

thoughtful men among us exclaim against what they call the morbid humanity of those who treat offenders with a foolish and a dangerous lenity. Nature, say they, affords us a most instructive analogy as to the infliction of punishment. The offender against her laws is sure to suffer a punishment proportioned to the magnitude of the offence. She vindicates the majesty of her laws by protracted tortures and painful, lingering deaths. The violators of these cannot possibly escape deserved chastisement. Repentance avails them nothing, and reform honestly and faithfully carried out, but mitigates their sufferings. She possesses, and what is more uses daily, instruments of torture more cruel and more deadly than man in the most savage ages has ever invented. Aches and pains, gout, rheumatism, fevers, ague, leprosy, sores, delirium, hypochondria, madness—these are the punishments, some of them worse than death, that outraged nature inflicts on those who break her laws. Yet no one dare call nature cruel. The severity which she uses is a just, a necessary, and a merciful severity. Equally just, necessary and merciful, the defenders of capital punishment contend, is the severity which ordains that whose sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed. If, however, it can be proved that the abolition of capital punishment results in diminishing crime instead of increasing it, then the arguments in its favor lose all their force, for it must always be remembered that revenge is not an element of judicial punishment. What society looks to in punishing offenders is its own preservation and the reformation of the offender. Preservation first, and then, if possible, reformation, but never retaliation. Capital punishment from its very nature, precludes the possibility of the accomplishment of the latter of these two aims; and if it can be shown that the former can be secured without having recourse to it, then there does not remain a single argument in favor of its perpetuation. The question, then, narrows itself down to this: Can society afford to do without the death penalty? Many wise, humane, and thoughtful men answer emphatically yes. Many other equally wise, humane, and thoughtful, answer quite as emphatically, though sorrowfully, no.

In the United States, where most of the great political and social problems of the day are in the process of being solved, the experiment of the abolition of capital punishment is being tried, and, it is said, so far with the best effects. The death penalty has been abolished in Maine, Michigan, Rhode Island and Minnesota. Violent crimes, we have the authority of the New York Tribune for stating, have been less frequent in those States since than before its abolition. From what we have read on the subject, we gather that hanging is like flogging: the more you do of it, the more you must do. The frequency of its infliction lessens its terrors. It has a hardening and a brutalizing effect on those whom it is destined to terrify. Writing of the death penalty, Horace Greeley's utterance is—"Let it follow after the stake, the rack, the wheel; after the chain gang, the slave pen, the auction block; after the burning orgies and tortures of the American savage; and let our children read of it with a shudder as one of the ghastly, grovelling horrors which went out with slavery."

The annual general meeting of the Shareholders of the Summerside Bank, was held at their Banking house on Tuesday last. There was a large gathering, and a good deal of excitement manifested. At the opening of the meeting, the President, the Hon. J. R. Gardiner, requested the stock holders not to vote for him, as he wished to resign from any further duties connected with the Bank.

We have received a small pamphlet, the annual announcement of the faculty of Medicine, at Dalhousie College, N. S. This Faculty has been organized and affiliated to the University for the special purpose of affording instruction in the Primary Branches of Medical Science, so as to enable Students to become thoroughly prepared to carry out their studies and complete the medical curriculum elsewhere. The number of Students in attendance last session was 14, one of them from P. E. Island—Ewen Cameron, of New Ann's. The second session of this Faculty will be opened on Monday, 3rd May next.

The Concert in aid of the Convict, came off as advertised in Central Hall, on Monday night last. The Hall was nicely decorated and well lighted. Every seat was filled, and a number of persons were unable to obtain seats. On the platform were over forty of the scholars of the Convict. Some of the very little ones took part in the performance, and well did they act it. The more advanced scholars took the principal part. The plays were very good and well carried through. The music and singing, considering the short time they had had to practice was very good. A great deal of credit is due to the teachers. We learn that the net proceeds was £18. 14s. 3d.

Gooley's Lady's Book for February is a splendid number. Send for one and judge for yourselves.
We have received a note from Mr. Richard Wickett, informing us that the notice of his marriage that appeared in our paper on the 14th ult., was not true, no such marriage having taken place. The notice was handed to us in our office, and we will have no difficulty in recognizing the man who did it. In a few days we trust the mean, low, miserable contemptible wretch will be made to suffer for perpetrating such a slander. In order to avoid mistakes in future, we will only publish such marriages, from manuscript, as may be furnished us direct from the minister performing the marriage, with his signature attached.
The Presbytery of P. E. Island met in Queen Square Church, Charlottetown, on the 27th ult. The Rev. A. Falconer placed in the hands of the Presbytery the decision of his charge, based upon his belief that a union of the congregations in Charlottetown, is desirable, and that his demission might facilitate such a union, a Committee was appointed to confer with both congregations, to ascertain whether a union could be effected. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday the 24th inst., in the same place.

The Patriot says that the Revenue for the financial year ending 30th January, is about £80,000.

The correspondence between the Government of this Island and the Congressional Committee, on the subject of Reciprocity, is pamphlet form, together with several sheets of statistics, have been received from the office of the Queen's Printer. Whether they are worth the cost of printing or not, is a question.

PRESENTATION.—The ladies of the Campbellton section of the West Point congregation, have lately presented their Pastor, the Rev. W. Stuart, with a handsome suit of winter apparel. This is but one of many similar tokens of the kindly interest in his well and talents, displayed by this, as well as by the other sections of the congregation, &c. A Tu, Lin, Sleigh, a warm plaid, and other useful gifts, bestowed at various intervals—besides much valuable assistance rendered in the erection of the Mans, and the cultivation of the adjoining glebe.—Pat.

SAD ACCIDENT.—On Friday, Jan. 22d, Mr. David Thompson, of Tryon, while attending a threshing mill, in some way unknown getting his hand entangled in the teeth of the threshing, was drawn into it so that his arm was deliberately crushed to pieces up to the shoulder. Amputation being impracticable, after lingering for twenty-three hours, during which time he maintained the full use of his mental faculties, death ensued. His last moments were cheered by the consistent hope of a blissful immortality. His loss is deeply felt in the community, especially in the Church, of which he was a consistent member and an efficient elder. His remains were followed to their resting place on Monday last, in the burial ground of the Presbyterian Church, Tryon, by a large and respectable concourse of people of all denominations.—Com to Pat.
