Dr. Penfield Asks Aid For Arts, Science Development

A plea for greater financial assistance to the development of arts and sciences in Canada on the part of the federal and provincial government "each in its proper field" was expressed in a speech made here last night by the eminent Canadian surgeon, Dr Wilder Penfield.

Delivering the 10th annual Samuel Robertson Memorial Lecture at Prince of Wales College Dr. Penfield said that the public should demand support of research on an ampler scale from their members in Ottawa, and should also press for a national system of scholarships and endowments to educational institutions.

"Such support might bring a new era of intellectual growth, but it would not interfere with the Provinces in the discharge of the responsibilities that are theirs," Dr. Penfield asserted.

In this formula the Provinces themselves must really support the costs of teaching if they would control and direct it, he added.

THE WAY INTO LIFE

"This, for Canada, is the straight gate and the narrow way 'which leadeth unto life'," he said.

He maintained that the climate of Ancient Greece in which the Arts and Sciences flourished could be created in Canada by plan. "In it we would discover, in time, our own leadership and salvation."

Dr. Penfield was introduced by Dr. Frank MacKinnon, Principal of Prince of Wales College and thanked by Dr. J. H. Maloney, president of the Prince Edward Island Medical Association.

Distinguished guests in attendance included His Honor, Lieutenant Governor F. Walter Hyndman, Premier A. W. Matheson and Mrs. Matheson, and Mayor Edwin C. Johnstone and Mrs. Johnstone.

Members of the official party also included Hon. Alex A. MacIsaac Minister of Labor and Welfare, and Mrs. McIsaac, Mrs. Penfield, and the Governor's naval aide, Lieutenant Commander Douglas Saunders and Mrs. Saunders.

The distinguished speaker was guest of honor at a reception held in the College Library following the competition of the address.

SEES DANGER

Dr. Penfield suggested that, through the present system of annual grants to Canadian Universities, the Federal Government would eventually take over control of these institutions.

"It would be far better for education in this nation . . . . that the provinces themselves retain control of the universities", he stated.

"To do so," he continued, they must themselves supply the funds required for annual expenses, and the people must be taxed for it. It was the failure of the Provinces to do this that produced the crisis in university finance.

"Confederation placed the responsibility for education clearly on the Province. Their contributions to institutions of higher learning and to schools must be vastly increased to meet rising costs and the inevitable expansion."

PRIMARY CONCERN

The primary concern of the Provincial governments is to support and direct teaching. The federal government should adopt research as its special field of responsibility, he said.

". . . Let the National Government take our education out of the field of politics. Let them create a Commission, or Commissions, charged: (a) with capitalized grants to educational institutions and research departments, (b) establishment of a national scholarship system effective in every Province, and

(c) strategic aid to research. . .

"But let our Government avoid the evils that will follow central control of the individual and the locality. Leave liberty as it is. Promote free contest and competition. Establish a greater indeyendence of the colleges by endownments.

Increasing the pay of teacher and professor "till it exceeds that of workers who have put less time into the learning of their trade" was the chief responsibility now facing the Provinces Dr. Penfield declared.

"With that, the rewards of public recognition and admiration will return to those who teach, as is their just due, and they will deserve it."

LOCAL BASE

The intellecutal advancement of the Ancient Greeks was based on "preliminary local growth of ideas and skills, during one or many generations, before great heights were reached," Dr. Penfield noted. . . "But the end of it came suddenly with the loss of their freedom and a change inn their way of life."

Changes are coming fast in education, the distinguished surgeon observed.

"If these changes are wisely made," he continued," it is my opinion that Canada, even with her existing resources and native stock, could well create a climate as well suited to intellectual growth as that of Classical Greece.

"Canadian wit, when selected by scholarship support, would be found to be as good as the Greek. I have no doubt.

"We would be different from the other friendly nations of the world, not all at once, but in time, for we would excel in those things that educated men most admire!

RIGHT METHOD NEEDED

"But Canada cannot do this, even though she spends a great deal more money on education, unless she does it in the right way. She will never succeed if she continues to imitate the bad as well as the good in the life and education of the U. S. A. Great Britain and the U.S.S.R.

"It cannot be done by weakening the discipline and diluting the scholarship of the secondary schools as in the United States. It cannot be accomplished by imitating the central control and support of education, in force now in the Soviet Union. The Soviet system makes free competition between multiple semi-independent centers difficult or non-existent.

"It cannot be done by following Great Britain as she moves in the same direction. Her universities are being supported more and more by repeated grants of money from the National Government. Formerly, those institutions were supported from local sources and from the endowments which each university held in its own right.

Cornerstone Of New Baptist Church To Be Laid Sunday

U.S. And Canada Need Better Understanding

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.. Stressing the need for greater understanding between Canada and the United States, W.R. Wright, Director of Public Relations, Canadian National Railways, told a luncheon gathering of St. Petersburg Rotarians yesterday that two countries could not rely on traditional friendship alone.

"The problem", declared Mr. Wright, "Is to find new solutions for new difficulties—and to resist the temptation to whitewash our diferences with platitudes."

It had been said, the speaker went on. That Canadians were maliciously well informed about the United States and Americans were benevolently ignorant of Canada. This was a somewhat exaggerated generalization but contained a germ of truth.

Rev. Eugene Johnson of Langley City, B.C., has just recently returned from Puerto Rico and the West Indies and is currently conducting a series of revival meetings in Calvary Temple, Parkdale every night at 8 p.m. to Nov. 3rd., excepting Mondays and Saturdays.
