Thriving Industries at Truro.

THE NATIONAL POLICY AND CHEAP GOODS.

A reporter of the Halifax Herald has been visiting the manufacturing establishments at Truro. He found them all in a flourishing condition. "Clish & Crowe's Foundry" is doing three times the business it ever did before. "The Canada Peg Factory" is now supplying the Quebec, Montreal and Toronto markets, which were formerly supplied by the United States, employs thrice the number of men it did two years ago, is doing a splendid business, and is putting in $3000 worth of additional machinery. W. E. McRobert & Sons, Furniture Warehouses, have had a great run this season.

"What has been the average increase in the price of furniture since the National Policy came into operation?" asked the reporter of one of the partners.
"Increase?" he said, in reply, somewhat astonished at the question, "there has been no increase—not in our establishment, at least. The National Policy has induced us to pay special attention to certain lines, now very generally in demand, and the large sales we have had for these articles have enabled us very materially to reduce the prices. For instance: Parlor suites, which we are now selling for $85, we sold under the old tariff for $110. (Having purchased a suite from the Doctor in the fall of 1877, at the latter figure, which he now sells at $25 less, this statement was particularly convincing.) Lounges which then brought $16 50, now sell for $14 50; sofas which we then sold at $6, we now sell for $5, and so on all through the list. The reason of this decrease in price is that under the new tariff we make a specialty of the manufacture of these articles, and the sale of large quantities enables us to turn them out at much smaller prices than formerly."

"That is a pretty effective reply to those people who declared that protection would raise the price of everything," I remarked.
"About as effective as anything that I can imagine," he replied.
"How does the competition of the Upper Provinces effect your business?"
"Very little. We are not among those who cry for 'protection against Canada.' We prefer to compete with them. Indeed we are competing with them so successfully that we are driving them—slowly but surely—out of the Maritime Provinces market. Of course this cannot be done in a day or two, but we are confident of doing it before long. Take the item of sofas, for instance. Cheap sofas are an article that two years ago I could not believe we could compete with the Toronto, London and Hamilton makers in. But we made the experiment; we succeeded; there was a difference of fifty cents freight in our favor, and now there are very few Ontario sofas coming into this Province. And more than that, our customers tell us that they prefer the 'home made.'"

"In the face of these facts, Doctor, how do you account for the fact that some apparently intelligent people are found to stand up and say that the National Policy is 'ruining the country,' and that the only kind of protection Nova Scotia wants, is protection against the Upper Provinces?"
"I cannot understand how any honest man can refuse to admit that there has been a great change for the better since the people of this country adopted the National Policy, or how any man can refuse to credit the present prosperous state of the country to that policy. Of course there has been a general revival of business, but that has been caused very largely by the change of tariff. Although Nova Scotia has received a great impulse from the National Policy, yet she is a good way behind in the competitive race, because, as I said some time ago in a letter to the Sun, Ontario is far ahead of us in manufacturing. She has the most improved machinery and experienced and skilful workmen, and is now enabled to keep pace with her enterprising neighbor Uncle Sam, and consequently so much ahead of us, for the simple reason that a quarter of a century ago, she adopted a protective tariff, and became enabled thereby to establish immense manufacturing industries just along the border line, so that now when the new National Policy has practically driven the Americans out of our markets, she is able to respond to the increased demand suddenly sprung upon her; while Nova Scotia was content to sit quietly at rest with her 6 1/2 and 10 per cent. tariffs instead of rising to the necessity of the times and being true to her natural position as a manufacturing province, by adopting a policy which would have placed her far ahead in the race of development. Thus we are just now arriving at where Ontario started from a quarter of a century since. She would, therefore, naturally have an advantage over us. Had we followed Ontario in adopting protection about the year 1855, we should have been far ahead of her now. But even as it is, we shall overtake her, for, with our acknowledged greater manufacturing facilities, we cannot long remain in the rear. If our people would turn their attention to manufacturing in earnest, Ontario would soon be crying out for protection against Nova Scotia."

Death of a Literary Lady.

A London despatch announces the death of Estella Anna Lewis, known to the literary world under the nom de plume of "Stella," widow of Sydney B. Lewis, of Brooklyn, and an intimate friend of Edgar Allan Poe, was found dead in her bed this morning at her house in Bedford place. The cause of her death is supposed to be neuralgia. One of her latest efforts was a series of sonnets to Poe, defending his name from detractors. Her tragedy, "Sappho," which is in its seventh edition, has just been translated into modern Greek and performed at Athens. "Stella" was the only daughter of Mr. R. del Monte, a rich Maryland planter, and on one side she claimed descent from a noble family at Navarre and on the other from the Butlers, of Wyoming.

Speculation about President Garfield's Cabinet.

Our Washington correspondent writes:—
"Of President Garfield's Cabinet and line of policy much is being said which is news to that gentleman, I doubt not. If, however, what everybody believes must be true, it is probable that the next President entertains the same kindly feeling for the people of all sections with which President Hayes commenced his administration, and as he has vastly more acquaintance with public men, North and South, and the knowledge of government affairs which comes from long participation in them, as a leader, it is not unreasonable to hope that he will be more successful than Mr. Hayes in carrying out his plans. General Garfield has as many friends and admirers in Washington, as has any other public man of his party."

The Work of Fiends.

ATTEMPTS AT RAILROAD WRECKING ON THE EASTERN EXTENSION.

(From the Antigonish Casket.)
A few miles this side of the Strait of Canso, obstructions were on two or three occasions, during the past fortnight, thrown on the railroad track, with the obvious purpose of wrecking the train. Fortunately, no injury resulted. The officials on board saw the obstacles in time to avert the danger. Smart men have been deputed to watch over the road; and it is hoped they will succeed in bringing the guilty to justice. After the above had been put in type we received information that "on the evening of the 19th inst., a short distance east of West River, two bullets were fired into a passing engine, fortunately only breaking the head-light glass and otherwise damaging it. But had the balls gone a very little on either side they would most probably have killed or seriously injured the engine driver or fireman or both."

(From the Windsor Mail.)
On Saturday evening, a short time before the express from Annapolis was due, a plank and Railway sleeper were found across the track near the embankment east of Avonport Station, and were removed just in time to save the express from being thrown over the embankment. It is not known who the scoundrel is that perpetrated the deed, but if found he should be severely dealt with.

THE "DOMESTIC MONTHLY" FOR DECEMBER.
—The Domestic Monthly for December keeps step with the season, and pays special attention to midwinter fashions. Cloaks and cold weather furnishings of every kind are laid before the reader, and even the conventional toilettes to be worn to matinees and picture-exhibitions are dwelt upon. The newest regulations for wedding dresses come in, too, this month, and an article called "Another Reign of Laces" will show ladies what has happened since laces were a rage before. Those interested in children's fashions will be surprised by the fancies which have recently encroached upon girl's shoes as well as their wraps and dresses; while there are mothers everywhere who may gather from "Boys' Suits" just what will best clothe, not the coming man, but the small man already here. Furs form a special chapter in the "Domestic Monthly" for December; the substitution of spotted furs for the soft monotonous so long in vogue, proving at least that there is no such thing as an anchorage for fashion. The illustrations with which the pages of this magazine abound are fairly descriptive of themselves; the explanations accompanying cuts, however, will this month render it easy work for the holiday enthusiast to gain ideas from Domestic Art, as well as from Gloves and Lingerie. Mary Ainge de Vere begins in this number a serial entitled "Was She Jealous?" It is in that author's best vein, strong, fanciful, and provocative of curiosity. Turbans, we believe, have not gone out yet, and the pretty Oriental legend, by A. Von Lehman, of their invention will be found very entertaining to all readers. Mrs. Merighi's Art Paper, A Sketch by Eben E. Rexford, Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher's invaluable Household Department, several poems, and discriminating notices of new books make up the balance of a most acceptable number. The publishers have made arrangements to give a fine large steel engraving of Millais, celebrated painting, "Yes, or No?" with the Domestic Monthly for the ensuing year. The January number will contain the announcement in detail. The Domestic Monthly is published by Blake & Company, corner Broadway and Fourteenth Street, New York, at $1.50 per year, inclusive of pattern premium. Specimen copies 15 cents.
