

HUMAN GRATITUDE.

How great the man who hopes for all, And ever freely gives; Who feels his own good in his grace Grow greater as he lives...

Who feels the humble from his purse, Ours Heaven's a drivin' haul; And feels more good in his heart Than transient ever has.

Who sets up the God-like creed, This man are all in; For God's in every heart without His radiant touch within!

A sovereign in the world of Love— A king without a name; Who wears his crown of advent beads, And ever beats the same!

Who sets sublime through every hour, Through every day and year; And will be more good, Heaven above, Create a heaven here!

Who feels the grandest, highest hopes, And like an angel goes with joy; Walks—Heaven in his sleep!

With eloquence and feelings vast, A heart with virtue bound; Who wears the humblest of attire, And loves the humblest food!

The mortal and immortal link, Earth's golden age to reach; His motto, grand and wonderful, Embracing, clasping each!

And ever dreaming of the good, The beautiful and brave; Meets all he wants in that firm look, As martyrs meet the grave!

Courageous—noble, good, and kind, A "Mong soldier" none the less; Preaching truth and freedom, And his post, king, and priest!
