IN MEMORIAM

GEORGE HEBER BROWN

At Windthorst, Sask., on the 5th of August (last), after a long and painful illness which he bore with Christian patience, and resignation to the Divine Will, George Heber, fourth son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Brown of Hunter River leaving a sorrowing widow, father and mother, four brothers and four sisters, James E., William G., and Melville T., in Sask.; R. Gordon at Home; Mrs. B. R. Jewell in Concord, N. B.; Mrs. Joseph Cutliffe, Mrs. Eldon J. Seaman and Mrs. Lorne P. Higgins in P. E. I.

MRS. EUPHEMIA WEBSTER

Entered into rest at Fairview, West River on Sabbath morning, August 10th, Mrs. Euphemia Webster, relict of the late Horatio N. Webster.

Deceased was born at Fairview on Nov. 24, 1841, A. D. and was the eldest daughter of the late James Shaw, Esquire, a highly respected citizen, and a staunch elder of the Presbyterian Church, at West River. She had reached the advanced age of 77 years yet was able to supervise her domestic affairs. Although she had been in delicate health for a number of years, last March she contracted Lagrippe and bronchitis and never fully recovered from the effects, but gradually weakened until death released her from her sufferings. In her last days she was tenderly nursed by her devoted daughters who did all that loving hands could do to minister to her comfort, but Divine Providence willed otherwise and her pure spirit passed to its reward.

She was a member of the Presbyterian Church at New Dominion for upwards of forty years, and had always endeavored to hold up high ideals for her family. She was intelligent and capable and had a kind affectionate disposition, therefore her memory will long remain as a precious legacy for her kindred and friends. She leaves to mourn their loss a sorrowing family of two sons and three daughters; viz: Fannie, Mrs. Jno. Merigan, Quincy, Mass.; William and James, Bertha (ex-principals Mt. Stewart High School) and George at home, also two grandchildren and one sister Mrs. Alexander McDougald and two brothers having predeceased her to the better land. On Tuesday, August 12th, notwithstanding the busy season many friends from far and near gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. A. Wood who spoke comforting words in reference to the relation that exists between the bereaved and their loved ones who have crossed over the boundary into the larger life. He also made fitting reference to her noble sterling character which he said should serve for an inspiration to her family. Her remains were laid to rest beside her late husband who predeceased her nineteen years ago.

The pall bearers were: John McMillan, M. L. A., T. A. Stewart, Alexander McDougald, Neil J. McNeil, Ginford Lowther and Duncan McEwen.

MRS. PERCY McMAHON.

St. Bernard's Parish, Moncton, has just sustained a heavy loss by the death in the City Hospital of Marion McMillan, wife of Percy M. McMahon. Still in her prime, she was caught up from labor and the sorrows of earth by the hand of God who appeared more anxious that His servant should receive the reward of merit than that she should continue her exemplary life here below.

For some time past the shadows of death had been slowly and stealthily extending itself towards her home in Moncton. On Sunday, Aug. 10, the grim messenger crossed the threshold and summoned from this life in the thirty-fifth year of her age the beloved wife of Mr. McMahon. Although death is that supreme law before which all must in obedience bow, and although we see that heartless messenger every day in its every form, dealing its fatal strokes right and left, without discrimination as to persons, station or age, yet that ever recurring and daily spectacle does not in any way remove the bitterness of the sting it inflicts, nor lessen in any degree the incredible sense of pain it carries with it, for beneath the darkened shadow of that angel's wing separation from all we cherish and love is involved. Its decrees stern and immutable, are difficult to bear, especially when it marks as victims those still in their prime. We can easily realize, then, the bitterness of the sorrow which afflicts those nearest and dearest to her, who, just emerging from her girlhood years, we might say, the beloved of the household, their pride and joy was snatched so soon from their midst.

Mrs. McMahon was an exemplary wife and mother, in every way worthy of her husband's and children's love and well deserving of the admiration of the community where she resided, particularly of her relatives and acquaintances of P. E. I., where she came every summer to spend the summer months. In the home circle, her cheerful and entertaining disposition, her bright and pleasant countenance, her musical abilities which were of no mean order, these made her at once a favorite and a necessary acquisition. Yet more hidden beneath that external demeanor of though constantly making themselves evident in her daily conduct were planted the principles of genuine womanly goodness. Besides her ing possessed of the lovable traits of character, the deceased was a model Christian and during her illness a most heroic sufferer.

Some time ago Mrs. McMahon was taken ill with a diseased kidney, and after consultation with the most medical authorities in the lower provinces an operation was decided upon as the inevitable. The operation was successful, but pneumonia set in and, due to her weakened condition, the effects were soon noticeable and from that moment she gradually faded away. Yet she never murmured. She knew that the end was approaching, and calm resignation was stamped upon the once bright countenance. Spiritual consolation was afforded her by her pastor, Rev. E. Savage, who visited her almost daily during her illness. Just before her death she was consoled by a visit from her cousin, Bishop McNally, of Calgary. Never was the end of life more joyfully awaited, more peacefully accomplished. On Sunday evening, Aug. 10, the soul of Mrs. McMahon strengthened and consoled by the rites of God's holy church, left its earthly habitation to dwell in His Heavenly Kingdom. Although it had long been known that the recovery was impossible yet the sad news of her death fell as a painful shock upon the surrounding community. Her remains were kept in Moncton until Tuesday, when they were brought to the residence of G. R. McMahon, Kensington, P.E.I., where hundreds came to view the remains and extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

On Wednesday, Aug. 13, at 2 o'clock p.m., the remains, in charge of undertaker Bowen, and followed by a large number of carriages from different parts of the island, were conveyed to St. James' church, Freetown, where already a large number had assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to the departed. The pallbearers were: Layton Rogers, T. A. Driscoll, Barnaby Croken, Earl Kennedy, Thomas Gorman and Thomas F. Hughes.

Rev. J. J. McDonald, assisted by the Rev. Doctors J. C. McMillan and Martin Monaghan, officiated at the funeral services, which were most impressive throughout. The choir rendered in a creditable manner music suited to the solemn occasion. After the chanting of the "Libera," the procession slowly proceeded to the cemetery, where the sorrowful duty of committing dust to dust was performed, amid the tears of relatives and friends and the stent sympathy of an assemblage comprising all denominations. Besides her sorrowing husband and children, Margaret and George, are left to mourn her aged mother, three sisters and one brother to whom the heartfelt sympathy goes forth. May their grief be lessened by the assurance that her short life on earth, devoted to the performance of God's holy will, has earned for her soul a glorious immortality.
