. Steel Corp., which laid out $354,000,000 on plant and equipment in 1965 and expects to spend $555,000,000 this year and $1,800,000,000 over a three-year period.

The industry publication notes that "demand for steel is on an upturn. The auto industry is again in the market with the largest orders since April last year."

Steelmaking operations have moved on the rise for six weeks, moving up from 2,153,000 tons

Trek Into Bush Made By Prince

MELBOURNE (Reuters)—Prince Charles, 17-year-old heir to the British throne, made his first trek into the Australian bush Sunday—a five-hour hike in which he helped "boil the billy" (brew tea) and lunched off hard rations.

A longer hike, in which Prince Charles and his schoolmates at Timbertop school will sleep under the stars, was expected to be made later, this week.

Charles arrived Wednesday at rugged Timbertop, in the wild Victorian Mountains, for a 3½-month stay.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
