Mr. Fisher's Advice

Douglas Fisher, the able former NDP member for Port Arthur, is no longer in the political arena but his comments from the sidelines continue to make lively reading.

Among other things he tells us that one can likely determine whether a new candidate has remarkable possibilities or not by noting how much use he makes of the reigning party platitudes and the clichés of the period.

Again, says Mr. Fisher, if you have a chance to put a question to a candidate, do not give him one that will enable him to express an opinion: make it a question that will require exposition.

Perhaps it was this kind of question that elicited from Health Minister Judy LaMarsh the other day her assurance that benefits under the Canada Pension Plan would be apportioned "according to needs based on the cost of living in areas in which a pensioner lives."

We shall resist, for the present, the temptation of going further into the implications of this extraordinary statement. But think of old age pensions, family allowances and other payments under federal welfare schemes to which the same line of reasoning would apply, and then marvel at the source from which it came.

Not from a green backbencher but a senior member of the Pearson government, mark you, speaking in her ministerial capacity, on a subject of future Liberal policy! Let's leave it at that for now, with a "thank you" to Mr. Fisher for having pinpointed, in his comments, the right kind of question to ask party candidates in this contest.

Behind The Scenes

Modern world diplomacy has developed some strange ground rules. Take the United States and Communist China, for example, which do not extend each other diplomatic recognition but which, in spite of growing recriminations, continue to hold periodic meetings in Warsaw.

This is the 11th year of these meetings, of which 129 have been held. From 1954 to 1958 they took place in Geneva. Since then they have been in a hunting lodge in a beautiful Warsaw park.

in the interests of keeping the talks going.

The American ambassador and Wang Cou Chuan, Chinese ambassador to Poland, attend sessions with three aides each. They never shake hands. They sit at huge wooden desks several feet apart.

That there is occasionally controversy and anger is known because the ambassadors have exited to their waiting limousines in uncelebrated rage. Twice in recent meetings the American ambassador, John Cabot, has warned the Chinese of American retaliation if they became open aggressors—the first time telling them not to enter North Vietnam and the other day not to invade India.

Despite the hole-in-corner way in which they are held, the sessions are regarded as of great importance. An American diplomat in Warsaw told the London Observer correspondent recently: "In times of crisis you keep talking whatever happens—and this is a crisis."

Warsaw today is thus a vital centre in the east-west colloquy, though we confess we hadn't thought of it in that way before.

Federal Responsibility

It is unfortunate that the current controversy over the bankruptcy racket in Quebec should come in the midst of an election campaign. It is a matter which calls for dispassionate treatment, and that is what it cannot get on the hustings.

Justice Minister Cardin has stated that major changes in the act, to plug existing loopholes, would be undertaken next year. But as the Toronto Telegram points out, the government that is elected on Nov. 8—whether Liberal or Conservative—need not wait until 1966 to deal with this serious problem.

Fraudulent bankruptcies in Quebec have already resulted in losses of over $100 million, arson and lime-pit murders. Four bodies, believed to be key witnesses in bankruptcy cases, have already been uncovered.

Hundreds of people have suffered losses in the bankrupt companies controlled by one organization alone, nor are the victims confined to Quebec province. Why, then, should the report of the trustee to the superintendent of bankruptcy at Ottawa be regarded as a confidential document—not available even to Parliament or demand?

The existing law is totally unsatisfactory here, and there is need also for some system of policing the legislation after it has been thoroughly revamped. The Toronto paper suggests, among other things, the establishment of an RCMP bankruptcy division which could operate in the same manner as that of the RCMP narcotics branch; also that some legal aid be made available to the victims of bankruptcy rackets who cannot afford to launch prosecution on their own.

Successive governments have sidetracked this important matter for too long. Further unnecessary delay would only put a premium on more crime. There is need for prompt action and our party leaders should be speaking with united voice to this effect.

EDITORIAL NOTE

Two Harvard scientists find that some newspapers and magazines in the United States are printed on paper containing a hormonal chemical compound inhibitory to the population growth of certain insects. Specifically named are the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, the Boston Globe and the magazine Science.
