ELLEN'S DIARY

Anglers Came By To Try Their Luck With Trout

Toward last autumn when the days drew in and breakfasts and suppers on the farms came by lamplight, and a bareness obtained in yards, that in summer seasons had been so full, we thought when we bade Au Revoir to the little song-parrows it would be a long time before we should be privileged to welcome their return. There would be winds cold about the eaves, rings of frost on the panes, snow fall and drifts along the valley. Winter would spread a blanket deep and white before they would sweeten the summer hours. It was long to look ahead, but in this hindsight, we know that the time spent fast away. There was crunch of frosty steps. The snowfall we had, and white drifts. There was bareness without our feathered guests limited. But against this, to lend the season wings, were the charms of it we enjoy: the beauty and serenity of the winter landscape, the content of sheltering roofs, the comforting smokes of the hearthfires, the coziness indoors — and a work to do, and works done. This morning when all was well with the springtime, when April smiled, mildly and one was aware of an increased number of feathered visitors about, our song-parrows came back to the vine which climbs to an eave. When the spring warmth and the sun's smile is caressing and encouraging, maybe as we mix our leaves, or iron the pieces of wash, or attend to like chores of the housework, we shall hear in the silence obtaining, the sweet notes of their song. Until tomorrow — Diary — Good — night...

MARY HAWORTH

Former Patients Claim Criminals Treated Better

Dear Mary Haworth: Call me bitter if you like. But I believe hardened criminals, guilty of serious crimes, are better treated, with offers of sympathy and rehabilitation, than a religious law-abiding citizen whose only fault was inability to withstand the crushing pressures of society, resulting in a nervous breakdown. Where does this otherwise respectable citizen, a college graduate and a skilled worker, get help in finding a self-sustaining job, following his complete recovery (certified by a doctor) from his breakdown? The Veterans Administration can offer no guidance or help. United States Employment Services has taken his name but "Nothing is available."

Who will help this person? He doesn't want a handout; he wants a job. The situation is getting desperate and without a proper answer could very well prove disastrous. Please help! I ask you in the Lord's name. Sincerely, F.R.

Dear F.R.: According to the answers I've turned up, in the course of a day spent on the telephone, checking with persons and organizations devoted to the rehabilitation of mental patients, there is a fair amount of first-rate guidance and help of the kind you want, close at hand in your own city.

Maybe you've seen, on billboards, in magazines, on TV screens, the captivating advertisement for a certain brand of cigarette, the punch-line of which is: "I'd rather fight than switch." The ad is illustrated with the smiling face of a man or a girl with a black eye.

It occurs to me that maybe you would rather gripe and grumble and defeat yourself and blame others for your failure to get a job, than actually go looking in the right places, where pertinent job-finding services are available to you.

I am told, for example, that if you have marketable skills and are ready to work (ready by the doctor's definition and your own disposition) then you are eligible for systematic job-finding help from the local office of the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation (1531 H Street Northwest, EX-626, 3-2825, in downtown Washington, D.C.)

The Department of Vocational Rehabilitation is a federal program, operating nationwide, with branches in every state in the union, many headquartered in the state capitals, others fanning out into other areas, heavily populated or hospital- or center.

A staff of eight counselors serves the branch Department of Vocational Rehabilitation affilated with St. Elizabeth's hospital for mental patients in Washington D.C. These experts report a routinely successful record in securing job placement and job advancement for cooperative patients and former patients who have a realistic sense of their marketable skills.

Also, in Washington D.C., a group of men and women organized as the Anchor Club, picniced at the Catholic community center, has teamed up with Rev. John Kuhn as their leader, to maintain a "Halfway House" of hospitality and practical helpfulness for mental patients who are returning to society. The house is open to members and guests on weekend afternoons, Saturdays and Sundays, from 1 to 7 p.m.; telephone LA 6-6317.

And as of last month, the D. C. Mental Health Association is moving $50,000 closer to its goal of providing a Social Rehabilitation Center for mental patients in the nation's capital. These funds were raised at a gala event presided over by Mrs. William Witz, wife of the Secretary of Labor.

So you see you aren't nearly the forgotten man you claim to be. Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write to her in care of The Guardian.

General Council Highlights Outlined At Special Service

Taking his text from Acts 15: 6 "and the Apostles and elders came together to consider of this matter," which he said possibly recorded the first meeting of the church, Dr. C. R. Webber of Trinity United Church, Summerside, addressed a large congregation on Sunday night at Kensington United Church.

The service was the Thanksgiving of the United Church Women, and was conducted by Mrs. Harold Palmer and Mrs. Philip MacInnis. The Intermediate choir led in the singing of the congregational hymns and rendered two anthems, "God made the Day" and "O Lord, most Holy," with Gordon Murray at the organ.

Dr. Webber gave a most interesting talk on some of the highlights of the 21st General Council of the United Church of Canada, held in 1964 for the first time in Newfoundland. He said the General Council is the highest court in the United Church, and meets regularly "that men may be able to consider the changing needs of the church." The General Council is trying to do what the apostles did long ago, keep the church relative to the times.

The minister stated that women are taking a greater part than ever before in the General Council both as lay women and as ministers. The wonderful welcome given the general Council by the province and by the city of St. John's where the meetings were held, was deeply appreciated by all who attended, the speaker said.

Following the service, Dr. Webber showed slides of many beautiful scenes in Newfoundland, taken by him and Mrs. Webber while in that province to attend the council meetings.

The minister, Rev. L. M. Murray, made the announcements, thanked the speaker and pronounced benediction. Mrs. Frank MacEwen, Mrs. Duncan Pickers, Mrs. Wilford MacEwen and Mrs. W. S. Latta ushered and received the offering.

Once Unknown, Girl Now Weaves Original Fabrics

By PEGGY MASSIN PARIS (Reuters) — Three years ago, an unknown French girl sat knitting in her attic flat near Paris' famous food-market, Les Halles.

ting and the surface interest of woven fabric CONTACTED CHANEL. Enthusiastic friends urged her to show her ideas to a Paris couturier. Malhia recalls: "I didn't know a single person in the fashion business, but like so many millions of other women, I revered the name of Chanel. So I telephoned the house."

Today, the same girl — Michelle Sorano, better known by her trade name of Malhia — designs and weaves original, hand-made fabrics for Chanel, Givenchy, Balenciaga, and other well-known Paris couturiers.

She was discovered by Chanel at a time when her production was limited to one yard a day, woven on a single small knitting machine.

Now, she employs eight expert weavers to fill the increasing number of orders for rich tweeds and textured woollen fabrics.

Malhia, a 27-year-old former actress who played small parts on the stage and radio, purchased a knitting machine in 1962 to add a few sweaters to her modest wardrobe.

Once she had learned to operate the machine she began experimenting with various stitches and different types of woollen threads. One day, she discovered an unusual weave with the lateral stretch of knit-

Two patterns were chosen, to be delivered in four days' time. Malhia raced back to her knitting machine and worked night and day to fill the order.

Malhia's fascinating weaves and textures are works of art — and proportionately expensive. Although she has no formal textile or design training, she does not find it difficult to evolve new ideas.

Scott, Summerside, spent the Easter holidays with Mrs. MacDonald's mother, Mrs. John Bell, Murray Harbour and Cpl. MacDonald's parents in Wood Islands.

Betty Thibedeau has returned to her home in Ebbesfort after spending some time in Montreal.

Ralph Lord, telephone agent at Central Bedeque, accompanied by his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Monty Gardiner, visited their brother Albert Lord and family in Sydney, N.S., for the Easter holidays.

The next meeting will be held on May 10th, when Mrs. O. Johnson will give the opening poem, and Mrs. Ernest Johnson and Mrs. George Henderson will take over the program. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gaudet and daughter, Catherine, have returned to their home in DeBlois, after spending the winter months in Danvers, Mass.

NEW CHURCH TO GO UP
The Norwegian Seamen's Church in New Orleans, La., has begun a $250,000 drive for a new church. The old building is too run-down to repair.

Mrs. Hector Leard of Central Bedeque spent the Easter holiday at the home of her sister, and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Mahoney of Halifax, N.S. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Willard Leard and daughter Kelly of Borden.
