REMEMBER PLEASE!

The demand for the Scriptures was never greater than now.
The costs of production have more than doubled since 1939.
A dollar does not do the work it used to do.
The income of the Bible Society must be adjusted to these conditions.
So—
If more could give a little And all could give a little more—
It can be done!
Share in this great work by making a contribution to the Prince Edward Island Auxiliary British and Foreign Bible Society, with its Bible House at 100 Fitzroy Street, Charlottetown.

EASY COMBINATION—Watering stock in the field is an easy task with the set-up shown above. Trailer-mounted watering tank and portable waterers, mounted on sleds, make it possible to carry water to the most remote areas of the farm.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear Father and Mother, Mr. and Mrs.
John A. Brown, Graham's Road, who passed away July 16th, 1941 and July 13th, 1945.
Deep in our hearts you Memories are kept
We loved you too dearly to ever forget.
Lovingly remembered by Sons and Daughters.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of John Richard Spence, age 14, who passed away July 17, 1951.
You left us a beautiful memory,
A sorrow too great to be told,
But to us who have loved you,
Your memory will never grow old.
Sadly missed by Father, Mother, June and Shirley.

Card Of Thanks

I wish to express my sincere thanks to Drs. Genchuff, Stewart, Creechman, and Found; to the nurses and staff of the Provincial Sanatorium, Charlottetown; to the clergy and members of the Anglican Church; to those who sent me flowers, letters, and cards, and also those who visited me and brought me gifts and treats during my stay at the Provincial Sanatorium. Your kindness is deeply appreciated.
Mrs. Claude Yeo
Port Hill.

Thoughts For Our Time

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan (Copyright)
SELF-SACRIFICE NEEDED

One of the more notable aspects of the psychology of the present generation is its lack of response to symbolic values. As a case in point one might consider the immemorial human custom of exchanging gifts.

Apart from the bribe, which is a parody of gift-giving, the source of this ingenious custom is the attempt to make translucent the opacity that exists between man and man where there is question of essentially imperceptible attitudes such as love, admiration, respect, gratitude and the like.
The perceptible article that exchanges hands in the phenomenon of gift-giving is a symbol of these imperceptible internal attitudes.

In less sophisticated cultures than our own, when one man gives another man a gift, the material article which is given is freighted with symbolic spiritual values. To these values the recipient is capable of responding. It matters little whether the gift is great or little in intrinsic value. What matters is its value to the giver, and that the parting with it involves some self-sacrifice on his part. It is this which gives rise to the symbolic values which attach to the tangible gift.

At the present time the professional advertisers, who are by no means unaware of the psychology of their potential buying public, see to it that they instruct us as to what constitutes the "ideal gift" for weddings, anniversaries, graduations, and the like. The "ideal gift" is sold by the thousands, and thus loses much of its ideal quality. It fails to take into consideration the personal uniqueness of the recipient of the gift, and the unique spiritual relationship that exists between the donor and the recipient of the gift. Such a gift lacks that personal quality which should symbolize the unduplicated love, admiration and respect which the giver has for the receiver.

Very often, too, the recipient of the gift decides for himself what he wants and informs the parent, or a admirer, of his wishes. By so doing he has effectively excluded a great portion of the symbolic value of the gift as an undue and spontaneous act of self-sacrifice on the part of the donor, in favor of the character of contract fulfillment, rather than the free expression of love which gift-giving, by its very nature, demands.

It is also subject to question whether a useful gift is the best gift. There are few who would not agree that flowers are more appropriate on Mother's Day than appons. Flowers, though completely

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

Mrs. Wesley Smith of North Rustico, writes that one of her neighbors owns a cat which is now in his 27th year. "And that," she writes, "beats the Cornwall pussy by several years."

Indeed it does, Mrs. Smith. The Cornwall tabby (now deceased) lived to be 17. Paddy, of Rustico, has seen ten years more of life, and no doubt has a longer list of rats and mice chalked up to his credit.

Down California way they have a 10-week-old baby that can walk with just a little help. Susan Elaine Davey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Davey, can sit upright and take a few steps by holding onto her mother's hand.

"Susan is one baby in a million — as rare as quinquaplets," said her doctor Wilfred M. Mitchell, psychologist at the college of the Pacific.

Did you know that President Eisenhower reads regularly nine daily newspapers to keep up with the latest news? He also gets a daily one-page digest of the news. What some readers of the news paper forget is that most news, except local state news, comes through the Associated Press, the largest news gathering agency on earth.

Bull fighting in Spain is on the wane. Soccer now draws the big gate, 80,000 against a mere 25,000 seats to see a bull fight.

Strike idleness in the U. S. in 1953 cost approximately 27,000,000 man days while 59,100,000 man days were lost in 1952.

The wife of the United States President has given her inaugural gift to the Smithsonian Institute.
She is the only president's wife to do so while still in the White House.

The best book of the year to come out of Russia is a cookbook published by the Russian government.

The name Smith is generally regarded as the most prevalent name among English-speaking people. In most telephone directories, it yields first place only to Browns and Johnsons, but in a national survey, the Smith's finished well ahead of the others.

Families bear the name of Smith because one of their ancestors, centuries ago, was an Anglo-Saxon worker at a forge — a smithy.

It is of passing interest to note that at one time in Europe only the Christian name was given. This worked out well enough in the ordinary course of events, but on such occasions as baptism and marriage, for example, the name of the father was hardly sufficient to establish his identity as an individual. He could not be chalked down as merely John, for there were scads of Johns in his particular parish or village. He could not be merely John, son of John, as was often the case among the Scottish folk of this island, for there were perhaps half a dozen other John sons on the list. The clerk who was preparing the records therefore added certain descriptive words to his single name.
"Where was his place of residence?" Near the woods on the edge of the village. The clerk made a jotting. "Where did he work?" Near the ford that crossed the river. "What kind of work did he do?" Blacksmith? So the clerk would record the fellow as follows:
"John at woods a ford le smithy."

As the years passed he acquired the name of John Atwood, or John Smith. See how the name originated? That's what comes of having town clerks, parish priests, and tax collectors.

If you would take the trouble of going through dusty records, almost illegible papers, studying and grouping primitive English family names, as I have, you would have found that most of them fall into one of four categories, which are:
(1) Locational, which means the name of the village, a feature of landscape, or other topographical aspects of the name bearer's environment.
(2) Occupational, which covers a multitude of handicrafts in villages or small towns, now obsolete.
(3) Patronymic, which means the name of the man's sire.
(4) Descriptive, which covers appearance, complexion, size, eccentricity, and nicknames.
Thus it may be seen from the above brief notes that family names come to us through a slow process of social evolution.

But to get back to the Smiths.
In the New York Public Library there is an entire book of Smithiana — lore, legends, anecdotes, and what not. The title of this Smithy book is "People Named Smith." It was published in 1950 by H. Allen Smith. For another book on the Smiths read, "The Story of Our Names" by E. C.
Smith, a Chicago lawyer.

To enter the tower of London after it is locked up for the day one would have to know the secret password and it is changed each night and sent to the Queen each day.

Did you know that there is a foot of space between each minute marked on the face of Big Ben, London's famous clock? The Roman Numerals are two feet in height and its minute hand is 14 feet long!

Have you ever stopped to reckon the number of ancestors you could chalk up on your family tree? No.
Well, let us start out with your father and mother. That, of course, is two; then our four grandparents, eight great-grandparents, and so on back. The theoretical number of your ancestors 20 generations back would add up to over a million, or 1,048,576, to be more specific.

Twenty generations represent, according to the rate of increase of modern time, about 700 years, according to the rate of increase of olden times, about 400 years as a minimum. These figures would apply to the series of generations represented by first born males; for first born females the respective numbers would be about 500 years and 350 years. But if we reckon the actual descent of families, including persons later born, we might assume that 20 generations in Europe would represent from 800 to 900 years ago among primitive people a little
