

In the Country Lawyer's Office.

He wanted justice. You could see that in his eyes afar off. He didn't want a little bit of justice weighed out in a gingerly manner and done up in coarse brown paper, but he wanted justice by the car load and at wholesale rates.

"Morning." "Morning." "I'm Jim White, sir. Live out by Gray's Corners. Bought Tompkins' farm you know."

"Ah!" "Skinner jines farm with me. His steers get into my corn. I want damages, but he laughs at me. I turn my hogs into his 'tater patch."

"Good! I like a man of spunk." "And he kills one of 'em."

"What!" "He kills a hog worth two dollars."

"You don't say! Well, that man ought to be made to understand that he doesn't own this country. What an outrage! Have you demanded pay."

"Oh, yes, and he said he'd like to shoot me."

"Is it possible! Why, he's a dangerous man, very dangerous."

"I came to ask you if—"

"Why, of course you have the best kind of a case against him, and it is your duty to push it."

"Yes, I want justice, but how—how much will—"

"Oh, just leave me five dollars as a retainer and we'll make Skinner sweat. I haven't heard such an outrage for years. He probably reasons that you are chicken-hearted and afraid of him."

"Well, he'll find that the Whites have as much grit as the Skinners."

"And as much to law with it?" "You bet!"

"That's the talk! We'll make him a very sick man. Your case appeals to me as a citizen as well as a lawyer. Now, we'll secure a warrant as a start-er."

Skinner visits the other lawyer in the same village, and the conversation is about the same. White gets a warrant for Skinner, and Skinner gets a warrant for White.

First year.—Two adjournments, a disagreement, twenty-four days lost time, and a cash expense of $58 to each farmer.

Second year.—Three trials, one disagreement, four adjournments, one appeal, and a cash expense of $150 to each farmer. Time lost, thirty-five days.

Third year.—Two trials, two appeals, two decisions, and two farms pass into the hand of two lawyers.—N. Y. Sun.

A Journalistic Feat.

Henry W. Grady relates the following in Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution:—"Can I venture an incident here that throws an inside light on journalism? At two o'clock on the morning of Gov. Stephens' death, an editor of the Constitution, who, with two stenographers, had prepared the narrative of the night, was with the watchers in the blue room of the mansion. The Constitution had to go to press at 3:30 o'clock to the minute. It was not believed that Mr. Stephens would die before that hour. Consequently the narrative had been written in the present tense. If death should occur before the paper was put on the press, there was perhaps a hundred places in the story where the past tense would have to be substituted. A force of proof-readers sat with the proof before them, every contingent point marked. Thirty printers sat at their desks awaiting orders. The telephone between the mansion and the office was open, and the night editor sat with the 'phone to his ear. At 3:23 o'clock Dr. Steiner, rising from his knees with reverent face, said, 'He is dead! Before the whispered words left the room, the word 'dead' flew along the telephone wires, and reached the listening night editor. Before the watches in the parlor knew that the great soul had taken its flight, a dozen proof-readers were plunging through the slips with swift pencils, thirty printers were clipping the merrings that held the present to the past, and in just seven minutes the press was throwing off the story of the life and death of Georgia's martyr statesman."

Took Her at Her Word.

An Irishman on tramp one day being both hungry and thirsty, stopped at a little cabin on the roadside, and knocked at the door. When the inhabitant (an old woman) answered the door, he asked for a drink. While she was getting it for him, he observed from the door a few scones toasting by the fire. When he got his drink he stepped up to the fire to light his pipe, eyeing the scones keenly. 'What's your name?' asked the old woman. 'John Take-a-scone,' he replied. 'John Take-a-scone,' said the old woman, surprised at the curious name; 'I'll oblige you with pleasure,' said John, and he took a scone and walked out.

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored.

We have recently published a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses. Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts or two postage stamps. The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.
