Comfort One Another.

Comfort one another;
For the way is growing dreary,
The feet are often weary,
And the heart is very sad,
There is heavy burden-bearing,
When it seems that none are caring,
And we half forget that ever we were glad.

Comfort one another;
With the hand-clasp close and tender,
With the sweetness love can render,
And looks of friendly eyes.

Comfort one another;
Do not wait with grace unspoken,
While life's daily bread is broken;
Gentle speech is oft like manna from the skies.

Comfort one another;
There are words of music ringing
Down the ages, sweet as singing
Of the happy choirs above.
Ransomed saint and mighty angel,
Lift the grand, deep-voiced evangel,
Where forever they are praising the eternal love.

Comfort one another;
By the hope of Him who sought us
In our peril—Him who bought us,
Paying with His precious blood;
By the faith that will not alter,
Trusting strength that will not falter,
Leaning on the One divinely good.

Comfort one another;
Let the grave gloom lie beyond you,
While the Spirit's words remind you
Of the home beyond the tomb;
Where no more is pain or parting,
Fever's flush to tear-drop starting,
But the presence of the Lord, and for all His people room.

Imperial Federation.

PARNELL AND GLADSTONE WORKING ON THE SCHEME.

Mr. Parnell's declaration touching the new home rule bill is very important, though whether it is more important than the questions at issue between him and the Times it is too soon to say. The Irish leader has come out as an advocate of what he calls "Imperial Federation." His letter to Mr. Rhodes, whether written immediately after the conference with Mr. Gladstone or not, expresses the result of many conferences. There can be no doubt that Mr. Parnell and Mr. Gladstone are working together. The latter has agreed to devise a scheme for retaining the Irish members in the house of commons, instead of excluding them. But that is only one item in the new programme. The federation idea has been Mr. Gladstone's underlying thought in all his repeated references to separate nationalities within the United Kingdom. Unionists describe this as a scheme for splitting the empire into fragments in order to federate the fragments. Scotland is to have a parliament, Wales a parliament, and Ireland a parliament. The house of commons is to become merely an English parliament, and the new Imperial parliament with colonial delegates is to rise on the ruins of the present constitution. This vast scheme, by far the most revolutionary ever heard of in England, is given to the world in a casual way, half by letter and half by talk, with a third half, as the Irish party would say, eeked out by the guesses of Mr. Parnell's semi-confidants.

Living on the Past.

The Brooklyn Eagle clearly points out the difference between the Republican and Democratic parties when it says that the Republicans are appealing to the people on their record of the past, while the Democratic party are looking to the future. This was so observable in the speeches at a recent Republican ratification meeting in New York that the Eagle was constrained to say:

"To the impartial reader the most suggestive point about the proceedings was the absence of anything resembling a comprehensive discussion of the vital issues before the country. It would have been the part of wisdom, discretion and understandable controversy for the speakers to consider the questions which bear upon the comfort, the happiness and the material welfare of the public. What the average citizen desires to be enlightened upon at the present stage of national existence is not the achievements of parties in the past, but their purposes and policies for the future. Ever since the war Republican stump orators have endeavored to convince their hearers that all the virtue, intelligence and magnanimity on this continent resided in the grand old party of moral ideas; that the millions of men calling themselves Democrats were wholly given over to the ways of darkness; that continued Republican ascendancy meant a steady growth toward the felicity which prevailed in the Garden of Eden before the intrusion of the serpent; that Democratic restoration would mean the destruction of social order and the overthrow of cherished institutions. All this and much more of the same character has been disproved by three years of temperate, honest and efficient administration under Democratic auspices. Instead of conceding the simple truth and addressing themselves to their arguments in the light of reason and common sense, the opera house orators pursue the old familiar strain and refrain, with singular fatuity, from advancing anything new for the consideration of those for whose suffrages they so plaintively appeal.

Looking so much to the past, combined with the blunder they have made on the tariff issue, reveals a conspicuous weakness in the position of the Republican party. No party can long live on its past record, and that is just what the Republican party at present is trying to do.

ADVISE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. [April 1 '88]

Old Soldiers in Canada.

According to late statistics, there are more pensioners in Canada than in any other British colony. When the Imperial forces were here a large number of men took their discharge, either purchasing out of the service or completing their 21 years and leaving with a pension. In many cases they got good situations, the pay of which, together with their pensions, enables them to live comfortably in Canada. It may not be generally known that in order to draw his pension quarterly the pensioner on this side of the Atlantic is bound to reside in Canada, and, therefore, cannot accept occupation in the States. However, in some cases, and with much red-tapism, permission as a special favor has been granted by the secretary of state for war for men to reside in the States and draw their pensions through the British Consul. Others there are who, having secured a good position in New York or elsewhere, commute their pension, receiving four years' pay, and having no further claim on the war office. In case of a man leaving the service at home and stating his intention of residing in Canada to the commissioner at Chelsea, he is given an advance of six months, but if married he must have his wife's consent to the arrangement, and should she remain at home she draws half his pension quarterly. —Montreal Witness.

A City Bankrupt.

A despatch says that property holders of East St. Louis in Missouri will apply this week to have the municipality turned over to a receiver. The taxation is eating up the wealth of the city, and the people are combining for the purpose of relief. The burden-some taxation which is causing so much trouble is due to the enormous debt of the city which, with interest, now amounts to nearly $800,000 with no prospect of a decrease and every indication that it will increase. The indebtedness is now far in excess of charter limits; it is equal to the value of one-fourth of the city, and, in addition to the heavy interest on the same, the city council is now called upon to levy a special tax in conformity with the ruling of the court in the Gundlach case. The eight-hundred-thousand-dollar debt is now due, and if the Gundlach decision, rendered May 9, stands, the creditors of St. Louis can, by mandamus, secure pre-emptory writs for special tax levies sufficient to pay off the debt. This would require a special tax of 18 per cent. on the taxable property within the city limits, and would result in virtual confiscation of the homes of the poorer classes, while the burden would be a heavy one for the wealthy owners of East St. Louis property to carry. The corporations are of the opinion that with a receiver in charge of the city municipal expenses could be largely curtailed, the claim being made that they are now exorbitant beyond reason.

Their First Dinner.

They had just returned from their wedding tour and were to have their first dinner in their own home.

"Well, Percy, dear," she said sweetly, after breakfast, "what shall we have for dinner?"

"Oh, anything you like."

"No, dear; anything you like."

"But I shall like anything you like, my little rosebud."

"And I shall like anything you like, you precious old boy."

"Well, then, what shall we have, dear?"

"Whatever you want, darling."

"But I want to please you, lovey."

"And I want to please you, precious."

"You old darling."

"You blessed old precious."

"But what shall we have?"

"That's for you to say."

"No, for you."

"But I'm so afraid I'll order something you don't like."

"I'll like anything you like, darling."

"Truly, Percy?"

"Truly, my darling."

"Because I'd feel so badly I'd just cry if I had anything you didn't like. Do you like roast beef?"

"Do you?"

"I asked you first, dearie."

"What if I don't care for it?"

"Then we'll never have a pound of it in the house."

"You little darling!"

"But do you like it?"

"Do you?"

"O, Percy, you naughty old boy! How am I ever to get what you like if you go on like this? And I do want to please you."

"Please yourself and you'll be sure to please me."

"Then we'll have the beef."

"If you say so, lovey."

"But I don't say so."

"It shall be just as my own little, lovey-dovey, lifey-wifey says."

"No; just as my treasure boy says."

"What if I say beef?"

"Then I shall say beef, too."

"Well, then, we'll have roast beef!"

"I love roast beef."

"Oh, I'm so glad."

"So am I."

"You old darling!"

"You precious!" —Detroit Free Press.

THE LOBSTER FISHERY.—An Arichat, C. B., despatch of the 13th, says:—"Fishery Overseer Francis Marceau has made it lively of late for lobster packers on Isle Madame, having fined no less than four for violation of the law. The intelligent public highly approve the overseer's conduct in vindicating the law, which in the interest of this valuable fishery cannot be too strictly enforced. It is the opinion of careful observers here that the Government will have to take additional means to save this important fishery from destruction by adopting other measures to have the provisions of the present enactments more fully carried out.
