Active Training In The Field For Student Officers

Ottawa, June 26 -- (CP) -- Abandoning the academic atmosphere of the lecture hall for the rude environment of the military camp, nearly 500 members of the various university officers' training corps will this year get practical instruction in soldiering in the field. The Defence Department schedule makes provision for approximately that number of applicants for the King's Commission to pursue their military studies at summer camps.

The strength of the Canadian O.T.C. distributed among 18 universities and colleges, is around 3,000. Local training throughout the academic year varies from four to 14 days. Additional to that, however, a limited number are enrolled for summer training.

Most of them will put in this period at Petawawa, Ont., where instruction is concentrated on gunnery and engineering. The westerners, however, will go to Shilo, Man., and Dundurn, Sask.

Practically all the eastern units have finished their outdoor training. They were drawn from Queen's University, Kingston; the University of Montreal, Loyola College, Montreal; Nova Scotia Technical College, Halifax; and St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, N. S.

The strength of the various officers' training corps, as indicated by the defence department's training schedule, includes: Dalhousie University, Halifax, 134; N. S. Technical College, 167; St. Francis Xavier's University, 128; Mount Allison University, 65; University of New Brunswick, 24.

New Drug Destroys Disease Germs

(By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE Associated Press Science Editor) MILWAUKEE, June 26 --(AP) -- The new drug, sulfanilamide, smothering disease germs in the human body.

Discovery of the queer trick by which it does this was reported to the medical section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by doctors Ralph R. Mellon and Lawrence E. Shinn of western Pennsylvania Hospital, Pittsburgh.

Sulfanilamide, made from a red dye, and first used as a medicine in 1935, has been this century's chief medical sensation. Successively it has become the best medicine for blood poisoning, pneumonia, meningitis, erysipelas, gonorrhoea and a dozen other diseases.

There has been great mystery as to how it can be effective against such completely different diseases. This the smothering appears to explain.

All these diseases, the Pittsburgh doctor said, are caused by germs. The germs are not the same. Streptococci, for example, cause blood poisoning and pneumococci cause pneumonia. But in the disease sulfanilamide cures, all the different germs have one common trait.

They get their oxygen from hydrogen peroxide, which in body tissues, these virulent organisms manufacture their own hydrogen peroxide with the aid of an enzyme known as catalase. Catalase is a chemical compound generally present in any living tissue.

Sulfanilamide, the Pittsburghers said, destroys this enzyme. Lacking it, the germs cannot manufacture enough hydrogen peroxide and so literally are smothered. They are weakened until the body's natural defences are able to destroy them.

Experiments with sulfanilamide and pneumonia germs were reported as part of the proof. Other experiments were cited.

Germs which do not produce hydrogen peroxide, the report stated, are not much affected by sulfanilamide and the drug is not a remedy for disease these germs cause.

Medical Meet At Montreal Concludes

MONTREAL, June 23--Warning against adoption of rigid nutrition standards until more is known about the subject and eulogy of preventive medicine's work which has been so effective that typhoid fever has "practically disappeared" emanated today from the Canadian Medical Association convention's closing session.

Dr. E. P. Cathcart, professor of physiology at the University of Glasgow, Scotland, delivered the nutrition advice as the five-day gathering ended. He said that he had been working on nutrition for 30 years and each year its magnitude becomes more impressive.

The speaker's last expression took the form mainly of a tribute to the memory of two great men of medicine--Lord Lister, who developed the antiseptic principle, and Sir William Osler, former McGill University professor whose name became internationally famous.

Heavy Hail Storm Hits Moose Jaw

MOOSE JAW, June 23 --(CP) -- Thousands of windows were smashed or cracked, gardens beaten into the ground and trees stripped of leaves as branches by the worst hail storm here in years.

It struck this city Thursday evening just before dark.

Little damage was done to crops in the surrounding country, but the storm left a trail across the residential part of the city. At the airport two miles west of the city, officials estimated the wind had a velocity of 80 miles an hour.

Driving other people crazy with their troubles is another favorite sport of self-centred souls.

Mrs. Hugh T. Morrison Dies In Chicago

The following reference to the death of Mrs. Hugh T. Morrison taken from the Illinois State Journal of June 16, will be read with regret by friends in this city as her husband is a nephew of Mr. Charles H. Chandler of this City and with Mrs. Morrison visits them while they were in Florio this Spring. Mr. Morrison is now Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, D. D. of Chicago, Editor of the Christian Century.

Mrs. Mary Coleman Morrison, prominent resident of Springfield, died at 10:30 p. m. yesterday at Presbyterian hospital, Chicago, where she had been a patient for the last five weeks. She was 59 years old. Her husband, Dr. Hugh T. Morrison, was at the bedside when death came. Mrs. Morrison became ill early in May, a few weeks after she and Doctor Morrison had returned from Florida where they spent the winter. She had been stricken with what proved to be her fatal illness, Mrs. Morrison had been enjoying good health since recovering four years ago from an attack of spinal meningitis.

A member of a pioneer family prominent in Springfield's history for more than a century, Mrs. Morrison was active in church, civic and charitable endeavors during her lifetime residence in this city.

For twelve years she was a member of the board of education, serving as its president at the time the present Springfield High School building was erected in 1917 at Lewis and Adams streets. As president she officiated at the laying of the cornerstone.

In her church denomination--the Disciples of Christ--she was nationally known. She was honored on numerous occasions by election to office on state and national boards of the denomination and in recent years she served as a member of the board of review of the national organization of the Disciples of Christ.

Since early girlhood she had been a member of First Christian church and was a member of the building committee which guided the congregation in constructing the present beautiful Gothic edifice at Sixth and Cook streets. Her counsel and active support was sought and unsparringly granted to every movement and organization falling within the congregation's service and at the time of her death she was serving as an active member of the official board of the church.

Mrs. Morrison was born Feb. 18, 1880, in old Logan place at First and Miller streets, the ancestral home of her family. It was here she spent her life until last October when she and Doctor Morrison vacated it to make way for the new Springfield hospital soon to be erected there. The Morrisons sold the property to the hospital a year ago to provide a site for the new hospital.

Her parents were Louis H. and Jennie (Logan) Coleman. Her father was for half a century a business man of Springfield. Her maternal grandfather was Judge Stephen T. Logan, pioneer member of the Sangamon county bar and law partner of Abraham Lincoln. He came to Springfield in 1832.

Mrs. Morrison was a graduate of Springfield High School and of Monticello seminary at Coatsville. She also attended the University of Chicago.

In 1908 she was married to Doctor Morrison, Springfield physician, and their residence had been continuously, until last October, at Logan place. Doctor and Mrs. Morrison were widely known for their hospitality and numerous world figures were entertained there by them.

While living in the ancestral home, Mrs. Morrison planned and consummated a centennial celebration of Logan place on Jan. 1, 1937. The celebration was participated in not only by local relatives and intimate friends of the family but also by many others who came from other Illinois cities and from adjacent and remote states.

Mrs. Morrison's breadth of sympathy and unsectarian spirit found concrete expression in interdenominational, international and interracial movements and activities of many sorts.

Locally, for many years, she devoted a considerable share of her time and energy to the support of movements having for their purpose the advancement of social welfare. She was a prime mover in the Springfield survey of 1915 and was for many years a member of the board of the former Home for the Friendless, now the Children's Service League.

She also was in the Associated Charities and later of its successors, the Family Welfare association, serving on the board of directors. She also was a member of the board of the Associated Welfare agencies which organization recently recognized her services by electing her to honorary membership.

The Y.W.C.A. also received her support and she served for many years on its board of directors and also as president of the organization.

Surviving are her husband; three brothers, Logan Coleman, president of the Illinois National bank; Christopher B. Coleman, Indiana, executive secretary of the Indiana Historical society and in charge of the Indiana state library; Louis C. Coleman, Winnetka; also three adopted sons, E. Honohu, Hawaii, and Dr. Joseph P. E. Morrison of the Smithsonian institution, Washington, D. C.
