Garment Manufacturer Finds Outlet In U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP)—A garment manufacturer who has grabbed $1,000,000 worth of business in the highly-competitive United States market says "economic schizophrenia" is hampering Canadian exports.

Maurice Goldstone, president of Pride O'Glen Knitting Mills Ltd. of England, says his company's Canadian subsidiary here captured a share of the American market on its own.

But, he said in an interview, with a little real help from the federal government Canadian manufacturers could capture a share of almost any market.

"Red tape is one of our troubles. We pay duty on imported raw materials."

Some of the duty was refunded if the finished product was exported, "but small companies can't afford to have their capital tied up in duty, without interest."

WANT PROTECTION

"We are told to get out and sell and at the same time our industries want protection. Mostly they hide behind the protection and put their prices up to just a shade under the import price."

Mr. Goldstone said Pride O'Glen is the only Canadian company in the clothing trade with its own office in New York.

"Despite the fact that our costs are high, we have made our way in the American market by being creative and by working. The designs of our fabrics and the styling of our garments have given us the customers."

Mrs. Beverly McGavin, company sales promotion manager, said Pride O'Glen entered the New York market on the basis of a sole order.

"We made a four-week trip to New York and got one order. That was from a department store on Fifth Avenue." The store ran an advertisement with a picture of a Pride O'Glen suit.
