Morell Co-Operative Says Profit $9,000

A profit for the year of almost $9,000 has been shown by Morell Consumers' Co-operative.

The financial statement and auditors report was presented at the recent annual meeting of the co-operative in Morell Community Hall by manager Cecil McCarthy.

It was stated finances showed a marked improvement over last year.

Aubrey Webster, president of the organization, was chairman for the meeting which saw about 90 members and guests in attendance.

New members of the board of directors elected were Harold Phelan and John Vandiejean, and re-elected were Francis MacAdam and William Eldershaw.

Other directors are Aubrey Webster, Gordon Hooper, Robert Powell, James Robbins and Melvin McCarthy.

The president reported that 14 well-attended board meetings had been held since the last annual meeting.

Improvements in the general store included a new tile floor and a new meat display case.

Mr. Webster urged all members to save purchase slips, which they will need at the end of the year to qualify for dividends.

A recommendation from past president Frank Connolly that three per cent interest on share and loan capital was approved by the meeting.

Akerley Says Farms Of Today Little Resemble Those In Past

"The modern and up-to-date farm of today bears little resemblance to the farm of 50 years ago," Nova Scotia's minister of agriculture and marketing, Hon. I. W. Akerley said in Charlottetown yesterday as he spoke of the effects of scientific discovery on agriculture.

He was addressing the weekly luncheon meeting of the Charlottetown Rotary Club at the Charlottetown Hotel. Special luncheon guests were the Gold Cup and Saucer Girls: Helen MacCallum, Patsy Lappin, Trudy Callbeck, Rosemary Brown, Lorne Vessey, Carol Foster, Jane Hogan and Paula Campbell.

Mr. Akerley said "tremendous changes have been introduced into the agricultural industry—changes that are still being introduced slowly and surely day by day, and year after year."

"The modern farm of today bears little resemblance to the farm of 50 years ago. The horse-drawn, single plow has been replaced by a tractor-drawn, multi-bottomed instrument. The scythe and the sickle have given way to the combine; the hand milker and the creamer in the well have been replaced by the pipeline milker, the milk cooler and the tank truck.

"We are no longer able to find such a thing as a farm flock of a dozen hens. Instead, we now find that the poultry industry is an industry of multi-million dollar proportion. We now have egg and broiler factories, fully automated so that with the turn of a switch, the lights come on, the feed hoppers open, and, in due course, the eggs roll out to be collected."

MILK WITHOUT COW

Mr. Akerley pointed out that in England scientists have been able to make milk from grass, cutting the cow out of the whole operation. "This process," he said, "is still in its infancy but who is there so bold to suggest that it will never happen here?"

Things like this, Mr. Akerley said, point up to the fact that tremendous changes are taking place. He said "it is well to bear in mind that in this day of technological achievement and advancement, and automation, that the total number of jobs is actually increasing. At the same time, it is well to bear in mind that it is the nature of jobs that has changed. Consequently, automation is not the cause of unemployment in the sense that it is reducing the total number of jobs."

"For example, what are wanted on today's farm are men other southern California cities, erupting as far away as San Diego, 130 miles to the south.

Brown expressed hope that Dr. Martin Luther King would not come to Los Angeles now, as he had planned. He said: "I don't think this is the time for civil rights demonstrations in Los Angeles."

Arrangements were made to reopen 50 food markets in the riot-torn area today. National guardsmen will patrol the stores. Clerks from burned-out stores will be shifted to the reopened shops to handle the expected rush from hungry residents in the food-short, closed-off area.

Public health officials laid plans to collect mounding heaps of garbage and spoiled food to prevent the outbreak of disease.

More than 1,000 homes were without electricity in the area, because of damage to lines by rioters and fires. Utility service workers have been kept out of the area since the riot started.

Factories, schools, banks and public offices remained closed in the riot-swept area.

QUIET DURING DAY

No daylight violence was reported from other southern California cities where racial violence spread into white sections during the weekend.

These outbreaks included: —Long Beach, 15 miles south of the riot centre. A policeman killed by a shot; gun blast as officers broke up a crowd of 50 rock-throwing Negroes. Police and guardsmen imposed a 10 p.m.-to-4 a.m. curfew.

—Bernardino, 80 miles east of Los Angeles. Milling Negroes smashed windows in a liquor store and drive-in restaurant. There were scattered fire-bombings.

—San Diego: Seventy-two Negroes arrested in a near-riot. There were reports of Negroes knifing or beating

Vaudeville Acts Best In Years

By RALPH CAMERON

One of the most exciting vaudeville bills to hit the Coliseum stage in many years delighted a large audience as the Old Home Week Show officially got underway last night.

Opening with a fast moving acrobatic number with bars and trapeze and closing with an even faster moving illusionist, the middle part of the show is filled with delight for old and young.

In fact there is not a single act which is not tops and the entire show is far superior to a majority of the television performances we have been watching.

Thd Ivanoffs, father, mother, son and daughter, open the show and nothing could have gotten Old Home Week off to a better start. Pete Ivanoff and his son go through some slapstick routines that are good and the boy (with some slight assistance) does some amazing balancing acts. Pete does almost fantastic stunts on the bars with his flying switches from a trapeze to a bar using a flip and reverse twist ending with a hand stand.

STEALS THE SHOW

But perhaps a tiny girl, pretty little daughter Nadia, steals the show. At least she stole the audience, heart and all.

Pleasing everyone were four beautiful red-caparisoned white ponies racing through a wide variety of tricks. Owner Frisky said Snow White and the Dwarfs have seven times been world champions in professional competitions. He and Mrs. Frisky are proud of their act and the youngsters in the crowd ate it up.

A phenomenal balancing act by Gerard had the crowd gasping as he performed such almost incredible feats as placing a water glass upside down on a glass block and on it balanced a coke bottle upside down on the neck of a beer bottle. If that were not enough Gerard then balanced himself on top of the pile using a one-hand grip stand. Later he balanced three aluminum chairs on the necks of four coke bottles and does a one arm balancing act on top of the pile while playing a harmonica. Better see it to believe.

An old favorite, always a delight especially to the kids, was a plate spinning show by Pedro — the Frustrated Chef — who managed to keep four plates spinning on each of six separate stands spaced across the stage.

PERFECT BALANCE

A startling exhibition of sheer strength and perfect sense of balance was given by Chai and So-may, another husband and wife team, from Canton, China. Not liking revolutionary countries, they now make their home, in New York. Undoubtedly their act is one of the best to hit the local boards in many years as they give a performance not to be forgotten in a hurry.

The almost unbelievable feats of magician Joe Kurengo would leave anyone gasping because the most startling thing about his tricks is the speed with which they are performed. He is ably assisted in befuddling his audience by his pretty wife, Irma. They have a couple of other assistants in Michael and Eva, son and daughter just old enough to appear with the folks and help in completely mystifying the unbelieving onlookers.

Joe winds up the evening show by chaining his wife's wrists, tying her in a sack and then locking her in a round box. Standing on top of the box — he slowly pulls a hoop curtain up around him. As it reaches arms length overhead it starts to descend and lo and behold it is Irma standing on the box. Joe himself is found with wrists chained, tied in the sack — and smoking a cigarette.

Master of ceremonies for the show is Loman McAulay while Ivo Cadmore leads a group of top local musicians in supplying the music for the different stage acts.
