How Can I ! ! !

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I prevent the sharp points of feathers or pine needles from working through the covers of cushions or pillows?

A. This can be prevented, when filling cushions or pillows, if the wrong side of the material is rubbed thoroughly with beeswax.

Q. How can I eliminate moths which have gotten into a rug?

A. Cover with a wet towel. Apply a hot iron until the towel is dry. This kills the moths and the eggs. Then sprinkle with salt every week before sweeping.

Q. How can I economize on sugar when stewing rhubarb?

A. A pinch of soda added to rhubarb when nearly done will neutralize the acid so that very little sugar is needed.

have come here and used the typewriter. They all know about the gun club."

"But who?"

For a moment he said nothing, studying this girl, his eyes meeting hers, searching them. He had seen a lot of people in his day who were pretty clever at deception; people who had fooled more expert minds than his. Looking at pretty Kay Smith now, weighing every angle, he made his decision.

She was innocent.

No matter how much she had hated her father for what he was he knew that she had not killed him. It was because of this sudden decision, and which made him feel so much better because he had reached it — he found himself deeply moved by the clear thinking of this girl who was so much a woman—that he decided to take her into his confidence.

He said, "I can tell you this much. And in revealing it to you I'm placing you closer to danger. If the murderer knows that we were both here this morning, then he or she is also going to realize that we're a step nearer to him!"

Kay's green eyes were sharp. "What is it?"

"The night your father was killed, he was here at the gun club. He was here because his car was here. It might have been before or after he went out with your mother that night. Which means she possibly did or did not know who killed him, and will be able to tell us that fact when she regains normalcy."

"But who," Kay repeated. "And how do you know these things?"

"At this moment,' Johnny said thoughtfully, "I can't tell you who. Frankly, I don't know. Yet I can tell you how I know."

Then he explained about visiting the field alongside Route 26-A, and of Ed, the garage man's, offer to drive him up here to the gun club.

She interjected, "I was talking to Ralph Dunkirk on the phone this morning, Johnny. He said something about the mechanic picking you up. I guess Ralph knew about it."

"Ed probably told him . . . Well, think back over the last month for a moment. There's been no rain. None at all. Everything has been almost baked to a crisp because of the drought. Isn't that right?"

"Yes, but I don't see—" ported by four twisted columns of bronze.

A monument of interest was "The Chair of St. Peter", in bronze composed of a throne surrounded by angels and containing a wooden chair said to have been used by St. Peter.

I might mention that there are no paintings of any kind in this church but the mosaic work is of such perfection that each work has the appearance of a solid painting.

The remains of another famous structure in Rome is "The Baths of Caracalla." This building was divided into three sections and provided either cold, warm or hot baths. Part of the heating system still remains—the hot-air pipes and a portion of the furnace. Past the Baths is the Appian Road, the most important of the old Roman roads. This road was composed of four layers, the upper one being of basalt. There are tombs along either side, as the Romans were not allowed to bury their dead within the city, and also sidewalks.

The Appian Road leads to the Catacombs of St. Calixtus, which unfortunately we didn't manage to see. It is apparently a huge underground cemetery used by the Christians, made up of several tombs to accommodate entire families, and adorned with ancient inscriptions.

We found our desire for sightseeing curtailed by the terrific heat and left without seeing nearly all of its old treasures. We both found, however, that the further we travelled the further we want to go—the thought in the back of our minds being it would likely be our first and last trip. We had hoped to see Naples but found that both our time and money were running short. In Europe, although the countries are so small, there is a decided difference in each country—customs, manners, living accommodation, etc. It is the realization that only a few hour's travel will take one to another country entirely different that creates the urge to proceed further.

Cook's Corner

SUMMER SHERBET

(12 servings)

2 cups sugar, 2 cups water, 1 cup orange juice, 6 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 medium bananas, mashed, 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten.

Bring water and sugar to boiling point; simmer for 10 minutes. Cool and add fruit juices. Place in refrigerator tray and freeze. Remove from tray and beat well. Fold in bananas and egg whites and return to refrigerator. Freeze until mushy. Stir in tray and freeze until firm.

STRAWBERRY TEA CAKES

One-half cup shortening, preferably part butter, ½ cup sugar, 2 eggs, 3 tablespoons strawberry jam, 1¼ cups sifted pastry flour, or 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour, ¼ teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Cream shortening until fluffy, add sugar gradually and cream well together. Add well-beaten eggs and jam and beat thoroughly until light and creamy. Mix and sift together the flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt and gradually add to the creamed mixture, blending thoroughly. Fill greased muffin tins 2/3 full and bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F., for 20 minutes or until done. Yield: 18 medium cakes.

HISTORIC BIBLES

GUELPH, Ont. — (CP) — Two Bibles published almost 400 years apart were among a display brought here by the Upper Canada Bible Society. A Matthew's Bible printed in 1549 is the oldest one shown by the society, while one published in 1941 was written in basic English by Oxford scholars employing a vocabulary of only 1,000 words.

ship, the soothed feelings, and the resultant harmony worth the effort?

So don't stand on ceremony, Wilma. Put your pride in your pocket, admit your fault in creating the separation and make a new beginning.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have the most wonderful girl in the world. She is thoughtful, lovable, and has stood by me in everything. I love her dearly and I know she loves me. She is everything a guy could ask for in his future wife, except for one thing—her feelings are very easily hurt. If I start to tease her she will twist my words around so that their meaning is entirely different. Then she starts to cry, and the crying is what gets me. I wouldn't hurt her for anything in the world, but what can I do to cure this habit of hers? It angers me and at the same time makes me feel sorry for her. As a result she always gets her own way. Is this just one of a woman's natural habits or is she just spoiled?

PAUL

ANSWER: You hit the nail on the head, Paul—she is just spoiled! You are unusually susceptible to a woman's tears and it didn't take your girl friend long to find it out. Crying is surely the easiest way to get what you want—when it works, as it seems to with you—and the technique has been developed to perfection in this case.

So let's face it! You have two courses open. You marry the girl and spend the rest of your life in this lachrymose atmosphere, giving in to her on every possible count to avoid the teary consequences, or have a showdown right now. I strongly advise the latter course, even though it will loose a veritable Johnstown flood of tears.

Marriage is for adults, and there can be no truly happy marriages except between adults. Cry-babies and thin-skinned lassies are not adult and will not bring to matrimony the sense of responsibility it needs. Think twice, Paul, before you embark on the stormy sea of matrimony with a mate who has nothing to contribute but salty tears.

DEAR MISS DIX: Do you think it harmful to a girl's reputation if she accepts blind dates?

ANNA

ANSWER: Going out with a totally strange boy who isn't known to anyone in your social group is harmful to any girl's reputation. If you have a particular boy in mind, there is always some way of meeting him through a mutual friend, or even through a school or church group. Don't court trouble by picking up strange boys for dates!

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.

That Body Of Yours

"When, in the course of trying to take care of himself and get along, an individual needs to evolve a fake picture of what he really believes, wants, needs, feels and thinks, he inevitably loses sight of and turns against his own urges for self-expression, self-assertion and self-development, in a natural and spontaneous way. In dealing with himself and in any impact of people in daily living or on a larger scale, he experiences tension much more frequently than the individual who is capable of greater honesty and reality about himself."

The individual who is not honest with himself (or herself) fulfills the expression, "Pride goeth before a fall." Dr. Van Bark points out that when people fail to recognize him for what he wants them to think he is, he becomes filled with tension, gets the gnawing, hunger-like pain from feelings of anxiety, frustration, resentment, varied fears, suspicion, revenge, rage, guilt feelings. Tension is also caused by hurt pride, inner conflicts, envy, feelings of weakness and helplessness.

A great deal of tension is generated when the individual attempts to be himself and has to struggle against the forces of the false self."

To prevent these gnawing sensations, a feeling of emptiness in the stomach like hunger, in fact that ever present tenseness in so many of us, we should try to be honest with ourselves which would keep us more relaxed and be at our best for our work because we are then our true or natural selves.

• Easy-to-use packaged puddings are very special when made with Carnation Evaporated Milk. So much smoother, richer flavored.

1 package pudding powder
1½ cups Carnation Evaporated Milk, diluted with ½ cup water

Follow package directions, substituting diluted Carnation for ordinary milk. Use undiluted Carnation remaining from one tall can of Carnation (about ⅓ cup) for whipped topping. Chill the Carnation until icy cold; stir in two teaspoons (each) lemon juice, and sugar. Whip as for whipping cream.

MILK THAT GIVES RESULTS LIKE CREAM!

IT'S TRUE — Carnation is whole milk concentrated to double-richness and homogenized to creamy-smoothness.

USE IT LIKE CREAM — in coffee, on cereals, in most recipes that call for cream. Water (and nothing else!) is removed, so undiluted Carnation has the consistency of good rich cream! Costs less than half as much!

FOR ALL MILK PURPOSES — Dilute Carnation with an equal amount of water, to give homogenized, vitamin D increased, whole milk, with all of whole milk's food values.
