Literary Notes.

A Way out of the Difficulty.—I think the late Henry Ward Beecher, I was the related and vouched for the following: A large and a small dog happened to start from opposite sides of a narrow at the same time to cross it over a stream on the same plane. They met in the middle. Both came to a stop, for they could not pass each other on the narrow board. The little dog sat on the board, held up his head, and began to whine. The big dog stood a moment, apparently cogitating what to do, when suddenly a thought struck him. He spread his forelegs apart to the outer edges of the board, and his hind legs, and then looked at the little dog, as much as to say, "Now is your time!" Whereupon the little fellow shot through between the big dog's legs and safely reached the other side, wagging his tail with delight and approval of so clever a trick; while the big yellow walked philosophically over to his side, no doubt well satisfied with himself, as he certainly had good reason to be.—
Allen Pringle, in the Popular Science
Monthly.

Bent on Vengeance.—A most remarkable case of bovine intelligence which recently came to my knowledge, and for the truth of which I can vouch, has prompted the writing of this paper. A cow and steer—the latter two to three years old—were the only occupants of the barn yard where the occurrence took place. A baiting of hay was put out to them, the cow taking possession. The steer wished to share it; but the cow, like some higher animals, was selfish and was bent on taking the whole of it, and as often as he would manoeuvre around from side to side to get a bite she would drive him off at the point of her horn. The steer was so persistent that at last the old cow's patience gave way, and making a determined and vicious charge on him, she punished him severely, though he was her own offspring. The steer felt badly hurt, not only in body but evidently in mind as well, and immediately started out of the yard and off down the lane toward the pasture where were the rest of the stock, bellowing vengeance at every step in a language which was unmistakable to the bystander, and which the mother well understood, as she ceased eating and listened intently to the threatening of what was to come. When these died away in the distance she resumed her ration, but with evident apprehension. In due time the steer was seen returning, bringing with him a companion larger and stronger than himself. As they approached, the rumblings of rage and revenge could be again heard, which grew louder as they came nearer.
The cow took the situation at once, and was now terror-stricken. As her assailant rushed into the yard, she dodged them and rushed out at life-and-death speed, and away toward the rest of the stock in the field, with her pursuers close in her track.
—Allen Pringle, in the Popular Science
Monthly.

"The Ivory Gate," by Walter Besant.
Toronto: The National Publishing Company. "The Ivory Gate," by Walter Besant, and published in Canada by the National Publishing Company, is a book that will assuredly make a noise. It has in it a resemblance to the strange case of Dr.
Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, with this difference, that the metamorphosis is not caused by a drug and the change does not make the man a demon or a savage beast, but a lovable philanthropist with a scheme for wiping out poverty and misery. It treats of a mental disease. A prominent London lawyer who had been a great brain worker all his life, finds himself falling into daily reveries lasting for hours. He supposes he is asleep at such times, but his old confidential clerk knows that he goes out and comes in while in these stupors, but does not tell him, fearing it will cause his master to retire from business. An entry is discovered in the bank book showing that the lawyer had paid £720 to one Edmund Gray by check. He knows of no such person, calls his clerks, hunts up the returned check, and pronounces the signature a forgery—remarkably clever, but still forgery. After eight years other forged letters turn up and valuable bonds are removed from the private safe, and on being traced are found to be banked to the credit of Edmund Gray. The old lawyer and his friend are in great excitement over the matter, especially as socialist tracts signed by Gray are found on the lawyer's table, which makes him furious, as he is a believer in the divine right of property. With rare skill Besant carries the matter along, showing that the lawyer in his reveries loses his identity and becomes Edmund Gray, the very antipodes of his real self—genial, generous, a fond dreamer of an ideal world to be brought about by his personal efforts.
The story is a good one—so good that it is hard to lay it down before the finish.

We have received the first number of Whittington's Illustrated Magazine, a monthly journal for the family. Although in the majority of instances the first number of a new publication is generally more or less like its contemporaries already in the field, an exception must be made in the case of Whittington's Magazine. In the matter of letter press and illustrations it is first class, and the names of well-known and popular writers appear on the list of contributors. The articles this month are splendid, and comprise a list of most interesting subjects. A decidedly original feature in this magazine is "Departments," which must be seen and read to have its value appreciated. Published by A. D.
Whittington & Co., Hartford, Conn., $2.50 a year.

One is always sure of Lippincott's Monthly. If ever disappointed in the other magazines, Lippincott's is sure to be found in the pages of Lippincott's. For one thing, the complete story which is included in every number is invariably of the best. In the January number the story is "A Pacific Encounter" by Mary E. Suckney. Besant

Lost His Heart and Money.—Word received from Halifax states that one of the young bloods of that city became so infatuated with a chorus girl of the Baker opera company, recently, that he gave her a $75 diamond ring. Foolish boy!

BOSTON COMEDY CO.—H. Price Webber and the Boston Comedy Co. will open a short season on Monday night next at the St. John Opera house, presenting Bit-tichorn's Born in the Afternoon, and the spectacular drama of the Sea of Ice in the evening.

ENTITLED TO THE BEST.—All are entitled to the best that their money will buy, so every family should have at once, a bottle of the best family remedy, Syrup of Figs, to cleanse the system when coughs or biliousness. For sale in 75c. bottles by all leading druggists.

THE CRISP-CURRIE CASE.—It is probable that this case will come to trial somewhere about Jan. 10th. The conference committee is now awaiting an answer from Mr.
Currie, who has been asked what date will accommodate him.—St. John Sun.

IT is very unwise to allow an apparently simple cold to run too long without attention, as it may lead to serious complications. We would advise anyone troubled with this at present fashionable complaint to call at Johnson's drugstore and get one of the emulsions or cough remedies on sale there.

OF UNSOUND MIND.—A man named John McLean, claiming New Brunswick as his home, is in jail in Bedford, Me., in $1,000 bonds, for passing forged checks. He is thirty years old, and has a wife and four children in Boston. He has worked in Bangor. The checks ranged from $8 to $325. McLean operated in many New Hampshire towns. He is unaccounted in mind.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME.—"When a girl comes to Boston and goes to work at $5 a week and pays $3 for board, $1.75 for room and gives the first week's pay to the one in the employment office who gets her the job, she don't have much left. I would just as soon be in Nova Scotia with a $5 bill as $10 here. The cost of living and rent is very high." So writes a Nova Scotian to the Amherst Press from Boston.

CHRISTMAS SUPPLEMENT.—The Summerside Journal says: THE EXAMINER, Charlottetown, is presenting its subscribers with a very handsomely gotten up Christmas souvenir, in the shape of a profusely illustrated volume of about a hundred pages, filled with stories, poems, etc., appropriate to the holiday season, together with a considerable amount of statistics and other valuable matter, the whole enclosed by a prettily illuminated cover. This shows a good deal of enterprise on the part of our esteemed contemporary, and we take much pleasure in acknowledging receipt of a copy of this souvenir.

STORMY TEMPERANCE MEETING.—A Moncton despatch says: "Rev. J. Eastburn Brown, Reformed Episcopal, raised a little storm at the Sunday afternoon temperance meeting by declaring that the temperance organizations were not doing the work they should be doing. Referring to the Sons of Temperance, he said their meetings were good entertainments and a good place for the young ladies and gentlemen to meet and court. He said he was ashamed of himself as a member, and asked the chairman, also a prominent Son of Temperance, if he was not ashamed too. The chairman dissented from Mr. Brown's views, as also did E. McCarthy, another prominent Son of Temperance.

SUDDEN DEATH.—About ten o'clock last Friday night, Mrs. James Perry (Fidelis) died suddenly from neuralgia of the heart. She had been ailing for a couple of years past, but on this evening was about the house, apparently quite smart. Just previous to her death she was out to the kitchen and talking to other inmates of the house. Returning to the sitting room she complained of a severe pain about her heart, and said she could not stand it, and a remedy was at once procured from a doctor and given her. Immediately thereafter she fell back on the lounge, expiring almost instantly. The deceased was about forty-two years of age, and leaves a husband and three children.—Summerside Journal.
