

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

MARCH 15, 1893.

The Stanley.

The greatest interest has been felt by business men—both exporters and importers—in the repair of the Stanley. Until to-day it was impossible to obtain any definite information concerning the matter.

Application to the Marine Department here and to the authorities at Picou were alike fruitless. But a telegram sent at the expense of Mr. P. Blake brought forth the following definite and satisfactory reply this forenoon:

"J. D. RYAN: Repairs to the propeller completed this morning, and expect to be ready on Saturday. NOONAN & DAVIES"

Civic and Provincial.

THE same cause is making trouble in both Civic and Provincial affairs. Wherever there are eight or ten men to do one man's work, there must, of necessity, be trouble.

As to matters Provincial, it is safe to say that we should have no gerrymander schemes, no mortgage vote and other political rascalities, if the Legislature were composed of one house of ten or fifteen men, a much larger proportion of representatives to population than there is in Ontario!

Legislative Notes

As an expression of regard for the memory of the Honorable George Coles and of appreciation for his great services to the Province was fitting and proper on the part of the Legislature upon the occasion of the demise of his amiable and estimable widow.

It may now, perhaps, be hoped that the Honorable George Coles' work will not be, for the most part, undone by the Mortgage Government. So far, they have kept "pretty dark" concerning their intentions in respect to the Mortgage Vote, the two-thirds Vote, the Franchise Deprivation and the Gerrymander.

The Gerrymander party is on record as having refused to do a courteous and gentlemanly act, the justice of which they dared not deny. To Mr. Shaw's proposition that a vote of thanks be accorded the Dominion Government for their special efforts to establish the profitable cheese industry in this Province, they opposed their bare majority of one. Only that, and nothing more!

The Legislature has been in session for a week, but the official reports, including the public accounts, have not yet been brought down.

Provincial Legislature.

House of Assembly.

SUMMARY OF PROCEEDINGS.

TUESDAY, March 14.

After recess.— Hon. Mr. Richards resumed the debate, defending the policy and administration of the Government. Mr. Arsenault replied attacking the enormities of the Reserved Bill, and severely criticizing the general administration of the Mortgage Government.

Mr. McKay contended strongly for a reduction of the Legislature. But denounced the Reserved Bill with its "new features." As to taxation, he believed it was near, and that it would be heavy. So long as it was fairly applied, and the money was properly used, the people would not object.

House went into committee.—Mr. Angus McLeod in the chair. Mr. Shaw moved in amendment of the third clause an expression of thanks for the assistance and fostering care of the present Federal Government in respect to the dairy interest.

Mr. Shaw moved in amendment of the third clause an expression of thanks for the assistance and fostering care of the present Federal Government in respect to the dairy interest. Mr. Shaw held that it was due to the Dominion Government that our thanks should be expressed for their fostering care, particularly in respect to our dairy products.

Mr. McKay contended strongly for a reduction of the Legislature. But denounced the Reserved Bill with its "new features." As to taxation, he believed it was near, and that it would be heavy. So long as it was fairly applied, and the money was properly used, the people would not object.

Handsome Features.— Sometimes unslightly blotches, pimples or small eruptions, destroy the attractiveness of handsome features. In all such cases Scott's Emulsion will build up the system and impart freshness and beauty.

Bloody Fighting in India.

British Against Hostile Tribes

The British Leader is Shot Through the Heart,

But the British Completely Victorious

Strengthening the British Position.

CALCUTTA, March 15. The British have had a severe battle with the tribes beyond Chitral, where the British for some time have been endeavoring to strengthen the Indian frontier against the possibility of Russian encroachment.

The British recently occupied Chitral, beyond Chitral, with a garrison. The mountain tribes made an attack on the fort and were driven off with a loss of 200 men. The British then marched against the entrenched villages of the hostile tribes and stormed the village under the command of Major Daniell, who was shot through the heart while leading his men in the assault. Every point occupied by the hostile natives was carried, the British losing 23 killed and 30 wounded. The tribesmen finally submitted to the British authorities. The result of the struggle will greatly strengthen the British position at what is considered its weakest point in the vicinity of the Hindoo Kush.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

McCarthy's Resolution and Speech.

Dr. Montague's Reply.

The Government is Ably Defended.

OTTAWA, March 15. After routine yesterday on the motion to again consider supply, Mr. McCarthy moved his trade and tariff resolution. The member for Simcoe supported his resolution in a lengthy, but interesting, and at times powerful speech. He asserted that the National Policy was formulated to meet an emergency, and was not intended to be permanent, and that protection could only be justified to the extent of its benefits to the people and equalized the financial burdens which it imposed.

Mr. McCarthy proceeded to argue that neither of these expectations had been realized and that the time had arrived to say to the industries fostered by this policy since 1879, "You must henceforth paddle your own canoe." He asserted that all the industries prospering through the N. P. were monopolies, and that the consumers paid 30 per cent more under our protective policy than they would under free trade and that where ever the price of home-made articles was not equal to that asked for the imported article, the quality of the Canadian product was inferior.

Mr. McCarthy resumed after recess, speaking at considerable length in explanation of his resolution, and giving grounds why he did not believe that the Government would carry the tariff reform to the extent demanded by the great mass of Canadians, irrespective of party.

Dr. Montague replied to Mr. McCarthy, reminding him that those who have done best service to Canada, have in the past always found scope for their labors within the lines of her two great political parties. The member for Haldimand followed Mr. McCarthy through all his arguments and pointed out their glaring inconsistencies. He defended the present position of the Government on the tariff question, and expressed his confidence from what they had done in the past, that the Government would do what was best for the country in the immediate future.

The House and galleries were repeatedly convulsed with laughter by the keen shafts of humor that Dr. Montague hurled at the member for Simcoe, and the telling extracts he read from his old time speeches, and the Conservative benches rang with loud cheers as the eloquent doctor made it clear, beyond dispute, that Mr. McCarthy's present attitude on the tariff question was due, not to a conviction that the N. P. was a failure, but rather to a desire to embarrass the Government.

Charlottetown, March 15, 1893.

SOME CUES FOR THE LADIES!

Selected from Correspondence of Beer Bros' Buyer.

Many of the new Dress Materials appear in half tones of decided colors, such as Cedar Brown, Heliotrope, Reseda and Powder Blue. Tweeds are also in good demand, large and small checks taking the lead. They are being made up in the 1893 style, narrow at the waist and full at the hem, with velvet yokes and sleeves. A leading London dressmaker states that it is now almost certain that skirts will fit and define hips but flow out from the knees, and vary in width from five to six, seven and even eight yards round.

The threatened introduction of crinolines seems about at an end. It is hardly possible in Charlottetown to realize the intensity of feeling aroused in England over this matter.

M. Worth (Paris), at a recent interview, is credited with saying:—"I hope crinolines are not to be worn—but the enormous fullness in skirts may well demand some sort of support. How wide skirts are they perhaps be understood when I tell you we have just made a gown with 60 yards of silk in it." Sleeves threaten to be a very prominent feature. You may choose either the "balloon," an immense puff of velvet, the leg of mutton or the slashed volais.

Shot Velvet Blouses are all the rage. Skirts are worn very short for walking, and generally with gaiters. I am looking after the interests of our lady customers, and you can promise them the correct thing will be forthcoming.
