For $1.38

You will see in our window a line of ladies' Chocolate tribbles. These are the latest novelty in the shoe trade. They are made of fine Dongola kid with a hand turned sole and are fastened by a two button strap across the instep. They pass all the style and finish of a $3.00 shoe and are easy and comfortable on the foot. They make an ideal warm weather shoe.

HE MEANT WELL.—One of the visiting Americans asked a native Digbyite on Dominion Day what the day was supposed to celebrate. The native was doubtful himself, but thought it was the liberation of the slaves.—Digby Courier.

STAGE NOTES.—"What happened to Jones," the very laughable farce comedy with which the Harkins Company opened their engagement at the Opera House, has crossed the ocean. It was to be presented at the Strand, London, on the 12th inst., with Charles Arnold as Jones.

Mr. Broadhurst, the author of "What Happened to Jones," has written a new play which he has called "The Last Chapter." It is his first serious play and will be produced in November.

TEA AT LONG CREEK.—A tea party in aid of St. Thomas' Church, Long Creek, will be held on Wednesday next, the 20th inst., or on the following day, if it should prove to be unfavorable. The steamer Elfin will leave Prince Street wharf at 1 o'clock, returning at 6. For residents of Charlottetown this will afford a grand opportunity for a pleasant holiday at small expense.

SAW SEVEN GENERATIONS.—We saw an account in the County News sometime ago that Wm. Josiah, of Turtle Creek, had seen six generations of his own family. Now we think Salem can beat this in the person of Mrs. Michael Steeves, who has seen seven generations of her own family, five of which are still living. Four generations of this family recently dined together at Shenstones.—Hillsborough News.

ANTICS OF A COW.—A cow made things lively for bicyclists and pedestrians on the Richmond Road for a while last evening. The animal came from the city along Somerset street, and gave a young lady crossing that street at the Richmond Road a great scare by dashing past within a very short distance of her. Just above the post office the cow started to race with an electric car and managed to get a leg struck. She then ran between two wheelmen, upsetting both in the dust. A little farther up she ran into a party of about a dozen cyclists, scattering them right and left, and giving the ladies a terrible scare. The last seen of her she was going out on the road at a high rate of speed.—Ottawa Free Press.

THE SOUTHERN CROSS.

If Job were to rise from the dead and look upon the heavens, says Professor T. J. J. See in The Atlantic, he would see the constellations related to one another as of old, but he would find that the pole had shifted its position among the stars, and if an immortal could witness the grand phenomenon which the precession of the equinoxes produces in about 12,900 years he would find the heavens so altered that the former aspect could be recognized only by an understanding of the changes which had intervened.

As Humboldt justly remarks, the beautiful and celebrated constellation of the Southern Cross, never seen by the present inhabitants of Europe and visible in the United States only on our southern coast, formerly shone on the shores of the Baltic, and can again be seen in that latitude in about 18,000 years. The cross will then be visible on the shores of Hudson bay, but at present it is going rapidly southward, and in a few thousand years will be invisible even at the extreme point of Florida.

In like manner the brilliant star Canopus in the constellation Argo, situated some 37 degrees south of Sirius, is now visible in the southern portion of the United States. In about 12,000 years it will cease to rise even in Central America. From the same cause, if Ptolemy were to again look upon the heavens at Alexandria, he would be unable to recognize Alpha and Beta Centauri, which he easily saw and catalogued in the time of Hadrian. At present these magnificent stars are just visible at the pyramids, near Cairo, and in a few more thousand years they can be seen by dwellers on the Nile only in upper Egypt.

It has been held that consumption is hereditary, and the fact that one person of a family had died with consumption was considered a sure sign that others of that family could not escape it. This is partly true and partly untrue. A man with weak lungs is likely to transmit that weakness to his children. But there is no reason in the world why the weakness should be allowed to develop. Keep the lungs full of rich, red, wholesome blood, and the weakness will disappear. Decaying tissues will be thrown off, and new material will be added until the lungs are well and perfectly strong again. This is the thing that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does. This is what makes it cure 98 per cent of all cases of consumption where it is taken according to directions. It searches out disease germs wherever they may be in the body and forces them out of the system. It supplies the blood with rich, life-giving properties. It makes the appetite good, digestion perfect. Send 31 cents in one-cent stamps to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive Dr. Pierce's 1008 page "Common Sense Medical Adviser," profusely illustrated.

London Book Thieves.

Suckling, the book seller, gave me quite a little chat on book thieves the other day. "Book thieves," said he, "are most plentiful. They are also most audacious in disposing of their stolen wares. One of them did me rather nearly not long ago. I was sitting in my shop, thinking no harm, when a rather clerical looking man came in and offered me an abridged edition of Littré's Dictionary at £1. Of course I bought it. Judge my surprise when I found out about two hours afterward that the clerical looking gentleman had stolen that copy of Littré's Dictionary from the stall in front of my own shop! I may add that I had the satisfaction of recovering some volumes and juggling that respectable clerical looking gentleman, who, as I afterward found, had been doing many of my confederates in the same artistically nonchalant manner."—London Correspondence.

Identified by a Blind Man.

A blind man picked out his dead wife in the New York morgue a few days ago by his delicate sense of touch, says an exchange. Two women, both of the same name and both of whom died in Bellevue, were taken to the deadhouse at about the same time. When the morgue keeper caught the blind man's right hand and guided it to an upturned face, he said, "No, no; that's not my Mary!" The drawer was closed, and the next one was pulled out. The sightless man laid down his stick this time and used both hands. His face was transfigured as the tips of his fingers rested on the sharp set, cold features. "Mary," he whispered, "I have found you, dear! How thin your face has grown! How cold you are, Mary—how cold!" The blind man had made no mistake. The dead woman had been his wife.
