

Tell Pollsters P.C.'s Can Handle Main Problems Best

Throughout the nation, except in Quebec province, Conservatives win first place as the political party best able to handle major problems of the day. In Quebec, the preference is split evenly between the Conservatives and the Liberals for this choice, with over four in ten voters, as yet, not able to decide which party they would name.

Periodically, interviewers for the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion have asked Canadians to name the ranking problem. As of today, about four in ten name unemployment, while less than one in ten put foreign affairs and peace in first place. After this, problems tail away to a wide variety of headaches, as seen by the average man and woman, with none of them named by any significant proportion of the public.

Interviewers asked all those who named a problem to select the political party which they believed could best handle the particular one they had in mind.

Nationally, the vote runs like this:

Party Best Able To Handle Main Problem Today:	per cent
Conservatives	32
Liberals	18
C. C. F.	7
Social Credit and Others	7
Can't Say	38
