A BLIND BOY'S PRAYER

I knew his sightless eyes were softly closed
As I was held in silence on the stair.
Clasped by the fingers of infinity
To know the breathless beauty of his prayer:
I have not seen the wonder of the stars,
The rainbow in the sky, nor stooped to trace
The glories at my feet, but Thou hast spared
Me from the sight of an unthankful face.
I have not looked upon a meadow brook
Nor moonlight dancing on its silver-veined flow,
But in the music of its rippling course
I still before its oratorio.

Within my world of night, I have not glimpsed
The face of purity, the untouched sheen
Thou lights her every smile, nor have I gazed
Upon the face of greed and the unclean.
I may not see gems of Thy universe,
I may not see this kingdom Thou hast wrought,
But I rejoice my eyes can not behold
The wayward footprints man must leave for naught.
I'll touch my Mother's face, that Saviour's rose,
I'll walk beside my Dad and know delight,
And ever hold, until the night be gone,
The finger tips that gave a beggar sight.

The A.C.U.U. Reviews Conference At Edinburgh

The Associated Country Women of the World Conferences are always colourful. The hostess country provides a background typical of its country. This year in Edinburgh, beautiful flowers grown by some of the member societies, heather, blue bells, Scotch thistles and lengths of tartan were used to decorate the places of meeting.

The National Dresses of the delegates added interesting colour notes. The women of the East in their gorgeous saris; the Welsh with tall black hats; South Africans in full skirted, lace trimmed dresses with pike bonnets; Scandinavians with striped skirts, white aprons and black bodices; and our own delegates in gay summer dresses.

The Souvenir Bazaar, where the visitors could purchase gifts for the home folk, was gay with cloths and cases embroidered with emblems of Scotland. Knitting came from the Shetland and Orkney Islands, dolls in kilts and doll furniture padded with tartan were on sale. A cloth said to be worked by Mary Queen of Scots and a modern patch work bed-cover containing 4,641 pieces

The ACWW. This project was sponsored by societies from United States and the Netherlands. The Food and Agriculture Organization will co-operate to enable qualified leaders in Home Economics to study in other countries. The scholarship will be financed by voluntary contributions from ACWW Constituent Societies, interested individuals and from ACWW funds.

Prizes for the Essay Competition, which was entitled, "Things My Grandmother Told Me," went first to England, second to South Africa, third to Sweden and fourth to Ceylon. For the 10th Triennial Conference in 1962, there are two essays—"Our Children and Their Games," and "How I Broaden My Horizons Through Group Contacts and Study". Again, the emphasis on home and the international aspect of our programs is evident.

A resolution, which was introduced by the Italian Rural Societies, supporting the "Free the World from Hunger Campaign", by the Food and Agriculture Organization was passed. All members are asked to study this problem, to co-operate with FAO and to take practical action in their own territories.

The Asian delegates presented the resolution asking for the suspension of nuclear tests destructive to humanity. Over 100 delegates abstained from voting. Some felt that if other nations had nuclear bombs all nations had for protection.

Baroness Elliott of Harwood, first woman to speak in the House of Lords, who opened the Conference had this to say, "Women set the standard of home life and community life in a country. If women are educated to play a responsible part in any community that community will continue to advance. War against disease, malnutrition and ignorance must continue if under developed countries are to come up to the level of the higher developed countries".

Officers elected are: President Mrs. F.J. Van Beekoff, Seims, Holland; World Vice-Presidents: Mrs. Haven Smith, U.S.A.; Mrs. F.B. Deitel, Ceylon; Mrs. W.H. Cullen, Austral.; Mrs. Nan Adams, Austral.; Mrs. M. C. Adams, Austral.; Mrs. M. C. Adams, Austral.; Mrs. M. C. Adams, Austral.; Mrs. M. C. Adams, Austral.

The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada presented the Associated Country Women of the World with a "Canadian Mosaic" in slides, for the purpose of exchange between member countries. Through these slides we hope to interpret our country and our way of life, and thus lead to a better understanding.

MR. AND MRS. KENNETH LLOYD COLES Hazelbrook Baptist Church Setting Of Pretty Wedding

Hazelbrook United Baptist church, Hazelbrook, P. E. I., was the scene of a pretty summer wedding on Saturday, July 25th, at five p.m. when the Rev. Charles W. Passey, united in marriage Barbara Giddings MacPhail daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. MacPhail, Mt. Albion, to Kenneth Lloyd Coles, Kitchener, Ontario son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Coles, Central Royalty, P.E.I. The church was nicely decorated for the occasion with bouquets of roses, sweet peas, fern and iris. Mrs. Harold Carver, church organist, played the wedding music and accompanied Mrs. John MacRae as she sang, "I'll Walk Beside You," before the ceremony, and "Whither Thou Goest" during the signing of the register.

The pretty young bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street length dress of white silk organza. A tiara of nylon and lace trimmed with pearls and sequins held her shoulder length veil of tulle illusion. She carried a crescent bouquet of red roses. Her only ornament was pearl earrings, gift from the groom.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Grain Is Reaped And Left In Tidy Ranks Of Stooks

"Be if ever so humble, there's no place like home," the long-haired black cat hummed with a smile a while ago, coming to rest on the couch after an outing of the evening which had taken him, we suspected, as far as the gray-gabled mill in the valley below. Doubtless there he picked up an exciting souvenir, a mouse or a squirrel. At any rate, he relaxes now apparently replete and well content on his cushion.

"I'm afraid, Ellen, it's a poor harvest-moon this one will make," James offers, bringing in now to be refrigerated the milk for the breakfast of that calf to which we have a minor claim. "The sky doesn't look too promising. And today—it was no harvest day! Only that the season's getting late we would have put off the cutting. It wasn't actually damp but there was little sun."

This afternoon the one patch of grain grown on this farm was reaped and all left in tidy ranks of stooks on its stubble. "I can imagine what it's like down on the Island now," one of its daughters wrote in a letter of this morning, from her home of years many miles away. "Though I doubt I'm being up to date in my memories!"

SHIRTWAIST

THE SHIRTWAIST, always anxious to be of service, is a success for dress-up wear, especially when the wearer wants to be sure not to be over-dressed. This example of the glorified shift-dress, is fashioned of black silk marquisette, posed over black for the full gathered skirt and over white for the bodice. A wide collar of white linen and neat cuffs to match bestow their share of elegance. The bodice closes with one jeweled button.

Mr. Gerald Coles acted as best man, while Mr. Elton Doucette, Mr. Scott MacPhail were the ushers.

The bride's mother wore a dress of navy blue lace with hat of matching shade and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother chose flowered pale green nylon chiffon over taffeta with white hat and accessories, her corsage was white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Charlottetown Hotel, where the bride's table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake. Grace was given by Rev. C. W. Passey, who also proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom responded.

Miss Lynn Morrow, Halifax, N.S., cousin of the bride and Miss Carol Coles, sister of the groom were in charge of the guest book. Telegrams of good wishes were received and read during the reception from Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Duffett, Toronto, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dunnington, Toronto, Ontario, and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Coles, Toronto, Ont.

For travelling the bride chose a simple dress in tartañ of two shades of blue with matching cape, small white hat and accessories. The young couple will reside in Kitchener, Ontario, where both are employed.
