

Household Manners.

By household manners we do not mean company manners. Indeed we think that a set of manners kept up for company, is apt to grow stiff and rusty for want of use...

I have seen heads of families—ladies as well as gentlemen—who when among strangers never forgot any of the little attentions that make life pleasant, who omitted to say "good morning" to everybody members of the family...

In English families of good breeding each member, as he enters the breakfast-room, gives his hand to each of the others in turn, as he says "good morning."

There is a pleasant friendliness in this custom, when it comes naturally, that gives the beginning of the day a great charm.

Household manners which do not include courtesy, even to the lowest dependents of the household, are perfect manners. It is as easy to give some kindly greeting to the servants as to ignore them altogether...

The princeliest courtesy we have seen exercised, extended to every one—even the lowest members of the household.

Some one once asked a friend of Mr. Emerson if the great philosopher was a man of fine manners. "Yes, indeed," was the answer. "Whenever he enters a house he makes even the cats and dogs feel more at their ease."

Could anything be more suggestive than this description of the genial kindness of a nature which shed its sunlight on every one? And was not the faculty of making each one feel at his ease the best of manners?

There is a tendency to underrate amiability—to consider it a mark of weakness. "A rather weak, amiable person," we sometimes hear said. But no equality softens the roughness of life so much.

A sweet-tempered person is almost sure to have good household manners. Consideration of the feelings, as well as the rights of others, a nature kindly disposed and not irritated—these are essentials to good manners in the household.

Polish of manner is gained by a little contact with the world, a little noting of its customs. But there are so many persons who have what are called "fine manners," who in their own households are so ungracious and so regardless of those who are most closely allied to them in life, that we are disposed to regret their manners only as this veneering, which covers very poor stuff—not the real thing, only a base and cheap imitation—which brings us to the trite saying that a fine character is the foundation of fine manners, and that really good manners will begin at home.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Bosche's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 50,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Samples bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites is prescribed by the medical profession because it is not a secret remedy, but a scientifically prepared preparation of two most valuable specifics, that they find of unequalled value for their consumptive and emaciated patients. Take no other.
