HAPPENINGS

Dr. Lotta Hirschmanova's message on Monday evening was a challenge to the members of different organizations listening to her. She told many human interest stories, most of which were tragic. But this one left all us proud and very happy.

When the appeal was launched in September for funds, $175,000 to be raised before Christmas, the first place in all Canada that answered the appeal was to quote Dr. H. "a very small W.I. in P.E.I." Upon enquiry this W.I. proved to be that of Red Point, Prince Edward Island.

Monday was a day of island hospitality for the wives of the men attending the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council. In the morning there was a Coffee Party at Holman's. This was followed by a reception given by the government of Prince Edward Island at the Charlottetown Hotel. At 2 o'clock through the courtesy of the Island Motor Transport Company chartered busses took the visitors to Cavendish. They were guests at tea of Miss Mary Stewart of Lakeview Lodge.

The world-famous Don Cossack chorus and dancers under the baton of their conductor Kostukoff are to be heard and seen soon in Charlottetown in thrilling songs and spectacular dancing.

This event will take place at the Queen Charlotte High School next Saturday evening. It is sponsored by the Charlottetown Rotary Club.

Certainly it was a fruitful idea on the part of the Rotarians to bring the chorus here. Those, who already have heard the Don Cossacks, as well as those hearing them for the first time, can be assured of a magnificent evening's entertainment.

In honor of Mrs. Walter Webster, Saskatoon, Mrs. W. E. Massey entertained at her residence Tuesday, at the tea hour. Mrs. Webster is visiting her mother Mrs. George W. MacLeod, Longworth Avenue, and Miss Doris MacLeod and other members of her family.

Miss Jeanne Robertson, R.N., Dunstaffnage, and Miss Ruth Stewart, R.N., Murray Harbour, have left for Westminster Hospital, London, Ontario. Both of these nurses will be on staff duty.

Miss Ruth Vessey returned to Waban, Mass., after spending a two months vacation at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. DeCoste, Bayfield St.

Miss Jane Morrison of Boston, accompanied by Miss Mary Walker, formerly of St. Georges, left this morning for their home, after a pleasant visit with relatives and friends on the island.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Morrissey, Charlottetown, recently left by car to spend their holiday visiting friends and relatives in Boston and Maine. Enroute home they will spend a few days visiting Mr. Morrissey's sister, Sister Mary Leona of the C.N.D., Montreal.

Mrs. George L. Morrison of Charlottetown, left on Friday morning to spend the winter in Boston, Mass.

Miss Erma Taylor and Mr. Clayton have returned to Charlottetown after spending the weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor, North Granville. Miss Taylor is employed with Pierce's Cash and Carry and Clayton is a student at Union Commercial.

Mr. and Mrs. Fulton MacLeod, Halifax, N.S. were recent visitors to Montague where they visited Mr. MacLeod's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Matheson, and his grandmother, Mrs. Effie MacLeod, and his aunt, Mrs. Louis Buell.

The lace covered serving table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake. A toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Mr. Charman to which the groom responded. Miss Meredith MacLean was in charge of the guest book. Girl friends of the bride served. Mrs. Frank Myers and Mrs. Fred Inman, aunts of the bride and groom presided over the tea.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

We Are Throwing More Light On The Gifted Child

Ruhamah S. Frank

What an age to live in for the young and gifted! Parents need not worry about the money to send their gifted son or daughter through college. No longer will the bright student be forced to waste his time and energy in working his way through college. From one source or another will come the money. The gifted one need only concentrate on his studies, go as far as his abilities and talents permit. For never before was life so filled with problems, scientific and human — and their solution requires human intelligence — there can be no substitute.

WHERE FOUND

The gifted ones, according to authorities, must have at least 140 I.Q. This places them among the top 2 per cent of the child population. It would be simpler to find this 2 per cent if it were confined to any one race or nationality, or to any particular locality or social set-up. But according to Dr. James A. Lewis of the University of Michigan, the gifted ones can be found anywhere at all.

Last week I quoted Dr. Ketcham, also of the University of Michigan, who said that the brightest children are sometimes so quick at learning that they are accused of not paying attention long enough to master any one thing. But then again, says Dr. Ketcham, "at other times" the gifted child is completely absorbed in the mastery of a single skill or a narrow field of knowledge to the exclusion of all else, and parents and teachers worry over the "required" work going undone or whether he will "miss something."

NO PATTERN
In other words, gifted children are not consistent — they follow no one pattern. But the following are a few signs that usually mark the gifted child: 1. Early development of an unusually large vocabulary; 2. Uncommon ability to tell or reproduce a story; 3. Particularly keen powers of observation and retention of information about things observed; 4. Interest in calendars and clocks; in atlases, dictionaries and encyclopedias; 5. Reasoning out cause and effect relationships; 6. Proficiency in drawing, music or other art forms; 7. Reading earlier than is usual.

It is interesting that educators cannot agree on a very important question: whether to separate the gifted ones and place them in special schools or classes or to leave them in the same school and class with the other children. Edward Jewett of the American Federation of Teachers believes gifted children should be placed in special schools at about the fourth grade level. On the other hand, Dr. Ketcham quoted above, says the Experimental School at the University of Michigan has found the greatest success in "a system of keeping all the children in the same class but making sure there is enough different material so that each child finds something there for him".

tions. The groom's mother, who also received, wore a dress of light blue lace and a corsage similar to that of the bride's mother. Later in the day the bride and groom left on their honeymoon, motoring through the United States. The bride wore a navy suit with white accessories. Her corsage was composed of red and white roses.

The bride's gift to her maid of honor and to her bridesmaid, was a silver locket. The groom's gift to the best man and the ushers were cuff links and tie clip sets.

The bride was the guest of honor at several showers prior to her marriage at which she received many valuable gifts. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Hill will reside at 43 Thorne Crescent, Toronto.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Those Are Happy Faces Around Alderlea Table

Did you notice the September gossamer drift in the exquisite sunshine of this afternoon? Like silken threads of a pleasant dream it was — threads which are there but which one may not hold, a will o' the wisp of an ephemeral thing belonging to elfin lands, one may see but never capture. And over the fields of the farmlands Autumn's shimmer of season, a blue haze was "drifting and dreaming" or was it not, as one admired it, more golden than blue?

And now came an ideal harvest day to please our farmers who at "the other farm" beyond Rob's, threshed and baled straw in a neat endeavour. As it is, the work is continuing into the twilight to have "that field there" cleared and thus allow the busy scene to shift to another farm in the morning.

"What's for supper?" one of the young fry questioned with a happy smile coming in to it through the afterglow. He sniffed picking up its tantalizing aroma.

"Soup?" he queried.
"Soup!" we nodded. 'Of the vegetable variety.'
"Not soup! After the heat of this afternoon, it should be...
"A mouse?" we giggled.

But already the warmth was being dissolved in the pleasant coolness of evening, which tourists and visitors declare is not among the least of the Island's summer charms.

"Well soup or whatever it is boys "James offered with a boyish chuckle "let's get it down and get back to our work! What have we to do? Two loads on the wagons and two still on tended the wedding in a pale green dress with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for approximately 150 guests. Mr. and Mrs. England will reside in Toronto.

Out of town guests were: Miss Marcella MacDonald, Halifax, N.S., Mr. and Mrs. Harry England, Paul and Patricia England, Mrs. Murray Best, Miss Kathleen England, Mrs. Minnie England, Mr. Cook, all of Port Williams, N.S. —Photo by Meyers.

the field before we've finished there? Then" he grinned happily "it's not what you eat that I mind — it's the time you'll take at it! . . . More bread, Ellen!" he reminded the cook presently, noting the quickly baring plate.

Now the tasteful new of vegetables fresh from garden-plots go into the soup-stock: carrots in improved varieties and cabbage, parings of turnips, cubes of "our own potatoes." Dicings of rip tomato, a handful of peas. A bare whittle of onion to add a nice mystery of flavor and perhaps to have one of the small fry look up and ask, "There wouldn't be onion in this, would there? That's something I just can't eat!" And then finding no "incriminating evidence" continue to enjoy it. Making us smile and remember of this and many another prejudice and fear "It's all in the mind."

Soup was our supper-fare with home-baked bread and rolls. Cake too. "The more frosting the better, I always say of cake" one commented approvingly and the seasonal apple pie.

"This must be the hundredth piece of apple pie I've eaten since the harvest began" one young hopeful, obviously enjoying it commented. "Remember we're in a hurry. . . Force it

HOUSEHOLD HINT

An assortment of smooth maple cooking spoons is always a nice thank-you or shower gift. They do not scratch pans; and the handles never get hot. Soap and water will clean them without vigorous scrubbing.

down!" James chuckled. "And mind "he teased the cook in a roundabout way "you don't choke on the crust!"
What happy times we have, young and older at Alderlea, on a day of the harvest!
