LINEMAN INJURED — On Saturday afternoon a telephone pole, at Rosebank, on which he was working, broke near the top and caused Seaman Bell of the Island Telephone Company to fall to the pavement and receive injuries including a fractured heel bone. Mr. Earl Smith, the company supervisor, at Summerside had accompanied Mr. Bell to the Rosebank area and took him at once to the Alberton Hospital from where he was later removed to the Prince County Hospital. It is expected that he will not be able to return to work for at least six months.

Late Premier

native Inverness county was spread over the grave, three crashing rifle salutes echoed against two scraggly pines that stood like sentinels on the hilltop and reverberated in nearby glens and dales.

Two trumpeters played "Last Post" and "Reveille," the mourners filed away and the hilltop was left to the dozens of children who had watched the committal service from the edge of the hemlock woods.

"Angus L" would have his funeral that way. He was a simple man with a Scot's love for ceremony.

DRAPED WITH FLAG

The funeral procession moved in the hazy light of a fine spring morning along Halifax's narrow streets to St. Mary's from historic Province House, where the body had lain in state four days, viewed by 85,000 persons.

Scarlet-coated RCMP officers and men slow-marched in the van, their spurs clinking audibly in the quiet. They were followed by members of the three armed forces. Then came the coffin, draped with the Nova Scotia flag.

A young officer carried Mr. Macdonald's First World War medals on a black velvet cushion. The former premier — he was succeeded last Tuesday by Harold Connolly — was an army captain and in the war's last days was shot through the lungs by a rifle bullet.

Young Angus L. Macdonald, a clever lawyer with no political ambitions, followed the bearer of his father's decorations. He was the only chief mourner to attend both the Requiem Mass and the committal service.

INSPIRING LIFE

Archbishop Gerald Berry, who celebrated a Pontifical Requiem Mass, said Mr. Macdonald's death last Tuesday drew a veil "over a life so useful, so beloved, so serviceable and so fit as to inspire many another boy in the small villages of Canada."

Not since the passing of Sir John Thompson, the prime minister of Canada in the reign of another queen, has this old church seen the funeral of one of her sons deceased while in the office of the chief minister of state.

The archbishop referred to the late premier's love for "all things Canadian" and his affection for his Scottish Highland ancestry. His honest, firm opinions in constitutional matters and of his in-born tenacity to maintain for his beloved native province its traditional place as the seed-bed for the ideas that provoked Confederation.

He added, too, that Angus L. Macdonald's dedication to Canada's well-being hastened his death.

Works Minister Robert Winters represented Prime Minister St. Laurent. Also attending were Labor Minister Gregg, Finance Minister Abbott, Trade Minister Howe, Minister Claxton, Hon. Kenneth McLeod, Speaker of the Senate and Lieutenant-Governor D. L. McLaren of New Brunswick.

REFUSED INTERVIEW

Petrov's last-minute request for an interview with his wife was refused in a letter signed by her saying she did not want to see him, it was learned here.

A Russian embassy car brought the comely blonde to Sydney airport. Police struggled to hold back the crowd of several thousand, mostly immigrants from Russia and other Iron-Curtain European countries. But the demonstrators broke through, cuffing and jostling Mrs. Petrov's Russian escorts and shouting "don't let her go."

Mrs. Petrov tried to smile feebly at photographers who met her with a blast of flash bulbs as she stepped from the car. But then she covered her face with her hands and seemed to sag against her three companions—Kisiltain, second secretary at the Russian embassy, and the two Russian couriers who arrived here last week, P. Jervok and V. Karpinsky.

It took half an hour to get the Russians through the angry crowd, which delayed the plane's departure by 23 minutes.

PINNED AGAINST WALL

The couriers, keeping a firm grip on Mrs. Petrov, first started to work their way toward the wrong plane. Then they were pinned against a wall until police freed them.

Mrs. Petrov, seeming half-unconscious at times and on the verge of tears, kept murmuring words of Russian as her escorts half-carried her forward.

As the couriers helped Mrs. Petrov to the top of the gangway leading into the plane, the crowd pushed the gangway away from the plane door. Police pushed it back into position, and Mrs. Petrov vanished inside.

Her suit was rumpled and she had lost a shoe in the half-hour scuffle.

Airport C.W.L. Branch Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the R.C.A.F. sub-division C.W.L. was held on Monday evening. The president, Mrs. Pelland, presided and opened the meeting with the recitation of the League prayer. She then welcomed the new members. There were twenty-six ladies present.

After the roll call of officers, the secretary and treasurer gave their reports. Committee reports: Mrs. Skafie, visiting and welfare reported one card had been sent; Mrs. Longaphie, library convener turned in a sum of money from sale of religious books and other articles.

Owing to the transfer of Mrs. Devine, the Altar Committee will now have Mrs. B. Smith in charge. Mrs. Smith asked that two new cloths be purchased for the Altar tables.

Letters of correspondence were then read by the secretary, Mrs. Gleason. These were two "thank you" notes; resignation of Mrs. Devine; a letter re provincial immunization clinics; letter from Father Walsh of the Sacred Heart, Kensington, re social service; letter from Catherine Praught re the retreat at Notre Dame Academy; from Dorothy Cullen of the Catholic Girl's Scholarship Association and also a letter from Scarborough Missions.

Committees were then appointed to handle the tea tables, sewing tables, baked goods tables and country dance for the coming year. The meeting was then adjourned.

Australian Police

asked other countries along the route to offer her haven if advised by the plane's crew to do so. The plane, a BOAC Constellation, was scheduled to stop at Jakarta, Singapore, Calcutta, Karachi and Beirut before arriving in Zurich, Switzerland, Thursday.

Official reports had said Australian security officers boarded the plane at Sydney to radio regular messages back to the government.

At a press conference in the Russian embassy last week, Mrs. Petrov said she did not want to stay with her husband and accused Australian officials of kidnapping him. Petrov, said to have been head of a Russian spy network in Australia, confessed his activities to the government, turned over hundreds of documents as evidence and asked to stay in Australia.

sides of the gangway and struck the Russian escorts with their hands as the three men climbed into the plane. Karpinsky was punched and kicked. Another blow knocked off Kisiltain's hat. One man spit in a courier's face.

At the top of the gangway one of the Russians turned and shook his fist at the shouting crowd.

MENZIES GETS REPORT

Accounts of the outbreak were telephoned at once to Menzies. Security officers reported Mrs. Petrov had shown no signs of unwillingness to leave and any future change of mind seemed "extremely unlikely." Menzies said security men had accompanied her up the gangway.

But several Russian-speaking eyewitnesses said they heard the harried woman say she wanted to stay in Australia. Their declarations were taken down by Canberra's justice of the peace, C. V. Rowell, and by W. C. Wentworth, Liberal member of the federal Parliament, who were at the airport before the plane left.

One such statement, by N. P. Hakkoff of Sydney, said Mrs. Petrov "screamed about half way up the plank but someone put his hand over her mouth and forced her head down."

"I heard her say in Russian 'I don't want to go,'" Hakkoff's statement declared.

Soil Conservation National Problem Says Dr. Archibald

OTTAWA, (CP)—The proper use of Canada's soil should concern every Canadian, and the country's foremost agricultural experts believe.

Dr. E. S. Archibald, retired director of the federal experimental farms service, said: "Canadian soils, properly fed, carefully and scientifically cultivated, are without doubt capable of producing many times our present production for untold generations to come."

Dr. Archibald, writing in the current issue of the bi-monthly magazine of the Agriculture Institute of Canada, urged support of an overall understanding on soil conservation between the federal and provincial governments.

"Land is entirely a national problem, involving the welfare of today and tomorrow," he said. "We do not have to make the mistakes that have been made in ancient countries where abuses of land through deforestation and over-cropping have created poverty and starvation."

While the provinces have full responsibility for their natural resources, the federal government does much of the research.

"When tragedy occurs, it becomes federal." Thus there was federal aid during Prairie drought and for reclamation of Maritime soil being lost to the sea.

Dr. Archibald took an optimistic view of the future of Canadian agriculture. Improved methods should bring greater production.

"Surpluses No Worry" "It is true that the rural population may not increase, or may even decrease, with higher mechanization of both crop production and livestock production. But this is no great tragedy as long as our land is properly protected.

"The writer is not at all worried as to over-production in good years, if reserves of foods are properly preserved for bad years, which are certain to occur, or are properly distributed through trade channels to countries which are continuously in need of import foods.

"Surplus production, however, which would induce carelessness in handling our soils and livestock, which would stimulate waste, must be carefully avoided."

SPRING ROTATION OF 25TH CANADIAN BRIGADE NOW ALMOST COMPLETED

Let's Talk It Over

Even if we leave out the evil effects on youth of reading crime comics, the case against the comic book still seems to be a pretty good one. At best, they convey useful information to the juvenile mind, but this information is in capsule form, and not arrayed in the splendid imagery and glorious word pictures of our literary geniuses of this and former ages. The readers of comics may be stupefied with facts about their world, but they are being deprived of the pleasure in which people of Shakespeare's lineage have always revelled, of the stimulating march and rhythm of the English language dressed in its regal robes.

It is much the same as giving us our meals in capsule form, something which we are confident the human race will never stand for. It is true, we eat to live, but it is also true, to a certain limited extent, that we live to eat, as we live to experience other pleasurable routines that a full life has in store for us. That is why reducing formulas are so hard to follow. Much of the pleasure of eating comes from the attractive, mouth-watering forms in which our iron, calcium, vitamins and heaven help us, our calories are served up to us. In the same way in literature, we often derive less pleasure from the information the writer is giving us than from the delightful way he is presenting it.

We seem to be fighting a losing battle against the comics. Each succeeding generation concerns itself less with the reading of good books. Probably our 60-mile an hour age has something to do with it. Certainly telling the pupil he must read this and that is not enough. Forbidding the comics to a child simply adds to the flavor of stolen sweets to them. Of course, the well-disciplined child knows that "must" is an inescapable part of his life, and "must" very often falls when free volition plus interest succeeds. It might be that a greater emphasis on literary work in schools might help to counteract the comics. A constructive literary program is difficult for the ordinary teacher to carry out, however. It should be well-thought out by a competent committee and passed on to the teachers. It would have to be a happy mixture of independent reading by the pupils, and teacher guidance.

Two TV Sets in Summerside

Two television sets are now in operation at Summerside and reception from the Saint John station is reported to be quite satisfactory.

The first set in Summerside was installed in his home by "Sonny" Huestler, radio technician at CJRW and the second set was installed by Mr. W. E. MacCauley at MacCauley's Furniture Store, which he operates.

Both sets have 21-inch screens. The 40-foot antenna located on the roof of the furniture store was raised along the slant of the roof and was placed on several guy wires. In erecting the antenna for his "Sonny" cut a hole in the roof and put the sections together as they were being raised. Guy wires complete the job of holding the antennas firmly in position.

Other sets in Prince County, as previously reported, are located in Bedeque, O'Leary, and Alberton.

IN KOREA, (CP)—The spring rotation of the 25th Canadian Infantry brigade, involving more than 8,000 troops, is nearly complete.

During earlier week-end the 4th Battalion, Canadian Guards, replaced the 3rd battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, in the Canadian sector along the truce zone.

Late last month, the 2nd battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, succeeded the 3rd battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment. The 2nd battalion, Guards, replaced the 3rd battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry last November and is not due home until this fall.

The train bringing the guards from a west coast Korean port to the Canadian sector pulled into a siding at one point to permit a train carrying the departing "Van Doo's" to pass. The Royal 22nd left by the same troopship which had brought the guards and smaller units to Korea and is due at Seattle, Wash., about May 6.

Six guardsmen were taken by ambulance to hospital in Seoul. They contracted mumps during the three-week voyage from Seattle. Medical officers said they will be able to rejoin their battalion in a few days.

Other elements arriving in Korea with the guards were No. 3 transport company, Royal Canadian Army Service Corps; 3rd field ambulance, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps; 42nd infantry workshop, Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers.

Still to come in two more ships are the 3rd Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery—its advance party arrived with the guards—and "D" Squadron, Royal Canadian Dragoons.

Even the brigade commander is to be rotated. Brig. F. A. Clift of Melfort, Sask., and Saskatoon, soon will succeed Brig. J. V. Allard of Montreal.

Gangway Count

Swiss and Polish members of the United Nations neutral armistice commission counted the guards as they filed down the ramp. Under the Korean truce terms, forces cannot be built up beyond the numbers in the country at the time the armistice took effect July 27.

Highly Esteemed Resident Of Tignish Dies

An elderly and highly esteemed resident of Tignish, Mrs. Thaddeus Perry, died at her home Monday evening, April 18th after a brief illness. Mrs. Perry, the former Mary Barbara Perry, was born at Palmer Road in 1874. She was the daughter of the late Captain and Mrs. Ernest Perry. Mrs. Perry was a very talented musician and for a number of years prior to her marriage she was organist of the Immaculate Conception Church, Palmer Road. In the year 1906 she married Thaddeus Perry of Tignish and together they took an active part in the community life of their day. Mrs. Perry was of an outstandingly cheerful disposition always even in time of sorrow and difficulty seeing the sunny side of life. Her home was a place where friends and relatives young and old loved to come for she was a charming hostess and always extended a joyful welcome to her many friends. She continued active and industrious and was not confined to bed until a week before she passed away.

During her last illness she was frequently visited by her pastor, Rev. J. A. MacDonald, who administered to her the last rites of the church.

Besides her husband she is survived by three sons, Eugene C. Perry of Tignish, and Allyn and William Perry in Boston, Mass. one son, Joseph, predeceased her. Also surviving are two step daughters, Jane, Mrs. Joseph Bernard, Vancouver, B.C.; and Alvina, Mrs. Thomas Gallant, Rumford, Maine; two sisters and one brother, Matilda, Mrs. Ralph Littlefield, York Harbour, Maine; Anne, Mrs. Aea Deane, Boston, Mass.; and William Perry of Palmer Road, P.E.I. Several grandchildren also survive.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning April 21st, from her home to the church of St. Simon and St. Jude, Tignish, where Requiem High Mass will be sung. Interment will be in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Mrs. Orville Phillips and two children of Alberton, motored to Knutsford to visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woodside.

The friends of Arthur Cornish are glad to know that he is improving every day since his operation for tonsils in the P. C. Hospital Summerside.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Palmer of Kensington, were visitors to the western part of Prince recently.

The eldest man in Springfield West, Mr. James MacDougall celebrated his 94th birthday on Wednesday. In spite of his age, he is well and takes a great interest in all community activities. He received gifts and congratulations from near and far. His wife also celebrated her birthday at this time as there was just a few days in the difference of the dates. Their daughters, Mrs. Reggie Shaw, Mrs. Charlie MacWilliams, West Cape, and Mrs. Kenneth Towle of Walpole, Mass. were present for this occasion. The members of the Springfield Women's Institute presented this grand couple with large boxes of chocolates and Mrs. Stirling Frizzell presented them with a nice birthday cake.

On Sunday night the male choir took charge of the music in the United Church in O'Leary. The organist was Mrs. J. M. MacWilliams.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Palmer accompanied by Rankin MacKinnon and Lloyd Jelley motored to Charlottetown on Tuesday, to attend the play-off of the Crokinole team.

Mrs. Pearl Craig, one of the teachers of the O'Leary High School, has gone to take care of her sister who is sick and Mrs. Ted Sabine is the supplying teacher for the time.

The many friends of Mrs. Jabez MacDougall are sorry to hear that she is on the sick list and all hope for her speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Johnstone, O'Leary, motored to Bloomfield and were visitors to the home of Mrs. Johnstone's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeremia Dalton in Coleman.

HERNE BAY, England, (CP)—There aren't enough modest people around to make bathing huts pay in this Kent seaside town, so the council is closing them.
