A REMINDER TO EMPLOYERS

- that graduation time at Canadian Universities is fast approaching

The demand for university graduates is brisk this year due to the impact of defence production on an already buoyant economy. In addition, the number of graduates seeking employment is smaller than during the past two years.

Employers who have not yet placed their orders with the Executive and Professional Division of the National Employment Service would be advised to do so without delay.

The National Employment Service provides the means of bringing together graduates and employers often separated by long distances. N. E. S. officers are experienced in screening applicants according to your needs.

Employers may also be able to find the part-time employees they need from among the several thousand undergraduates now seeking summer employment by calling their local Employment Office.
