ELLEN'S DIARY

"Ellen, You Never Had A Trouble In Your Life"

"The sun!" we said this morning, pleased, grateful to have his smile at the windows and brightness patterning the place. So blithe then became the world about, we fancied there was even a new lift and happiness in the sparrows' wings that took them on feathered mission along the yards.

Such was our day — all blue and gold, and shining, with clear sunshine and a friendly wind of March along the hills.

Until tomorrow — — Diary — Goodnight. . . .

MARY HAWORTH

You Lack An Incentive

Dear Mary Haworth: I was reading the letter from the population expert in your column to-night as I prepared to sip my lonely cocktail and eat my dinner on the coffee table, alone.

Having lived in 23 countries of the world so she said, this expert was telling where marriageable men are hidden away. Before I reached the eighth paragraph of her travelogue, I was mentally on an airplane to one of the garden spots mentioned.

"Then I came to this statement: 'I am no beauty, but on a street in Tripoli, Libya, I was cheered wildly by a busful of Englishmen—who hadn't seen a white woman for two years. . . . C-e-ash went my confidence in your expert."

The United States has maintained a large air base at Tripoli since the last war, and unless I am very mistaken, it still exists; and is populated with nurses, WAFs (probably) and wives of men stationed there, who add a touch of "white" civilization to this very charming civilized city.

Another cup of tea?" we asked James at breakfast, old alumina pot with like humans, has its faults and endearments, poised above the cup.

"I think not, Ellen," he replied. "I guess I'd better get back to the chores. Mondays such a busy day. There won't be much of it left," he said rising and reaching for his cap "by the time we get everything straightened away."

A last date lifted from a load of straw to a stable gave the farmers a nice respite in the sunset and took this household to supper with the folks in the house across the lane.

"It's nobody's birthday" Mack commented.

"And were dining on chicken Granddaughter offered.

"I'm to have the wishbone" Mack remembered, with a teasing grin.

"And after it" she continued "ice cream and cake."

So roast chicken and dressing with an accompaniment of vegetables and relishes — and afterward the ice cream and cake we ate there in the house across the lane, with the children so pleased and happy, the sunset lighting an evening — flame on a wall.

But earlier, when the March wind obligingly lowered a snug and fluffy white cloud to the very edge of the blue above the hilltop for our convenience we came aboard the magic conveyance and set out to make some calls. How gently it moved away, leaving Alderlea . . . houses, barns caught against a rise behind. There sat the mill in the valley below — there dark between white banks, flowed the millstream. How altogether beautiful in the sunlight lay the now wide extent of the countryside below. . . fields white green velvet of woodlands, pictured farmsteads.

Our calls? One especially. . . and indeed others where shutins be they who must find the days tedious, confined indoors as they are. We invariably came away smiling, inspired by their amazing patience and good cheer. The ill, too, we visited, and those miserable in body and spirit. . . the farmwife bettering now, who wrote not long ago, "Ellen you never had a trouble in your life" to tell her that she was forgetting that everyone, all up and down the earth, has his or her own concerns smaller and larger to meet.

We stopped at, oh so many doors Island-wide. Lastly in a village where in summer a white church is embowered in leafy green, only its spire towering above. We laughed there with the man who had written us some time back, "Job was patient, James is meek!"

HOUSEHOLD HINT

To make a basement room really cozy try using carpeting on the floor. Nothing takes a way the "basement atmosphere" faster.

MEN ELUD EHER

Also, Tripoli is still an Italian outpost, and many attractive Italian women live there. The base also employs American women civilians, usually single and datable. And Rome is a stone's throw by air from Tripoli. In September, 1956, the biggest problem of a friend of mine was whether to ship her hi-fi set to Tripoli, when she went to join her air force husband there.

As I pause to sip my lonely cocktail I recall my three years in Germany, 1949-1951, and the ball I had. There were plenty of men, available as companions—but mostly impoverished, in need of hair cuts, and only interested in making an advantageous American marriage. I'll admit that the choice in men is certainly wider abroad than here in New York—but your correspondent evidently did not make a choice. She sounds single.

As for me, a Manhattan career girl, my only two opportunities for a date this past year were: 1. A married man whose wife I had just met. 2. A very attractive traffic officer who probably is married too—as he is around 30, handsome and very bright. But we shall see.

LACKS INCENTIVE

I love reading articles about meeting men, but have yet to encounter a practical solution. The stock suggestion, to join a church club, is just peachy, if you want to meet cool wives and eager husbands—that is, if you're 35, as I am.

For lady late endings for 30-ish ladies, watch TV or study the women's magazines.

P.S.: Please excuse my scratch pad stationary. I have no male correspondents to stimulate me into a better showing. My compliments to your usually

Mountain Peak Near Banff Is Named For Dr. Bowlen

A 10,048-foot mountain in Banff National Park has been named after Hon. Dr. J. J. Bowlen, lieutenant-governor of Alberta.

Premier Manning announced in the Legislature Thursday that the name was approved by the Canadian Board of Geographic Names at the request of the Geographic Board of Alberta.

Mount Bowlen is peak No. 3 of the Kenikenna Range and can be seen clearly from Moraine Lakes in the Valley of the Ten Peaks, a popular tourist stop near Lake Louise in Banff Park.

Premier Manning said Dr. Bowlen has been honored "as a result of a lifetime of service, both provincially and nationally."

J. Harper Prowse, Liberal Opposition leader, said: "I'm glad it's a big mountain, because the way the lieutenant-governor has conducted himself in office has shown the biggest mountain there is wouldn't be able to do justice to him."

J. Percy Page, House leader of the Conservatives, and Stanley Ruzicki, CCF house leader, also paid tribute to Dr. Bowlen.

A pioneer rancher, farmer and sheepman, Dr. Bowlen served in the Alberta Legislature as Liberal member for Calgary from 1931 through 1944, and was Opposition leader for two years. He was appointed lieutenant-governor in 1950 and reappointed in 1955.

MARY ALIDA BASHA WILLIAM JOSEPH FORAN TO WED IN APRIL

Miss Mary Alida Basha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Basha of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Mr. William Joseph Foran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Foran of Dalhousie, N.B., whose marriage is to take place in St. Dunstan's Basilica, Charlottetown P.E.I. on April 8th, after their honeymoon they will take up residence in Montreal.

good column. Sincerely, N.L.

Dear N.L.: Maybe this self-styled population expert is a fake, whom you (and other critics) have caught off base, dreaming a day dream of a high moment in Tripoli.

But on the other hand, it is possible that she was describing a fact, in saying that she was cheered wildly on a street in Tripoli, by a busful of Englishmen who hadn't seen a white woman for two years prior to glimpsing her.

Maybe the bus was just getting into town from the hinterlands—from a work project in a section of the continent populated chiefly by jungle people. Somehow that was the impression I got. Why else would the bus be loaded with men only? And with Englishmen only if it weren't an aspect of a special mission? And doesn't the raffish cheering suggest the exuberant spirit of men in transit from a lonely assignment, to the refreshments of civilized society? It sounds as if they might be just arriving from a far place. M.H. ON LOOKOUT TOO

Dear Mary Haworth: Living in a Washington D.C. household of five women, my friends and I read with much interest E.A.'s letter, telling where bachelors abound in other lands. We feel as she does, that American men are being spoiled by lonely worshipping women. Accepting the challenge of her letter, to travel, we would like to get in touch with her, for further information on the whole subject. S. Y.

Dear S.Y.: Sorry, but this column doesn't function as a get-acquainted medium, however, if E.A. has something to add, I'll publish it here, if it qualifies. M.H.

Eggs Benedict Are Used At Brunch On Birthday

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

"We are giving a brunch party on my husband's birthday. He has asked me to prepare Eggs Benedict, but they seem a lot of work. Every time I make the Hollandaise sauce used to top them, it curdles. What would you suggest?"

The chef was reading a letter from one of our readers.

"The young wife who wrote this letter should certainly please her husband," he remarked.

THREE PARTS

"Eggs Benedict consists of three parts, which can easily be prepared a little in advance, ready to put together.

"These are toasted English muffins, broiled tenderized or canned ham and poached eggs spread with Hollandaise sauce and garnished.

"First let's give the general recipe, Chef," I said, "and then discuss the Hollandaise."

Eggs Benedict: Slice the contents of 1 (1 lb.) can ham in 1/4 in. pieces. Broil on one side only.

Split and toast 6 English muffins.

Poach 6 eggs. They will keep hot in the poaching water.

Have Hollandaise sauce ready or use heated canned Hollandaise.

To Put Together: Lightly spread the toasted muffin halves with butter. Top half of them with the broiled ham, then with the poached eggs. Spread neatly with the hot Hollandaise sauce.

Garnish each egg with a slice of olive, black mushroom or dot of pimiento. Arrange on a platter.

Around them arrange the remaining English muffin halves, buttered, covered lightly with grated cheese and grilled.

Serves six.

There are three ways to make Hollandaise sauce.

The first way is the classic recipe, thickened only with eggs when the mixing is done in a double boiler.

The second type, already previously given in this column, contains a little flour to prevent separating. This is good to use when the sauce must stand.

The third method uses an electric blender.

Hollandaise sauce can also be brought ready-made in jars.

Here is the easy blender method.

Hollandaise Sauce, Blender Method: In the glass container of an electric blender, combine 4 egg yolks, 2 tbsp. lemon juice, tsp. salt, 2 drops Tabasco and 1/2 c. (1 stick) of room-soft butter. Cover the container and turn on the blender.

Gradually, while the blender is running, pour in 7 tbsp. boiling water. Blend 1 min.

Pour into a double boiler. Cook-stir constantly over boiling water about 3 min. or until thick enough to coat the spoon.

Remove at once from the lower part of the double boiler. Makes 1 1/4 cups.

Tomorrow's dinner — French onion soup, eggs benedict, French fries, green beans, Spanish lettuce avocado salad, Elberta peaches, crisp cookies.

SUGGESTION OF THE CHEF

Add a little lemon juice to a can of Elberta peaches to offset the too-sweet flavor. Then chill before serving.

Or leave "as is," fill the centres with half-thawed frozen strawberries and top with unsweetened whipped cream.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT A. FLYNN

Cousin Of The Bride Officiates At Wedding

Divinity Hall Chapel, McGill University, Montreal, was the scene of a pretty winter wedding on February 1st, when Barbara Ruth, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John England, West Royal, Prince Edward Island, became the bride of Robert Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Flynn of New Westminster, British Columbia.
