German Labels Report Nonsense

STUTTGART, Germany (AP)—A German industrialist described as nonsense a published statement that the late Ernst Heinkel told a British air vice-marshal Germany was plotting a third world war.

"It is completely impossible and unfounded," Alfred Klein, general manager of the Heinkel Aircraft Firm, said Monday. He was referring to a statement by British Air Vice-Marshal D. C. T. Bennett that Heinkel told him several years ago in a burst of alcoholic loquacity Germany is plotting a third world war together with Russia against the West.

3rd Paved Road To Park Area

Three hard surfaced roads leading to Prince Edward Island's National Park are now completed giving tourists dust free travel to this widely patronized resort area.

For some time a hard surfaced road has been used from Hunter River through New Glasgow to North Rustico but this summer two more links of pavement have been added by completing the paving from Stanley Bridge to Cavendish and from Corran Ban to Dalvay.

It is quite likely that two more strips through Mayfield and the extension of pavement on the Brackley Point Road will make the fifth dust free entry to the North Shore area of the Island.

Axworthy Inquest Adjourns, Will Be Resumed On July 21

The evidence remaining to be heard including a report of the additional investigations being carried out by the RCMP is expected to be completed July 21 at a final session of the inquest examining the circumstances surrounding the death of George Axworthy, Wheatley River.

This information was given the jury last night by Coroner Dr. L.E. Prowse who postponed completion of the inquiry another two weeks, without any additional evidence being taken.

The next session will also be held at City Hall. It is scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m.

At the first hearing which was held June 24 six witnesses gave evidence concerning the death of the 78-year-old Queens County farmer who was found May 14 in one of his own barns, bleeding and seriously injured.

Admitted to the P.E.I. Hospital the same day, he died on June 5. Medical evidence showed that death was due to severe damage to each side of the brain.

Cull Piles Pose Threat To Commercial Plantings

The first signs of late blight are found each season in piles of discarded potatoes, the latest bulletin issued by the local Service Laboratory notes.

The disease, having become established in such situations, spreads down wind to fields in the neighborhood, Bulletin No. 2 continues.

In addition, many discarded tubers are infected with virus diseases such as mosaic, leaf roll, and spindle tuber, and because the cull piles are ideal breeding places for potato insects another threat to commercial planting is always present.

Cull piles should not be permitted to exist and threaten the health of the fields. It would be wise to eliminate the cull pile menace now.

Flea beetles are quite numerous at present but they should disappear within the next week. Unless they are causing serious damage by making small holes in the leaves it would not be necessary to spray at this time.

Aphids are not generally present this early in the season but some light infestations have been reported from the Annapolis Valley, Nova Scotia. DDT is recommended for flea beetles and Malathion for aphids.

Was Member Of Missionary Soc.

She was a member of Riverside Methodist church, life member of Prince Edward Island Missionary society, charter member of The Sunshine League, and a graduate of Mount Allison Women's college of Sackville New Brunswick, Can.

Survivors are the widow, two sons, Lawrence and Kenneth, both of Sioux City; a daughter, Mrs. Georgina Eardley in the Bahama Islands; a sister, Miss Lillian Wotton of Victoria, B.C., Can., and five grandchildren.

The break was discovered at approximately 8 a.m. by the proprietor Mr. Doiron who notified City Police.

Say Duplessis Exceeded Rights In Ouster Move

QUEBEC (CP)—Le Soilel says in an editorial that Premier Duplessis overstepped his rights when he expelled a newspaper man from his office before the start of his press conference June 27.

The editorial was commenting on the ouster of reporter Guy Lamarche of Montreal Le Devoir. It occurred after he and nine members of the Legislature Press Gallery filed into the premier's office for the press conference.

Le Devoir in a series of articles started June 13 has been critical of a gas transaction involving sale of Montreal's government-owned household gas distribution system to the privately owned Quebec Natural Gas Corporation.

Le Soilel, independent politician, says that because the premier did not hold a press conference last Friday it is not possible to say whether the expulsion of the reporter resulted from an irresistible impulse or from a decision "not to grant the same treatment to representatives of the Montreal newspaper as to their colleagues of the press in general."

The editorial adds: "If he (Mr. Duplessis) gave vent to an uncontrollable reflex, it was an excusable gesture in view of the tension between the government and the newspaper; it was a gesture that could be forgiven if there was assurance that it would not be repeated.

UNFORTUNATE INCIDENT

"It was despite everything an unfortunate incident about which we cannot remain silent, because that would be admitting a principle which would undermine the very foundation of one of our fundamental liberties—freedom of the press. It would be admitting that the only ones with rights are those who share the views of the government and endorse each and every one of its acts without question. It would be admitting that public men have rights which other citizens have not, particularly the right to take justice onto themselves."

"To expel a newspaperman from a press conference because the newspaper he represents has criticized the government, made serious charges against one or more high-placed civil servants, or denounced official acts of the government, is in a way taking justice onto oneself. It is arrogating to oneself a right that one does not own."

The newspaper says the premier is free to refuse to grant interviews to newspaper men calling at his office. But that was not the situation which gave rise to the expulsion.

It was the premier who had convened the press conference. By the act, the premier's office became accessible to all newspaper men, regardless of the opinions of the newspapers they represented.

The editorial concluded: "It appears that in Quebec province the incidents which have just occurred are only the normal outcome of a lack of vigilance and constructive thinking by the press as a whole. It is astonishing that not one newspaper man attempted to intervene with the premier on behalf of a colleague, in favor of the rights of the press."

EXCESS OF CAUTION

"It is evident that our journalism, in the long run, has become a victim of a line of conduct it has followed for many years. Guided by a desire for objectivity which has led to an excess of caution, our newspapers have sought not to run counter to public opinion, to the political feelings of their readers, and they have become too tolerant towards government's and public officials."

"We hope the incidents will temper us in our role of guides and guardians of the rights of the population; and renew in us all the vigor that a society has the right to expect of a healthy and vigilant press."

In an earlier editorial the Montreal Star said of the expulsion incident: "This is, politically thought not constitutionally, a dangerous thing to do."

The Montreal Gazette said: "The prime minister has not acted with his usual fairness towards the press. When a press conference is called all have an equal right to attend."

Girl Guide Guests Of Rotary Enjoy Memorable Meeting

"History is 'Old Stuff' but what you believe and do will be history, and what is handed on is what we are living today," Rotarian Frank MacKinnon said in addressing the Rotary Club luncheon and more than a hundred Girl Guide guests at the Charlottetown yesterday.

Dr. MacKinnon was speaking on the history of P. E. Island and the early development of the confederation of Canadian colonies. "The early endeavours to become established and develop a home environment in this Province and throughout the Maritimes is quaint to us but nevertheless terribly important to us down through the two hundred years which have elapsed. What are we going to do with this noble heritage as we look back with gratitude?" Dr. MacKinnon asked.

Referring to the hardships endured by early settlers during the winter months and the shortage of food and adequate clothing and shelter, Dr. MacKinnon gradually developed the advancement of the lumber industry, ship building and agriculture which brought an era of prosperity to the province as ships were built, loaded with produce and sailed to England to be disposed of at a profit.

He described in detail the meeting of the Atlantic Provinces in the historic Confederation room here in 1864 and the Quebec conference of a week later when the basis of a confederated Canada was confirmed by statesmen with common loyalty and strength.

The speaker was introduced by chairman Ed. Martin and thanked by co-chairman Tom DeBlois.

President Russ Seller in extending a special welcome to the Girl Guides said that Rotary was very happy to have them as luncheon guests. He wished them an enjoyable and successful camp meeting and presented each visit with a folder containing the Island Hymn, written by L. M. Montgomery and a picture of the historic Confederation room in the Provincial Building.

Guide Joanne Walker of Montreal expressed the thanks of the guide group for the courteous gesture of Rotary in extending the invitation to lunch. Barbara Falls of North Bay, Ont., was given a surprise ovation and "a Happy Birthday to you" when it was disclosed that such was the case.

President Seller presented past president Bob Parent with a past president's button in appreciation and recognition of his outstanding Rotary service and leadership given during the past year.

Retiring Secretary Alistair MacLeod presented the new incumbent Randy Manning with a secretary's pin, the insignia of his office. President Bill Lancy of the Morristown, N.J., Rotary Club presented a bannerette to the club in token of a closer friendship and contact.

Head table seating included Rotarian Tom DeBlois, Director Community Service, Miss Susanne MacKinnon, Charlottetown, Camp Commandant, Premier A. W. Matheson, Mrs. G. T. London, Vancouver, B. C., Guider in Charge, Rotarian Frank MacKinnon, Rotarian Ed. Martin, Carol Bruch, Winnebago, Ills., Annette Blake, Edinburgh, Scotland, Margaret Hargreaves, Lacombe, Alta., Rotarian Norman Lowther, Director International Service, Randy Manning, Secretary.
