"Broadway Musketeers" At Capitol Today And Tomorrow

"Broadway Musketeers," which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, is concerned chiefly with the fortunes and misfortunes of a trio of girls portrayed by Margaret Lindsay, Ann Sheridan and Marie Wilson—three of the most charming young actresses in Hollywood—but these are other young actresses who will also come in for a cozy share of the glory.

The young miss is tiny, six-year-old Janet Chapman, who scored so sensationally when she made her debut in "Little Miss Thoroughbred." This is her second picture, and again she is given plentiful opportunity to display the amazing dramatic ability which gave her top ranking among juvenile stars virtually overnight.

The male members of the cast of "Broadway Musketeers" are headed by John Lital, and they include as sinister a group of villains as have ever been gathered

Bing Crosby At Prince Edward

Down to earth humanness combined with music so catchy that you just naturally hum it as you leave the theatre is a movie formula guaranteed to succeed.

And it more than pleases in the new Bing Crosby-Joan Blondel picture, "East Side of Heaven," now at the Prince Edward Theatre.

Bing is a cruising troubadour, or to put it more plainly a singing taxi driver. Joan, his sweetheart, is a hotel telephone operator. Mischa Auer is Bing's unemployed roommate who has learned from reading the stars that he should not even look for work until 1942.

There is your background for the story.

This trio would be quite sufficient in any picture. But in "East Side of Heaven" they are aided, and very materially, by "Sandy," the cutest infant ever to face a movie camera.

"Sandy" is "deposited" with Crosby by Elaine Fiervey, who takes this means of keeping her baby from her wealthy and hard-fisted father-in-law, portrayed by C. Aubrey Smith. That's when the fun really starts, fun such as you have rarely seen until you watch Bing, Joan and Mischa try to take care of the youngster.

Then there is the music. Four brand new Bing tunes, of the kind you want to sing, whistle or hum in or out of a shower bath. They are called "East Side of Heaven," "Sing a Song of Sunshine," "The Old Gentleman from Featherbed Lane," and "Hang Your Heart on a Hickory Limb." Johnny Burke and James Monaco, two of America's favorite composers, wrote them. Crosby sings them in that style which is all his own. Furthermore, each song has a definite and natural place in the plot.

for one picture, notable among them being the dapper handsome Anthony Averill, as well as Dick Purcell, Richard Bond, Horace MacMahon and Dewey Robinson.

The girls, portrayed by the Misses Lindsay, Sheridan and Wilson were children together at an orphanage, became separated and then met again as adults at the outset of the film story. Margaret is prosperously married and the mother of Janet. Ann is an entertainer at cheap night clubs and Marie is a stenographer.

Their lives are strangely intertwined then as Margaret leaves her husband for a handsome Broadway chiseller. Ann subsequently marries Margaret's former husband, and Marie tries valiantly to be friend and helper of both.

The exciting climax of the picture comes after the man with whom Margaret is infatuated has been slain by gangsters who then kidnap Margaret and her child.

TELLS OF NEWS GATHERING IN NAZI GERMANY

Reporting Has Thrill Of Hunt Says Veteran Of 15 Years Service.

By LOUIS F. LOCHNER
 Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, June 9—Reporting the news from Germany has changed radically during the 15 years since this writer was assigned to the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press.

Covering events in Germany is now as different from "orthodox" reporting as a scoop from a government spokesman. But precisely because it is different—and difficult—it has all the fascination of big game hunting.

Mr. Lochner, who is chief of the Associated Press bureau at Berlin has one of the hardest jobs in newspaperdom—reporting accurately the news of the Nazi regime. He has done that so well that he was recently awarded the Pulitzer prize for distinguished foreign correspondence.

During the German republican regime, it was a simpler matter to check on government information. It was easy to come into contact with German statesmen. The cabinet was composed of men from different parties. One minister might disagree with another and deem it to his political interest to let the press know the actual facts in a given situation.

The Reichstag had pro-government and anti-government parties. The "ants" had the right in secret session to demand information. If this did not give with what was handed out to the press, some disgruntled parliamentarian was likely to "spill the beans."

But Now Is 1939

Today much has changed. The foreign reporter in Germany must ask himself: "Will my informant go to a concentration camp or be arrested on a charge of treason if I publish the story?"

The Nazi laws of treason are extremely severe. Revealing your source and it may be just too bad for your informant. Another difficulty is that news dissemination has become centralized and is directed according to the needs of the state.

Members of the government are sworn to secrecy and "leaks" are next to impossible. The press is strictly regimented. Except for headlines, one paper is like every other as far as news and the interpretation of policies is concerned. There is no such thing as an opposition press. The official German News Agency is an instrument of policy.

Interviews with top leaders are rare. They're solemn occasions at which every word is weighed meticulously.

The foreign correspondent's work, therefore, has become the toughest one of determining, with every item released for publication, what is straight fact and what is propaganda; and of building up connections, connections, connections until more time is spent outside of his editorial office than inside.

Obviously, long residence in Germany is an advantage, if one has used one's time to make friends. This writer, after a hard day of news gathering, has to put on his evening clothes while he glances yearningly at his bed. Yet the evening has paid.

The story, for instance, some months ago that Adolph Hitler was aiming at mediating in the Chinese-Japanese conflict, became available during a "bicentennial." The story that Hungary will, if necessary, desert her traditional friendship with Poland and side with Germany was obtained while the writer cruised himself wearing a boiled shirt and tails. Examples might be multiplied.

The fact that the German press is strictly regimented has paradoxically its decided advantages for the foreign correspondent. One is that events for which the German public must be prepared have a way of casting their shadows before them.

Before Hitler decided to take over Austria, the press was full of stories of how the Schuschnigg men were mistreating the Austrian Nazis. Before the Sudetenland was added to the Reich, the Czechs were just about the sum of the earth. The press began it again just before the Protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia was established. Since then the Czechs have been angels as compared with the Poles.

Again, anti-Jewish legislation usually is forecast in a much-read weekly paper. From another weekly one usually can glean what is in the offing in the argument between the nations and the Danube.

The President of the local branch is His Honour Lieutenant Governor DeBlois while the organizer and local leader is the Hon. D. J. P. MacMillan, Assistant Secretary for the Federal Society.

WALTON-MACDONALD—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John the Baptist Mission Church at 11.30 a.m. on Tuesday, May 30, 1939, when Rev. Canon J. V. Young united in marriage Lauretta Louise MacDonald youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel MacDonald, Selkirk, P. E. I., and Oscar Thompson Walton, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Kirby Walton, Bayfield, N. B. The bride looked winsome in a two-piece, mannish style suit of teal blue cango cloth, with pink hat, shoes, gloves and purse. The happy couple then left on a motor trip to P. E. Island and other parts of the Maritime Provinces. On their return trip Mr. and Mrs. Walton will reside in Waltham, Mass., where the groom is an employee of the Standard Oil Co., of New York.

Fox and Mink Ranchers! With pet prices at a low level it is of even greater importance that maximum production of pups be obtained. Good feed ensuring high production is cheaper than "cheap price tag" feed with ensuing poor production. When you feed so little cereal and Bess-Miller food costs only a few cents more per 100 lbs., why risk poor breeders and poor pups with cheap feeds. The richer vitamin content of B-M Vita Crumbles is the biggest factor in bringing better pet prices. You'll make more money feeding B-M Foods. Write for pet feeding schedules. In Memoriam

MRS. WENDELL H. BEATON

The funeral of the late Mrs. Wendell Beaton took place from the residence of her brother-in-law, L. Theoph. Beaton, Bonshaw, on Sunday afternoon. There was a very large attendance showing the country-wide esteem for the family.

Impressive services were conducted at the house by the Rev. Mr. Morrison and assisted by Rev. Mr. Kay, who both also officiated at the grave.

The beautiful solo, "Shadows" was feelingly rendered by Miss Muriel MacDonald, and in further music, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and the 23rd Psalm were joined in by the attendants.

Interment was in the Argyle Cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Duncan MacPhail, Hector McNevin, Charles Darrach, Stuart McNevin, Hugh McKenzie and Edison MacRae.

The late Mrs. Agnes Graham Beaton emigrated from Scotland when quite a child, and with her husband was a resident of Wol-ton, Mass. from 1929 until she passed away in the prime of life (42) after several operations and extended illness.

Mrs. Beaton was a graduate nurse of the Whidden Memorial Hospital, Everett, Mass., and practiced her profession until the commencement of her illness. She was a special nurse in the Parkway Hospital, Brookline, and a member of the Whidden Alumnae.

She was a Christian lady of considerable accomplishment, a courteous and affectionate nature, greatly beloved by all who enjoyed her social friendships, whose passing will be mourned by many.

Funeral services were held at Wollaston leaving for Prince Edward Island.

She leaves to mourn a sorrowing husband, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Graham; two sisters, Mrs. Ruby Keigan and Miss Hilda Graham, all of East Brantford, Mass.

... Because more people read daily newspapers than any other medium

daily newspapers are COOPER'S first choice advertising medium

● Today... as for many years past... when there is a Goodyear story to tell, the daily newspapers flash the news to motorists right across the Dominion... without delay.

Just as Goodyear introduced the Double Eagle Airwheel and the Goodyear Life-Guard... both exclusive Goodyear firsts... so has Goodyear introduced the new, modern tire for 1939... the G-100... through newspapers!

In a single day the sensational story of Goodyear's new "compressed" tread tire... the G-100... became the common property of motorists everywhere.
