your predecessors have been, you owe a duty to your profession and to society which demands the highest endeavor. It is no exaggeration to say that you are better equipped than your predecessors in the profession, for you may make your own the words of the poet Tennyson:
"We are the heirs of all the ages
In the foremost files of time."
"You are indeed the heirs of all past ages in the nursing profession, the heirs of all the Sisters-nurses and the Florence Nightingales of history. You are what you are today—trained nurses—by virtue of parental love and devotion, by virtue of the example of the Sisters and the inspiration of a splendid modern hospital, by virtue of social beneficence and professional training.

Reports Indicate Smaller Lobster Catch
Lobster fishing is good at Annandale and Gaspareaux, but poor at Murray Harbour, also on the north side from East Point to North Cape, and in the Straits, reports Mr. L. C. Johnston, of the Federal Department of Fisheries. Present indications are that the lobster catch will be less than last season, Mr. Johnston said. He explained, however, that a few heavy catches in the next few days might materially affect the figures to be compiled at the end of the month.
Mr. Johnston is temporarily in charge of the inspector's office in the absence, through illness, of Mr. J. J. Larabee.

Wall Street Firms Threaten To Quit N.Y.

NEW YORK, May 28 (AP)—Wall Street financial firms threatened today to move from New York if the city boosts its tax on their operations. The possibility of a new "Wall Street" arising in some other city was sounded at a public hearing on a city council bill to double the present tax of two-fifths of one per cent on gross receipts of financial houses. G. Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said it was a false premise to believe "that financial business is so definitely fixed and immovable in New York City that present high tax rates could be increased further without driving our business from the city."

Chairman's Remarks
The chairman for the evening was Dr. W. J. P. MacMillan, C.B.E., Chief of Staff of the Charlottetown Hospital. He paid a special tribute in his remarks to the St. Charles Auxiliary which for over sixty years, he said, had done so much for the hospital, and to the "young matrons" of the Junior League for their efforts.

He regretted that he termed the high "mortality" among the graduate nurses and expressed doubts that those who left here for posts in Boston or Montreal were any better off financially at the end of a year than they would have been had they remained at home. In offering a personal tribute to the profession of nursing, Dr. MacMillan stated that if he had to make a choice between the medical staff and the nurses, he would keep the nurses. He said that last night's was the 28th class to graduate and it had been especially picked out for the honor of being the first to hear an address by a leader of the diocese.

The appreciation of doctors to the parents of nurses was expressed by the chairman when he said "We thank God that in this Province there are so many wonderful homes from which girls come to all our hospitals," and he noted that very seldom do any of the girls leave until they have graduated. In extending a welcome to the large audience present he said that it was a great encouragement to all when graduation time arrived to find a large number of pure spirited persons who helped by their presence. In her valedictory address Miss Mullally said that at graduation there was always a blending of emotions and her brief address was to try to express the feeling of happiness, joy and regret experienced by all nurses at such a time. She said they were leaving behind many pleasant associations in thinking of the girls' feelings of making to their parents the request of the wish that they might "ask God that the hopes they hold for us may be realized."

Scholarship Awards
A $100 scholarship for post graduate study donated by the St. Charles Auxiliary of the Charlottetown Hospital and awarded for proficiency in surgical technique was equally merited by Dorothy White, Theresa Cash, Noreen Shreanan and Anna MacKinnon. In the draw for the award Miss Cash was the winner. A similar situation arose in the award for the greatest progress during the three years donated by the Canadian Nurse Editorial Board. In this instance Mary Callaghan, Larena Rooney, Margaret MacLaren and Alicia Mullally merited it. In the draw it was won by Miss Callaghan. The $100 scholarship for post graduate study donated by the Junior League for proficiency in obstetrical nursing was won by Miss Jean Aylward.

The pleasing entertainment during the evening was provided by Mrs. Joseph Dougan, at the piano, Mr. Alfred McCanney on the violin and Mr. Frank McIntyre, who sang "Just for Today." Pins and Bouquets
As each of the graduates received her diploma from His Excellency Bishop Boyle she crossed the stage to where she was greeted by nurses Miss Eileen MacDonald and Mrs. Vernon Bolger who "pinned" the girls. They were then the recipients of beautiful bouquets of roses from three tiny little misses who met with the thorough approval of the audience. They were Joan, Joyce and Mary Evelyn Connolly, and all three were dressed in miniature nursing uniforms.

The graduates were Anna Norma MacKinnon, Alicia Marie Mullally, Larena Anne Rooney, Mary Theresa Gaudet, Stephanie Mary Gaudet, Mary Louise Callaghan, Theresa Cash, Margaret Patricia MacKinnon, Anne Georgina Campbell, Sister Mary Hermina, Noreen Frances Shreanan, Elizabeth Fisher, Leona Mary Fisher, Mary Glenn Curley, Julie Dorothy Prosper, Helen Theresa Lannan, Marjorie Mildred Murphy, Dorothy Marie White and Jean Mary Aylward.

BISHOP BOYLE'S ADDRESS
Following is the text of His Excellency Bishop Boyle's address: "In the first place I wish to congratulate the graduates of the Charlottetown Hospital School of Nursing who have today reached an important milestone in their careers. Standing today at the opening of your careers, facing opportunities and obligations in your profession before ever enjoying, equipped for service as few of

"Graduates of the City Hospital: I charge you to be real women, and that is a very high accomplishment—good women, strong women, women ever ready to aid the suffering, to help the weak—women devoted to your profession, jealous of its integrity, faithful to its trusts, serving high and low rich and poor alike.

Hippocratic Oath
"You have heard of the great Hippocratic oath now more than twenty centuries old. It set a high moral standard for the profession of medicine which can be applied to nursing as well as to medicine. Here are a few parts of the oath which are applicable to nurses: 'You do solemnly swear that you will lead your lives and practice your profession in uprightness and honor.'"

"That into whatsoever house you shall enter it shall be for the good of the sick to the utmost of your power, you holding yourself far aloof from wrong, from corruption, from the tempting of others to vice;
"That you will exercise your profession solely for the cure of your patients, and will give no drug, perform no operation for a criminal purpose, even if solicited, far less suggest it;
"That whatsoever you shall see or hear of the lives of men which is not fitting to be spoken, you will keep inviolably secret."

Three Levels
"You and everyone else are living today on one of three levels as far as our inner lives are concerned. The lowest level is the level of the senses where man leads a selfish life, he follows his appetites and passions, he is what St. Paul calls the 'animal man', and the individual on this level is apt to be very un-Christian. On this level the problems for the psychiatrist are innumerable.
"On the second level man follows the natural light of reason. It is the level of his real self, or personality, and the plane of the natural world. A good education and training of our young people generally is insufficient emphasis on the natural virtues. By natural virtues we mean certain qualities of mind and heart, which, though they may be directed to a supernatural end, remain intrinsically natural.
"Here are some of the natural virtues which the nurse must have if her life as a nurse is not to be a failure. Refinement of speech and manners, personal neatness, discretion, tact, affability, cheerfulness, kindness, patience, sympathy, temperance, self-control, self-reliance, self-respect, punctuality, trustworthiness, honesty, fidelity in keeping engagements. These virtues are essential but for a Christian they are inadequate. They are all that a good pagan can have. "Complete fulfillment of man is possible only if he rises to the supernatural level, to the God-centred life of the spirit where self-interests are forgotten in joy and serenity of soul. Only the disciples of Christ live on this highest level where rational life is perfected by the divine light of faith added to the natural or human light of reason. It is sanctifying grace that distinguishes the supernatural from the natural. A nurse who has the natural virtues only, will see in her patient suffering but the Christian nurse will see Christ suffering in her patients. (As long as you did it to one of these my least brethren, you did it to me'. Matt., XXV, 40).
"Graduates of the Charlottetown Hospital, you owe a debt of gratitude to the Rev. Sisters, your models, under whose tutelage you have received your formation as women and as nurses. You are indebted to the doctors who have lectured to you in the classroom and out of the classroom, to your chaplain who has told you plainly that sin and moral evil is a reality, that certain things are wrong and always wrong, in spite of the rantings of men like Brock Chisholm, Ewen Cameron or Bertrand Russell who are trying 'to rescue humanity from the anguish of believing in God.'
"During your training at the Charlottetown Hospital, you have been given a code of professional ethics and warned against malpractice. It is the sound moral training, received there, that will be your guide and protection when you may be called upon to administer drugs or medicines or to assist at illicit operations, by a physician without a conscience, that you know are positively forbidden by the laws of God and of nature. Such a physician will defend his action by saying that he is following his conscience. Many persons have two consciences, one given them by God and the other manufactured by themselves as

Danger Of Pitfalls
"I wish to warn you about certain dangers which may destroy you. There are pitfalls along the way of life, and as you go forth to your work, you will soon realize that there is more wickedness in the world than you ever dreamed of. "What a solemn thing it is to see a group of young people who have the best intentions on graduation day, just like you; to whom among them will it be life indeed, to whom will it be death? Whom will the fever seize upon and slay; which of them will be able to reject it and pass through its contagion in safety?"
"Here are some of the evils to which so many young people fall victim every year:—
1. Idleness and lack of responsibility.
2. Strong drink.
3. Moving pictures of the wrong kind.
4. Improper relations between sexes.
5. Unwholesome literature, bad books and magazines.
6. Dancing and cocktail parties.
7. Gambling.
"These are all dangerous demons. Shut them as you would the plague. They have made more victims than all the wars of history and have reduced young men and women to the condition of a corpse—in body and soul.
"To maintain the integrity of your religious and moral life is your only safeguard, your only protection, your only hope. I will grant that this is not an easy task especially in an age that has largely gone back to paganism. But it is absurd for a Christian and a Catholic to expect a quiet easy life. Bear in mind the words of Christ: 'If anyone would be my disciple, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me.'
"If you have a vocation to the religious life do not reject it, for the Sister Nurse combines professional training with dedication to the care of the sick and afflicted as Christ's least brethren, and for His sake. Under the dynamics of Christ's teaching the Sister Nurse is ready to do more than the law requires. She thus holds in her hands the only power that moves the universe—the power of love.
"To those other young women present who are thinking seriously of becoming nurses, I would say, enter a Training School now. There is a very great need for thousands of more nurses today. The answer which might be in the minds of many a young lady is that she would be able, after high school, to go to work and earn money, while if she takes a course in nursing she is expected to pay out money for three years. That is not a good excuse, because that money comes back tenfold within a couple of years after she will have completed her course."
