This is the recipe for the rolls of your yesterday's baking: 1/2 c. shortening, 1/2 c. sugar, 2 c. boiling water. Pour water over the shortening and sugar. Let cool. Put in a little flour. Drop in an egg and 1/2 tsp. salt, then add the yeast cake which has been softened in water and enough flour to knead. . . . James voted them "Good!"

Woman's Is The Stronger And More Durable Sex!

Ruhamah S. Frank

Among the amazing changes in this century is the over-thrown of the position of the male sex as the stronger sex. Oh, the man is still the taller and can flex his muscles to a more spectacular degree (thank goodness!) than the woman, but just the same it is the woman who resists many diseases to which man falls prey — and it is the woman who outlives the man!

In susceptibility to most diseases and defects, his is the inferior sex. "Of course, men have it so much harder than women in this hectic age." But the author reports at study that disproves this theory. Two recognized authorities in the field, Father Francis C. Madigan, a Jesuit priest, and Professor Rupert B. Vance of the University of California compiled data on the comparative length of life of nearly 30,000 Catholic sisters and more than 10,000 brothers. These were chosen for study because the way of life of the men and women was so similar. "All the (w.e.) white, native born (in the U.S.), unadvised, doing very active. Guests at the reception included Mrs. Lester Ledwich, Mrs. Arthur Godkin Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boisner and members of the family and grandchildren. A most unusual and pleasing event in connection with the anniversary was the christening of the fifteenth grandchild, Jo-Anne Clare Duncan, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Duncan, at the Trinity United Church in the presence of her grandparents and immediate members of the family, by Rev. A. Frank MacLean. Photo by Barter's Studio.

the same work (teaching), living under the same conditions, partaking of the same diet and medical care, all abstaining from drinking and smoking or all equally free from financial or family worries. Yet the investigators found that the nuns outlive the brothers by a wide margin. At the age of 45 the sisters have an average remaining life expectancy of nearly 34 more years; the brothers only a little over 28 years — a difference of five and one-half years in favor of the women."

nationalist and trade union movements. In 1939 he became a Labor Party candidate in the election in Holland, but the Second World War broke out before the election was held. Dr. Palar became a leader in the underground anti-Nazi resistance. After the liberation in 1945, he was appointed to Parliament under a special provision to fill vacant seats with former underground participants. At this period he worked to bring about a peaceful solution to Dutch-Indonesian problems. When war broke out in 1947, he resigned his seat, and in the Indonesian government sent him as their spokesman before the United Nations General Council. Dr. Palar became the chief Indonesian delegate to United Nations, and in 1950, when his country became a member, he was named permanent representative of Indonesia to the UN and chairman of the Indonesian delegation with the rank of Ambassador. From 1953 to 1956, Dr. Palar was Indonesian Ambassador to India. He is married and has three children.

MARY HAWORTH Girl's Admirer Is Complainer

Dear Mary Haworth: How to guide a daughter, not quite 16, ings for him, but I do know that about going steady? The boy, her age, seems to be getting too serious; or rather say, Thelma confided to me last night that they had a big discussion and he admits being much in love with her. I haven't asked about her feelings, she is very flattered to have a boy's confession of love. This is her first steady boy friend, and for six months they've been together almost daily, at school and elsewhere, and are constantly on the telephone.

Thelma is usually very reasonable; and an honor student, though not brilliant. I seem to have her respect and confidence. The boy, I'll call him George, seems very insecure and immature. He comes of a broken home; the father was alcoholic; and the mother supports the two of them. George doesn't have any spare time jobs—and I don't know what efforts, if any, he has made along this line.

IS A COMPLAINER He is constantly charging Thelma with supposedly disloyal behavior, and with hurting his feelings. I would like to know his best to steer her through this experience; also through later ones. And would like to see the boy too get through this without emotional harm. As for help from my husband, his only comment would be probably that Thelma has no business dating anyone.

Thelma is the eldest of our four children, whom I've reared in close association with the church, but with little cooperation from my husband, other than financial. None of the children has ever given us serious trouble. I love them all dearly and express my love to them, as they don't get much affection from their father. He is particularly critical of Thelma, and always has been. Thank you for any help you can give me in helping her to mature, without endangering any of her potentialities. V.Y. Dear V.Y.: I should say that Thelma needs a certain amount of psychological instruction, to get on the right track with boys, as sweethearts and friends. It is unfortunate that her father is emphatically critical of her and always has been, because this essentially unfriendly attitude conditions her, unconsciously, to expect (and to tolerate) second or third rate treatment from key men in her life. Psychologists tell us that a girl's emotional history, as regards the success or failure of her "love life," is largely predetermined by the quality of her "love life," is largely predetermined by the quality of her childhood relationship to her father. If he is a loving kind protective person in her life, who nourishes her self-esteem, and gives her a sense of importance to dad, she will confidently attract comparable treatment from good men like him—similarly devoted and appreciative—in later years. But, if on the contrary, dad has been a blighting influence, churlish, indifferent or nagging, singling out the girl for special disparagement in the family circle, she is marked for troubles ahead in the field of romance. Her affinities will be poor bargains. She will gravitate to the fellow whose downbeat persona echoes her father's in relation to her—because, unconsciously, she will have a mysterious sense of "at-homeness" with him.

FOR ADOLESCENTS Also of course she would feel that she can afford to discriminate; to pick and choose. Instead she will tend to be warmly grateful for admiring interest even from a plainly faulty or inferior source—as seems to be the case of Thelma, with George. Now, to answer the question of how to help Thelma get safely through the rapids of adolescence and mature without damage to her fine potentials—my advice is: Make her a present of Evelyn Duval's fine book "Facts of Life and Love for Teen-Agers." Dr. Duval is a consultant with the National Council of Family Relations, and her book is published by the YMCA's Association Press in New York City. She handles her subject with wisdom, clarity and charm. M.H.
