No book will sell at present like our Home, Farm and Business Cyclopedia. It is a large work, containing 300 pages, profusely illustrated, and also contains portraits of the leading statesmen of the Dominion. The Home Department discusses fully everything relative to Housekeeping in all its phases. The Farm Department discloses, in a peculiarly interesting style, just the information every successful farmer must possess. The Business Department, besides giving full information on Commercial Law and every form of Legal Documents, contains Goodwin's System of Practical Book-keeping. Each Department of the work has the advantage of being written by Canadian Specialists. We want an Agent in

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Facts for an Unprejudiced Public.

SIR,—I noticed in the DAILY EXAMINER of the 12th inst., a communication, over the signature of "Onlooker." By appearance, "Onlooker" is one of those onlookers who, when he does look, sees only one side of a case, and that generally the wrong side.

On looking at his letter, the question naturally arises, "What is its purpose?" This is what it is,—the despairing groan and last squirm of one of a crowd of dishonest hypocrites; and this is its purpose: to turn the minds of the people, by false statements, from looking at and judging the case on its merits.

When "Onlooker" states that Mr.
Weatherbie contemplates calling personally to thank the judge, he states what he knows to be a falsehood; and when he states that another party represents himself as a judge of intoxicating liquors, he states another falsehood. I may say that "Onlooker" appears to be a better judge of what people do not think nor say than he is of the truth. He also states that the two witnesses who gave evidence against Weatherbie in the Magistrate's Court, gave the same evidence in the Supreme Court.

This is also void of truth. It was laughable to hear one of the witnesses (poor, honest being) give it as a part of his evidence, that, after swearing in the Magistrate's Court that he had purchased intoxicating liquors from Weatherbie, within three months past, he had consulted his books, and that he knew from some articles he sold and bought, that it was within the space of three months. In the name of common sense, what has the selling of a pair of boots, or the buying of a cowhide, or such like to do with the beer he drinks? The same witness swore in the Supreme Court that he had been intoxicated by the beer, and afterwards, when questioned, he swore that he had never been intoxicated in his life.

This witness, at least, notwithstanding the contention of "Onlooker," does not know when he is intoxicated. So much for the respectable (?) witnesses.

One other assertion of "Onlooker" demands a passing notice. He says that Weatherbie called no witness in the Magistrate's Court to defend him. They took care not to give him time for this; for they would hardly give him time to eat his breakfast before going to court. Some of the subpoenas which were taken out by the Prosecutor were not served on the parties, because he and the constable had suspicion that the evidence of these parties, if given, would injure their case; therefore, after sounding them on the matter, they took the other two as sufficient to carry out their dastardly designs, and do their dirty work.

"Onlooker," in his remarks on the judge's decision, shows both ignorance and impudence. But "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise," and this is notably so in the case of "Onlooker."

Here, then, is a summary of the case.
They condemned Weatherbie in a court of injustice, and by refusing reasonable security which he tendered, they sought to defraud him out of an appeal to a court of justice, where a sworn Judge on the bench, after hearing the evidence on both sides, has decided in his favor. The fact that one of the Prosecutor's own witnesses swore that he drank a gallon and a half or two gallons of the beer before he became intoxicated speaks volumes, while another became intoxicated to a brutal degree by three glasses of it, and still another made terribly incapable by two drinks. To use the words of "Onlooker," they "will find some difficulty in getting any sensible person to believe it."

I, therefore, think it is quite unnecessary for "Onlooker" to use so much verbiage concerning his bad case, when he evidently wishes to tell so little of the truth.

IRISSIMA VERBA.

Montague Bridge, April 17, 1888.

A Farmer's Views.

SIR,—As a subscriber to your journal, allow me to notice the communications of "Pro Bono Publico" and "One of the Deceived," each of which deals with "matters medical." With each I am in entire accord and fullest sympathy. The subject is an important one and requires the fullest discussion possible. "One of the Deceived" says: "When we see the men, principally in the country, who assume that time-honored title "Doctor" and attach M. D. to their signatures, and examine their education and qualifications, we are surprised at the quality and material of which "Doctors are made." The above must refer to those who have graduated at institutions, whose course of study and examinations are below par. There are, no doubt, many such in the country. Until the public learn to discriminate between thoroughly educated practitioners and those of the class described, the evil will continue until remedied by an act of Parliament.

Those men degrade and belittle a noble and a learned profession. But what are the public to think of those who have failed to satisfy the slender requirements of colleges which have licensed the class which your correspondent so justly decries. Certainly that they must be the veriest block-heads in existence, or that they have spent their time in a manner most questionable.

In either case are they to be intrusted with human life, and allowed to deal with cases requiring the highest degree of skill, tact and experience, without receiving that punishment that every law of God and man would justify? Those who hold diplomas, no matter how easily or cheaply obtained, are safe in a legal sense. Those who do not should be handed without gloves. If there is no law on our Statute Book dealing with such characters, let one be placed there as soon as possible. In the meantime let them be exposed, and if the public choose, in spite of such exposure, to retain their services, let the peril be of their own seeking.

Your correspondent suggests that a list of "qualified practitioners" be published. I agree with him, but would suggest that it be done in THE EXAMINER as well as in "Chappelle's Almanac." I am sure that every practitioner would gladly pay the necessary expenses for one or more copies of said list. In the meantime, every physician in the country who is not unable or ashamed to do so, should vindicate his right to practice, in a special column of THE EXAMINER, stating shortly but fully his course of study, degrees obtained, &c.

Were I a physician, I would not require a second invitation to do so. Kindly state, Mr. Editor, if you are willing to grant the necessary space, and the public at large will thank you, as this is a subject of vital interest to many. In this way the thoroughly educated will escape the reproach of the stigma truthfully attached by your correspondent to too many members of a profession hitherto deemed a learned one.

Those who fail to answer the challenge —your permission being granted—will lay themselves open to the suspicion of being quacks, or, at least, half educated.

Hoping you will give this a space in your weekly issue,
I remain,
Yours &c.,
FARMER.

Bonshaw, Lot 30.

Annual Examination Cardigan Bridge School.

On Thursday, 19th inst., Cardigan Bridge School was examined by Chief Superintendent D. Montgomery, Esq., and Mr. W.
Cain, Inspector of Schools. These gentlemen, who are very painstaking, gave this school a careful and thorough examination, occupying a great part of the day in hearing and inspecting the different classes, the result of which was very satisfactory indeed to everyone present and to all concerned.

The Chief Superintendent expressed himself highly pleased with the progress the School had made since his last visit, and said that if it continued to advance as it has for the past year, it will soon attain the grade of a first-class school.

It was pleasing to see quite a number of the ladies and ratepayers of the district present, and taking a lively interest in the examination of the scholars. Some ladies of the village, Mrs. Capt. Joseph Mc-Donald, Mrs. G. Owen, Mrs. H.
